Cities Favor Program

Times News Services

Municipal leaders today are enthusiastic about the new economic incentives offered by Ottawa but financial officials expressed fears the $1 billion program may spur inflation.

And Premier Bennett said he will turn B.C's share of the $100 million over to the municipalities for job-creating projects.

He said the program is a good idea and noted that B.C. has advocated a renewed winter works program for several months.

Bennett would not say whether the $1 billion program would show a reduction in B.C.'s unemployment rate by next spring. He also refused to say whether he thought the planned $1 billion federal budget deficit would lead to a new round of inflation.

AMAZED

He said he was amazed that Finance Minister Benson and Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that Canadians should thank United States President Nixon's economic moves for leading to the new government plans.

Mayor Courtney Haddock has greeted the announcement with enthusiasm, but warned it could lead to falsely expanded municipal work forces.

Haddock said the proposals were "interesting," provided they don't require municipalities to put on extra staff to handle the workload.

"If there's money in it for Victoria, we'll go for it," the mayor said. "But we must be careful not to put on extra permanent staff which eventually would become the city's responsibility."

MILD MEDICINE

He referred to a $50 million grant to municipalities to finance labor incentive programs.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the programs were "mild medicine when major surgery is indicated," but said the municipality would take full advantage of them.

Mayor Art Young of Esquimalt said the $50 million grant, coupled with another $50 million to community organizations to formulate other projects, "would sure be a shot in the arm."

W. V. Scully, chairman of the Steel Co. of Canada, said:

"How are they going to pay for it? I suppose it will mean printing money."

However, he said, "something had to be done to tide us over the winter."

INFLATIONARY

Jack Mackenzie, vice-president of Canada Permanent Trust Co., said he believes "a $1 billion deficit has to be wildly inflationary. . . ."

"I think interest rates will go up in the next 12 months and the government will have to print money to expand credit."

Forrest Rogers, economic adviser to the Bank of Nova Scotia, said in Vancouver:

"The program will spur the economy to a degree, but the extent will depend on the success the U.S. has in coping

WHAT TAX CUT IS WORTH

OTTAWA (CP) — The new three-per-cent reduction in federal income taxes announced Thursday will mean a saving of $15 for each $1,000 that a taxpayer has been paying to the federal government this year, a finance department source said today.

But precisely how the reduction affects taxpayers with various amounts of incomes and deductions for supporting a wife and children has not yet been worked out by the finance department.

The tax reduction is retroactive to July 1 and will continue, Benson said, until the end of next year.

Since it applies only to half of the current calendar year, the tax reduction amounts to 1.5 per cent of federal taxes payable for 1971.

The reduction applies only to federal income taxes. Tax tables put out previously by the finance department include both federal and provincial taxes, the latter at the rate of 28 per cent of basic federal tax.

Think-Up Work Centre of Plan

OTTAWA CP — Make-your-own-work projects are to be a $100-million feature of the federal government's winter campaign against unemployment.

Taking the lead from the $24.6 million Opportunities for Youth program of last summer, Finance Minister E. J. Benson announced Thursday the money will be available for projects submitted by municipalities, community organizations and private groups.

As with Opportunities for Youth, the new local initiatives program will be "weighted in favor of those regions and sub-regions where unemployment is most serious."

Also, as with the youth program, the local initiatives are not to be profit oriented and are to serve the best possible good of the communities involved.

Just how much the jobs to be generated will pay has yet to be established. The rules under which projects will be selected are to be announced within the next few days.

Perhaps a key difference between the two programs is that the original was introduced by Secretary of State Gerald Pelletier, whereas the local-initiatives program is to be administered by Manpower Minister Otto Lang.

Mr. Pelletier had a youthful corps of administrators, many with no experience in the public service, to screen and approve a rush of applications for funds. Its decisions were open to widespread criticism but many of the Opportunity for Youth projects won community approval.

Mr. Lang indicated in an interview after Mr. Benson's speech that the new program will be more concerned with jobs for unskilled workers.

"There won't be as many esoteric projects as there were in Opportunities for Youth," he said.

He suggested that pollution clean-ups and urban rehabilitation projects would likely be typical of the initiatives to be approved under the program.

Half of the money available through the program is to go to municipalities after consultation with provincial authorities. The balance is reserved to finance projects submitted by local groups.

Proposals are to be made to regional manpower offices before Jan. 31, 1972, and processing of applications will begin almost immediately Mr. Lang said.

More to Come Says Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — A $1 billion shot in the arm for the laggard economy, including income tax cuts, was delivered by the federal government Thursday night.

Prime Minister Trudeau followed up the announcement today by stating at a press conference that further policies would be introduced before a general election is called — probably in 1973.

Job-Making Projects

The program of temporary individual and corporate tax reductions, plus financial aid to provinces and municipalities for job-making projects, was outlined by Finance Minister E. J. Benson during a special Commons debate called to consider the slack state of economic activity.

The measures came after a sharp increase in the unemployment trend and amid fears that U.S. trade restrictions will cause more damage.

"The economy will be booming by the end of 1972," Mr. Benson told reporters later. But, he added: "This is not an election budget."

The prime minister described the planned deficit of $1 billion in the current fiscal year as "about right."

If more spending was needed, the government would bring in more budgetary measures.

Action on Inflation, Too

And if inflation became severe, the government would "have to act on that side."

Trudeau said he hoped there would have been some indication from the U.S. that its trade restrictions would be more temporary than they appear. Had this been the case, Thursday's "budget" would have been easier.

He said Canada still had a wide variety of choices to follow in its trade relations with the U.S., but he still felt it would be 100 times better if any type of hostility could be avoided. Recalling that in 1911 an election campaign was won on the slogan of "not truck or trade with the Yankees," Trudeau said "it's not a course I would like to follow."

When American intentions become more clear, Canada could decide on, for example, specific ways of expanding trade with the U.S., or, if necessary, reorienting trading patterns to other countries.

He said he would be discussing Canada-U.S. trade with Russian Premier Kosygin when he visits Canada next week.

$160 Million in Loans

"Obviously he'll be interested in knowing our position."

The spending program provides a three-per-cent reduction on individual federal income tax and a drop of seven per cent in corporate tax, both retroactive to July 1 and due to run to the end of next year.

The tax cuts would be in addition to those announced in June — removal of the three-per-cent surtax for individuals and corporations imposed in 1968.

Thursday's proposals include $160 million in loans to provinces and municipalities for projects to help employment, $100 million in grants to municipalities and community organizations for the same purpose, $35 million to improve manpower training and an $80 million federal works program.

There will be a speed-up of $113 million in loans from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and $10 million in loans for construction of multi-purpose exhibition buildings.

The total cost of the package will be $1,070 million, including the loss in tax revenue.

Highest Since 1946

Mr. Benson estimated the budget deficit for the financial year ending next March 31 will be $1 billion, the difference between spending of $14.58 billion and revenue of $13.58 billion. That is up from the deficit of $750 million estimated in the June 18 budget for this year.

The new figure would be the biggest deficit since 1945-46, when revenues were more than $2 billion below spending, reflecting costs of the Second World War.

Opposition spokesmen who had called repeatedly for special measures to stimulate the economy, called the program too late and too little.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the economic stimulants were too tardy to have enough effect on winter employment. The country had no confidence in the finance minister, and he should resign.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis charged the government with doing more for corporations than for the ordinary people. He also said the measures were too late.

Caouette Castigates

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, castigating economists and wasteful bureaucrats for getting the economy in a mess, called for a guaranteed annual income and discounts on Canadian-made products.

Mr. Benson, in his 23-minute budget-like statement of 2,000 words, did not concede there is any essential fault in the economy.

To opposition hoots of derision he concluded his speech with:

"The economy is strong and growing. The measures I have proposed today are designed to keep it that way."

He urged higher consumer spending as an antidote to the U.S. surtax on imported goods, a barrier to Canadian exports.

"Spending by individuals makes up two-thirds of national income and is the base on which the whole economy rests," he said.

Mr. Benson said the federal government "will be consulting the provinces forthwith on the early implementation of the program."

A federal-provincial conference was scheduled for Dec. 6-8 but the federal government, under pressure, has been trying to arrange an earlier date amid conflicting provincial requirements.

The programs to spur employment contain incentives for winter starts on construction projects. Local and provincial governments will get back $3 for every $4 of on-site labor costs incurred up to May 31, 1972.

Action on Free School 'Violation of Policy'

The provincial department of education has violated its own policy in withdrawing accreditation from Campbell River Senior Secondary, Joe Harrison, president of the Campbell River District Teachers' Association, charged in a circular distributed to members.

Meanwhile, in other developments, an overflow crowd of more than 600 person, including teachers, students and parents, jammed Cedar Elementary gymnasium in Campbell River Thursday night and voiced overwhelming support for Principal John Young in his battle to regain accreditation for the school.

And today Education Minister Donald Brothers said in Victoria that the school lost its accrediation because Young's teaching methods lowered education standards. "It doesn't help education if it (the accreditation issue) becomes a matter of debate in the community," he said.

POLICY ENCLOSED

In his circular Harrison enclosed the department's policy section on accreditation which states that as a first step "accreditation is renewed for one year but the district superintendent is informed in the comments that some marked improvement will be expected in the item concerned."

If there is no improvement by the following year, "a further renewal of one year is given, but the principal is notified directly that accreditation beyond that year will depend specifically upon improvement."

The policy statement also stresses that this procedure "ensures that accredited schools maintain suitable standards without penalizing them because some aspect drops below the desirable level for a single year."

FIRST WARNING

In photostat copies of letters enclosed with the circular, it is shown that principal J. A. Young was given his first warning on accreditation on May 4 from J. R. Meredith, superintendent of instructional services, and was advised on Sept. 24 that accreditation was withdrawn.

The first warning stated that the accreditation committee "wishes to advise you that this school will retain its accreditation status for the school year 1970-71 only and that continuation of accreditation will be dependent upon improvement in standards of achievement."

Young wrote back asking for an explanation "in specific terms of what is meant by '. . improvement in standards of achievements'."

ANALYSIS

Meredith replied: "An analysis of standards of all accredited schools is now being made. As a matter of policy, information is provided to the district superintendent for use at his discretion in discussions with school principals and their school staffs."

Young then queried this reply: "It seems reasonable to request that I be informed very precisely about what the standards are, and what specific improvements have to be made. It will be impossible for me to undertake any corrective measures if I am not informed about what is allegedly deficient."

Meredith answered: "As I informed you earlier, specific information will be provided by the department of education through the district superintendent."

Meredith was not heard from until four months later when he advised that the school had lost its accreditation, which means that all

Machine-Gunners Kill 2 Belfast Police

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Machine-gunners in a speeding car shot two policemen to death in Belfast's Roman Catholic Ardoyne area today, the army said.

The policemen were in a parked patrol cruiser near the Ardroyne fire station when another car, machine-guns poked through its windows, roared past and raked the police vehicle with bullets.

The fusillade killed one policeman instantly. The other died soon afterward, an army spokesman said.

The fatalities raised the death toll in Northern Ireland this year to 90, including five policemen and 25 British soldiers.

Today's attack followed widespread violence Thursday in which the army said troops shot three gunmen in Belfast Catholic areas and fought a two-hour skirmish along the Irish Republic border with what one officer estimated were up to 40 gunmen. An estimated 450 rounds were fired. One soldier suffered leg wounds.

'Nations Exploiting Developing Areas'

Times News Services

VATICAN — The North Atlantic nations are exploiting developing countries economically, culturally and politically, the Roman Catholic synod of bishops was told Thursday.

A paper, read by Archbishop Teopisto Albertoy Valderrama of the Philippines says that:

—All racial and ideological discrimination must be eliminated so the poor can progress and become more productive.

—Aid given by wealthy nations to poor ones should be considered a responsibility and not just "charity."

—"Only a small part of mankind benefits from the cultural riches of the world."

—"World trade in unregulated free markets is the main source of oppression in the world."

The paper goes on to suggest that the church's administration of its property sometimes led to "an accumulation of wealth that causes identification of the church with the rich and powerful, while reducing her credibility when she does speak out against injustice and to promote justice."

Secret Talks Held on B.C.'s North

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of the United States and British Columbia governments met in August in secret to discuss development of northern B.C., the Sun says.

Adolph W. Schmidt, American ambassador to Canada, and Milton Rewinkle, U.S. consul in Vancouver, met Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at Prince Rupert on the north coast and were taken on a tour of the north, the newspaper says.

Premier Bennett said Thursday he knows nothing about the meeting, but a spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Ottawa confirmed that Schmidt had come out to B.C. late in August for the four-day meeting with Loffmark.

The Sun says there was discussion of increasing co-operation between Canada and the U.S. to allow for transportation of resources and possibly power across the Alaska panhandle from land-locked northern B.C.

Also talked about was the hydroelectric potential of the Stikiseiskut River system in northern B.C..

A visit to the Aluminum Co. of Canada's refinery at Kitimat was included, along with inspection of copper-rich and timber-producing regions north of Prince Rupert.

with its wage-price problems and correcting its trading positions.'"

In Vancouver, Mayor Tom Campbell said Canada needs a year-round program, emergency schemes, to reduce unemployment.

"If they're going to spend $1 billion, it's certainly going to help fight unemployment," he said. "But it's a little late."

If the federal program of loans and grants requires municipalities to match Ottawa's contributions, Vancouver would not be able to take part because "we just haven't got the funds."

'SENSIBLE'

British Columbia Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the federal government "is finally making some sensible moves."

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said in Victoria the tax cuts and other measures are 'the first significant things" done during three years of bad unemployment.

He agreed with the approach of injecting money directly into the economic mainstream, rather than relying only on the "trickle down" theory.

TAX CUTS

The government moves were a combination of both, direct public investment and tax cuts.

He thougst three factors prompted the government to move — the U.S. surcharge on imports, an already-bad economic and unemployment situation, and "anticipation of an election next year."

Doug Sherbaniuk, executive director of the Canadian Tax Foundation, said in Toronto the government apparently is taking the proper approach.

He agreed with the personal-tax reduction, saying more money would be placed in the hands of the consumer. And he said the corporation tax cut would encourage industry "to embark on additional production, thereby maintaining staff and helping create or preserve jobs."

HOLD OWN

Robert Stewart, president of the Canadian Construction Association, commended the move, saying in Ottawa it should bring about a lower unemployment rate this winter — "or at least keep it from rising higher than it is."

Gerard Filion, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said the tax cuts "should do much to re-establish confidence in the government's determination to accelerate business recovery as the best means of reliving unemplyment."

"Reduction in personal income tax should permit higher levels of consumption which will be reflected in more production and hence more employment."

But, he said, no one should expect the announcement to be a "panacea" for the ills brought on by the U.S. supplementary import duty and other U.S. measures.

"If we in Canada are less successful than the United States in keeping costs down we will still face substantial loss of production and of jobs as a consequence."

BENSON SPEECH AT GLANCE

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of federal measures to expand the economy announced by Finance Minister E. J. Benson Thursday night:

An income tax cut of three per cent for all Canadians retroactive to July 1, 1971, and ending Dec. 31, 1972.

A corporation tax cut of seven per cent retroactive to July 1, 1971, and ending Dec. 31, 1972.

An $80-million federal works program for alterations and improvements to federal facilities such as buildings, transportation facilities and parks.

An additional $10 million in loans for construction of multi-purpose exhibition buildings.

A $160-million special loans program to provinces and municipalities to finance job-creating capital projects.

A $20-million on-the-job training program especially for unemployed young people ineligible for existing manpower training programs, with incentives to participating industries.

An allocation of $15 million to expand existing manpower training programs.

A $50-million local-initiatives grant program for municipalities and their agencies to finance labor-intensive projects.

A similar $50-million local program for community organizations and other organized groups organizing such projects.

An acceleration of $113 million in Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. loans for public, home-owner and student housing, sewage treatment and land assembly projects.

Total measures to cost $1,070 million, creating an estimated budgetary deficit of $1 billion for 1971-72 on spending of $14.58 billion and revenue of $13.58 billion.

. . . JOHN YOUNG

Grade 12 students must take government exams to enter university, instead of many of them being recommended by the school.

In the withdrawal notice, Meredith said that the decision was reached following a study of the report of the accreditation committee and the review of the record of Campvell River Secondary.

"A copy of this report is being forwarded to Mr. Ramsay, district superintendent of schools, with instructions that he discuss the contents of this report with you at his discretion."

14 COMPLAINTS

The report, which Young received on Oct. 5, listed 14 complaints, the most serious being that the school failed to hold any tests in some courses and that it didn't participate in department survey tests designed to assess teaching and student performance.

The report also said that a clear statement of school policy and procedures followed in testing and promotion had been lacking. It also noted that the school's academic performance was 1.2 per cent below the provincial average for graduates last year.

Young replied to these complaints in detail in a report to the school board and concluced that "it is understandable when the department misinterprets our policies and it is equally understandable when we misinterpret departmental policies. We are certain, however, that such matters can easily be rectified through discussion and consultation."

COMPARABLE LEVEL

He maintained that a study of the achievement of all students, not just those few who write government exams, would reveal a level of achievement comparable to any school in the country.

"The students should not be made to suffer or be the innocent victims of administrative procedures or policy misunderstandings arising either in the school or in the department."

Young later charged to the press that the department's action was "purely political" and was meant to shut him up in his outspoken criticism through the years on the "anti-child" education policies of the department.

He brushed off the 14 complaints as "picayune."

CROWD TOLD

At the protest meeting Thursday night in Campbell River, school board chairman Harold Newman told the crowd that the board has not yet received satisfactory reasons from the department for withdrawal of accreditation.

"If we do not hear from them very shortly we will send a delegation from Victoria to get the facts and report them to the public."

James MacFarlan, assistant vice-president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, told the meeting, which lasted two hours, that "we deeply regret, in fact we reject, the implications that the senior secondary school is not up to the standards accepted throughout the province for accreditation."

"On the contrary, the school has many fine qualities which lead us to believe that it should be congratulated for its educational excellence."

The report of the accreditation committee, MacFarlan said, "has not challenged the basic education of the school."

The report agrees, he said, that the curriculum is satisfactory and that the staff has above average qualification.

"We view the action of the accreditation committee as a punitive action," he said, adding that the BCTF has pledged its full support to the teachers of Campbell River in their efforts to have full accreditation returned for the current school year.

APPLAUSE

Young's brief statement to the crowd drew loud applause and foot-stomping.

A student's performance over the whole year is a far better basis for judging his work than a one-and-a-half-hour exam," he said.

He contended the department's failure rate throughout the province is too high and that failure on government exams range from 63 per cent in history 12 and 71.6 in geography 12 to 39.8 per cent in French 12.

UNFAIR SYSTEM

"To the department it seems over-recommending means we are not over-failing . . . and I as an educator am not going to shut up in the face of an unfair system."

After board members had presented their views, which were split in their support of Young, several members of the audience approached a microphone and made their views known.

The speakers included, for the most past, teachers, students and parents of students. With the exception of a few, they voiced strong support for Young and a few questioned why the board had not taken a stronger stand.

No representative from the department of education was present at the meeting, nor were Brothers and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who is MLA for the area. Both were earlier rumored to be planning an appearance.

Campbell has indicated he will speak to Campbell River parents about the accreditation issue as "profession educator."

In his statement from Victoria today, Brothers said the only reason the dispute in Campbell River has been winning headlines is bucause the citizens have chosen to make it a public issue.

The minister denied that the department must give a school two years' notice before revoking accreditation. But he said his department warned Young last spring that standards had fallen below provincial levels.

EVIDENCE DISMISSED

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A charge of impaired driving against Paul Henry Pacquette was dismissed Thursday after Judge William McLeod ruled that breathalyzer information was inadmissible as evidence. The judge also ruled the prosecution had failed to prove that a breathalyzer reading was taken within two hours of the alleged offence.

School Amchitka Strike Faces Integrity Test

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — About 100 junior high school students who walked out of classes this morning to protest the proposed nuclear test on Amchitak Island have been given an ultimatum by their principal Grant Garnett.

They have to show tangible proof of their sincerity by Monday if they are to be readmitted to school.

The students, who attend Mount Prevost, joined about 100 others from Quemicahn Junior High this morning in a protest outside the provincial building.

They had registered for classes before they walked out of school.

Garnett talked to the students outside the provincial building and told them that before he would re-admit them to school Monday they would have to write an essay on the Amchitka controversy or prepare a letter of protest to someone in authority.

Mayor Jim Quaife also talked to the students, saying that he and council members supported their stand but asked the students to return to school.

Garnett reports that some of the students left immediately and were back in classes by 10:30 a.m. while others returned later.

He said he had delivered the ultimatum because although some of the students were "very dedicated" there were others who had marched out just to get out of school.

He said those failing to have an essay or letter written by Monday would have to have a letter from their parents explaining their absence from school.

The principal of Quamichan, Doug Greenwood, was unable to be reached for comment.

U.S. Lifts Textile Surcharge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announcedtoday that the United States is lifting the 10-per-cent surcharge on non-cotton textile imports. It said agreement has been reached with Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong to restrain the flow of textiles sent to the U.S.

The agreement signed today covers a three-year period from Oct. 1, 1971, with provision for consultations when quota danger points are reached and also at the end of the agreement.

The three-year agreement has been bitterly opposed by the Japanese textile industry, with almost two million workers.

Hundreds of textile workers demonstrated in Tokyo today against the agreement.

The industry says the U.S. demands are too severe and will result in extensive hardship, bankruptcy of small companies and unemployment.

Rates Hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to co-operate with President Nixon's new economic policy, the postal service has decided against seeking increases in the current temporary rates, the Washington Star reported Thursday.

FIREMEN LAUGH

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal's 3,000-man fire department today ignored a court injunction issued Thursday which ordered an end to an illegal walkout by the firemen.

The injunction was obtained late Thursday from superior court Judge Leon Lalande and immediately delivered by city clerks to the Montreal Firemen's Association union hall where the men's "study session" had been going on.

Most of the firemen laughed. Some returned to work, but skeleton staffs manning the city's fire stations began walking off their jobs again this morning, converging on the union hall.

The injunction specifically named 16 indviduals and the association and non-compliance could result in maximum fines of $50,000 per day for each of the 16 and the union as a separate entity for contempt of court.

The walkout Thursday was provoked by city hall's refusal to offer the firemen parity with wages paid to their Toronto counterparts.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

No doubt about it! The raven's been sent up on a bad rap, a frame-up. And Edgar Allan Poe was one of the fingermen.

The greatest mistake the raven ever made was not returning to the Ark when Noah sent one in search of land as the deluge was receding. From that fateful day forward these big black cousins of the crow have, with a large assist from imaginative man, become subjects of mystery and terror, biazarre messengers from the nether world, consorts of witches and warlocks and allegorical personalities of immense supernatural power — or so some would have us believe.

STRUCK FEAR

Odin, feared chief of the Norse gods of Asgard, ruled in Valhalla with a pair of ravens, Hugin and Minin, one on each shoulder. These birds struck fear among mortals as they flew through the world each day and carried news of recalcitrant subjects to their mighty chief. A raven flying over a Norseman's home was an ill omen indeed.

The Greeks got into the act too. Apollo, god of truth, has been credited with giving ravens their black plumage, a feat which certainly contributed to their present standing among the demon clan.

It seems Apollo got a bit upset one day when his favoured messenger, a white raven, brought him news of the unfaithfulness of his beloved Coronis — with a mere mortal at that. Apollo's misdirected wrath was aimed at the raven for bringing the bad news and he immediately turned its feathers black.

CROWNING TOUCH

Even our Pacific coast native people, in recognition of the supernatural powers of ravens, named their most prestigious clan after the black brethren.

But it was Poe who in a fit of black despair put the crowning touch to the grim story of the raven. His immortal words "Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door! Quoth the raven, 'Nevermore'," are enough to make even a strong man blanch and a weaker one turn to drink.

I'd like to have had Edgar along with me the other day upon Salt Spring Island to introduce him to a boisterous band of ravens who have apparently never read the well-known poem, The Raven. Quite unlike Poe's "grim and ancient wanderers of the Night's Plutonian shore," these fellows were having a full-fledged whoop-up and all in the name of enjoying life.

POOR OLD POE

Poor old Poe. He probably never saw a raven in his life, least of all one enjoying the bright sun and blue sky of an autumn day in the mountains, else he'd have vented his personal misery on some other unfortunate.

The Salt Spring Island aerial circus was doing its thing high over the west side of the island along the west face of Baynes Peak in Mount Maxwell Park. There, nearly 2,000 feet above the valley floor, aided by updrafts of warm air sweeping up the rocky cliffs, 9 ravens were putting on an aerobatic display of loops, dives, close formation flying and playful jockeying — all to the accompaniment of gurgles, croaks and squawks which had only one interpretation; a great time was being had by all.

BELIES AURA

To at least one land-anchored watcher, it was a sight to gladden the heart and more evidence to belie the aura of mystery that has grown up around these birds over the centuries.

Ravens, despite Poe and his unhappy band, are playful confident birds that go about their business with spirit and gusto. For example, last June a raven found a crow's nest in a Douglas Fir on the Hosford spread. While pandemonium reigned among the three pairs of crows that gathered from around the neighborhood, friend raven, punctuating his work with an occasional derisive cronk, cleaned out the crow's nest in short order.

It was a case of a falling out among thieves for this time the crows, if I may be so bold, could be heard mournfully wailing "Nevermore!"

Irish Turmoil Causing Sense of Despair in U.K.

LONDON (CP) — A growing sense of despair over the increasing turmoil in Northern Ireland appears to be creeping through Britain in the wake of one of the worst outbreaks of violence in several weeks.

Observers in London are beginning to ask whether the 13,500 British troops in Ulster can ever hope to combat effectively the guerrilla-style warfare waged by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Acknowledging that such doubts exist, British Prime Minister Edward Heath and leading Conservative ministers have reaffirmed determination to restore order in the north and contend that some progress is being made.

But Thursday, one of the largest battles in years broke out between about 40 terrorists and troops attempting to blow up a border crossing between Ulster and the Irish Republic to the south. There were also new outbreaks in Londonderry and Belfast.

The troops decided earlier this week to blow up a number of key border crossings between the Republic and Northern Ireland to hinder the flow of explosives they believe are being shipped from the south.

The battle at Forkill, County Armagh, erupted as a group of Royal Engineers, escorted by 50 soldiers, arrived to continue blowing up the roads.

MINE EXPLODES

As they did so, a Claymore anti-personnel mine containing steel slivers exploded near the troop carriers. Immediately, gunmen opened fire from the shelter of some nearby woods. The soldiers returned the fire, and later in the fight heavy machine-guns were brought up by the army. One soldier was wounded.

After two hours of firing, the gunmen withdrew, and it is thought by the army that several wounded men may have been dragged back into the Irish Republic by their comrades.

The soldiers were reported to be bitter that neither the republic's army or police intervened during the fighting.

Later it was reported from Dublin that five men were arrested after the battle died down.

Consumer Protection Backed by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives passed 344 to 44 and sent to the Senate Thursday a consumer protection plan opposed by consumer advocate Ralph Nader as not being strong enough.

The bill is a three-part affair — creating a new consumer-protection agency, giving legal underpinning to the White House's office of consumer affairs, and setting up a 15-member consumer advisory council.

The new agency would represent consumers in actions conducted by other federal agencies and — in certain circumstances — before the courts.

Nader said the House action means no strong bill will be passed by Congress this year.

Representative Benjamin S. Rosenthal (Dem. — N.Y.), leader of the Nader forces, called the legislation a skilfully-designed deception. "It was a victory for the Nixon administration and anti-consumer special interests."

For the first five years, the three-part system is estimated to cost $38.8 million; with $33.4 million of this going to run the agency based on an estimated 200 workers for the first year.

The bill authorizes programs of consumer education and information, procedures to handle and publicize complaints, a limited amount of product testing and spreading of test results, and studies of household product safety.

The bill would bar disclosure of trade secrets and other confidential information.

Rescue Mission

THIS WEEK'S DISCLOSURE OF inflation's continuing—although minutely tempered — erosion of the dollar, and unemployment's alarming increase, has brought a quick emergency response from Finance Minister Benson. The first two items are facts; the third reflects no more than a hope at this point, but the personal and corporation tax cuts and various multi-million-dollar pump-priming programs announced by the government should have a significant influence on the Canadian economic problem.

That action must be massive and early has become obvious. The effects of the United States restrictive move against exports from other countries, while not readily discernible yet, may have serious effects this winter. The seasonally adjusted unemployment figure of 7.1 per cent of the labor force represents a total approaching half-a-million Canadians and clearly calls for active measures.

A feature of the September unemployment figure of 7.1 per cent is its rapid increase from 6.5 in August. Manpower Minister Lang ascribes some of this to a large number of previously unregistered persons who have decided to try to get jobs, perhaps as a result of the government program encouraging people to work. Housewives may have registered as unemployed, and the large number of young people who have spent the summer roaming the country may now be showing up as newly unemployed in the September lists.

There is a larger than usual proportion of the population which can now suddenly appear on the unemployment rolls without reflecting an actual reduction in the number of people working. At the same time, however, it cannot be overlooked that employment in manufacturing, trade and administration shows a decline between August and September."

The expansive remedial measures now to be initiated will result in a budgetary deficit of $1 billion — in itself an inflationary force that can be absorbed only if it is successful in producing a market increase in productivity through employment. The $210-millions allotted for grants to provinces and municipalities to finance job-creating projects should have some effect if properly used in conjunction with another $50 millions to community groups for the same purpose. A form of winter works program to the tune of $160 millions is in the same vein, and should be more effective in that local governments will not have had the chance to postpone summer projects in order to benefit from the winter-work aid.

Presumed spending by individuals relieved of three per cent of their tax levies, and freer funds for corporations benefiting from a seven per cent tax cut, should also be reflected in increased employment. Other devices — $35 millions for training programs, $80 millions for additional federal public works, are in prospect.

A key factor in this situation will be speed in implementing the financial assistance. But regardless of any outpouring of federal funds, private industrial production is the only real remedy for widespread unemployment. All other panaceas should be directed eventually to restoring productive employment in the country's normal economy. To the extent that the government's new program does this, it should prove to be curative rather than merely soothing.

Defective Screening

COMMENT BY JUDGE WILliam Ostler in a Provincial Court case before him this week emphasized one of the major difficulties — and one of the weaknesses — of the parole system by which Canadians hope law-breakers will be returned more easily, quickly and efficiently to the ranks of normal citizenship.

The judge had before him a man who, 10 day after conditional release, broke his parole commitments, returning to the practice of obtaining services by fraud.

"You stayed out of trouble approximately 10 days," Judge Ostler noted. "You violated your parole after only 10 days."

The case demonstrated the unsuitability of the man in question for parole. He apparently would not, or could not, observe the rules. This is a situation which will recur. Officialdom is ready to be lenient toward today's offenders, partly in the hope that they will recognize this consideration by returning to acceptable ways of life in the community. Obviously some will not.

Under these circumstances parole must be a selective process. Too many quick reversions to crime — as in the local court case — will spur public rejection of the highly desirable parole principle. To avoid such a reaction, it is important that screening for parole purposes be conducted effectively.

Determining suitable candidates for parole is particularly difficult in the case of so-called "con" men who have developed the techniques of convincing their fellowmen of the upright earnestness of their character. That point is widely recognized by penologists. The only answer, if parole is to fulfil its purposes, is to devise more effective means of understanding the character and intent of a prisoner. The mesh in the screening process must be fine.

Pushing for Lower Air Fares

THE APPARENT DETERMINAtion of some airlines to reduce their trans-atlantic rates will no doubt be brought up again at the October 26 meeting of the International Air Transport Association meeting in Lausanne. There should be a general agreement to lower the charges on scheduled flights.

The need for such action is obvious. Some of the major lines showed a deficit last year and can trace a substantial share of their losses to the business corralled by charter flight agencies. Airlines cannot cantinue to fly by operating perpetually in the red. The scheduled lines want to become more competitive.

That, in itself, is a difficult problem. Companies which provide flights guaranteeing service with departure and arrival dates on a fixed and regular basis cannot always expect full passenger loads. Charter flights, on the other hand, can always assure themselves of payloads by selling transportation some time in advance and making a guaranteed payload a condition of operation.

Obviously the scheduled lines will fly frequently with empty seats, but they cannot continue to operate in this expensive transport field with very many. Hence the drive to become more competitive with their charter rivals.

The travelling public, for its part, is anxious to see fares come down, provided service is adequate and all safety factors are observed. Both the citizen who wants to go by air and the major airlines which want to carry him have a shared cause in the application to IATA for reductions. That joint pressure should be an effective influence on the international association.

Sable Island and the B.C. Precedent

THE discovery of oil on Sable Island has revived a controversy over offshore resources which was not fully settled by the Surpeme Court decision of 1967 in a British Columbia case. Mr. Trudeau's position, although not pleasing to Maritime members or, presumably, to Premier Regan, is very strong. It is that the island and its resources are within the federal jurisdiction until the courts rule otherwise.

Western

The reason why the matter was not settled by the B.C. judgment is clear enough. What is involved is a search of title and only very careful historical study by the Supreme Court can determine with finality whether Nova Scotia, at the time of confederation, possessed the same or larger rights than those enjoyed by the west coast colony. There is no doubt, however, that the federal case on the east coast has been considerably strengthened by the reasoning of the court in the dispute between Ottawa and British Columbia.

It may appear odd that the present controversy should involve not merely undersea resources but also jurisdiction over an island, The reason, as noted by the prime minister, is the wording of Section 91 (9) of the British North America Act, which embraces within the exclusive legislative authority of Parliament "beacons, buoys, lighthouses and Sable Island."

Maritime members, for example Mr. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East), argue that this must be considered in context. On this showing the fathers, presumably, were thinking of Sable Island (the graveyard of the Atlantic) as a threat to shipping and were endeavouring to pinpoint Ottawa's responsibility for assistance to navigation. This may be; if so, they were rather careless because the language on its face is not very restrictive.

Mr. Forrestall also finds support for his argument in the Boundaries Extension Act of 1912. By this legislation Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba were enlarged to include vast areas of adjacent land. It would not appear, however, that Ottawa recognized by its action any prior rights of these provinces. The lands had been federal and their cession was a purely political act. The Borden government decided what it would give and what it would not give (including, as Mr. Trudeau has noted) the Belcher Islands.

Issue for Supreme Court

These are interesting questions but the proper body to decide them is, surely, the Supreme Court of Canada, which is impartial and has had experience in historical cases. If the Nova Scotia case is sound, the provincial government should not be reluctant to submit it to judicial scrutiny. It is probably regrettable that time has been lost.

What Nova Scotia apparently wants is a political settlement; either the recognition of its judicial claims or at least agreement that it should enjoy the entire royalties from the newly-discovered oil field. But the federal government, however generous it may choose to be with funds, has a clear responsibility to all the people to defend its jurisdiction. No other authority will.

It would also seem strange if Ottawa, having denied the imperious demands of Mr. W. A. C. Bennett, should yield to the polite requests of Mr. Regan who heads a Liberal government. There must be one policy unless, of course, it is determined by the Supreme Court that Nova Scotia had acquired, prior to confederation, rights in excess of those enjoyed by British Columbia.

For the governments of the Atlantic provinces, it is not an all-or-nothing proposition. At a stroke Nova Scotia has probably gained more than it could hope to derive from all the small and medium-sized industries diverted to the province by regional development grants. By the existing federal offer, it will enjoy half the revenues and share in the others according to a formula still under negotiation. According to Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Benson, the oil industry over a period of years will have to spend about $1.34 billion to maintain present outstanding permits, and half of this will be injected directly into the Atlantic economy.

It is fashionable to decry the resource industries. With this heady prospect before them, Nova Scotians, regardless of what happens to the Sable Island title, may not be much attracted by the economic doctrines now finding so much favor in central Canada.

FROM WINNIPEG

By JAMES H. GRAY

An NDP Setback in a Nightmare Unicity

TWO facts emerge in striking clarity from the election here last week which will begin this community's march into a unitary metropolitan government from 13 often warring municipalities plus a super government.

Gray

1. The New Democratic Party is far from the burgeoning wave of the future on the prairies its advocates have been insisting it was.

2. The transition from total confusion of governments into a functional administration will be appallingly difficult in both its technical and political aspects.

Let's dispose of Point 1 first because it is the easiest. The NDP sought with this election to extend its organized influence in civic politics from the local Winnipeg area into the new unicity government. It ran candidates in all the 50 seats for the new council and elected only seven members. Only one of the seven old Winnipeg aldermen was able to retain a place in the new city council.

All the NDP succeeded in doing was in uniting the anti-NDP vote under one banner, that of the Independent Civic Election Committee. There is little doubt that the spreading disenchantment with the Schreyer NDP government in Manitoba was a factor in the civic election, even if creating one city of 500,000 out of the 13 municipalities was Schreyer's idea.

Clearly, the electors overwhelmingly approved the unicity idea while they disowned its sponsors. In the process they provided muscle for those who have been urging that the Liberals and Conservatives join forces to evict the NDP from control at the next provincial election.

Coalitions have, in fact, been a popular dodge in Manitoba over the last 50 years.

In this same half century the once-hard barriers that separated Grits and Tories have disappeared from the Prairies, along with the barriers that separate Socialists from Conservatives. Thus in Saskatchewan the voters who support NDP candidates provincially plump for Conservatives federally. In Alberta everybody seems to have two and often three separate loyalties.

But regardless of what happens at the hustings, the turmoil that will result from attempts to make unicity work will be deafening. Not only must 13 separate municipal administrations be shuffled into a single pack. A metro council super-power which has had jurisdiction over many services in the area has to be absorbed.

One Police Force

The new city will have one police force instead of 13. Clearly some unbelievably inept police departments will be housecleaned. But under the new 50-man city council will be 13 community councils functioning in the old municipalities as committees. When the departmental shuffling starts will there not be massive gang-ups?

Either scores, perhaps hundreds, of jobs will have to be declared redundant, or unicity Winnipeg will become an administrative nightmare. Who goes and who stays? And who gets the senior jobs and who become the underlings?

For years now the Metro administration has been at loggerheads with the Winnipeg proper administration. There is no love lost between the Winnipeg engineering department, to cite a single example, and the Metro engineers. Clearly unicity will require one large engineering administration to run the streets, sewers and water mains and the snow removing and bridge maintenance.

Engineers' Problem

How will unicity Winnipeg fit those two together, and find room for the engineers who have been employed by the joining municipalities? One suggestion going the rounds is to fire everybody and then take applications for all the new positions which will be charted by the new administration. Preference would be given to previous employees. Yet at the same time even the advocates of this plan see a need to bring in a number of complete outsiders to fill the top jobs. Otherwise favoritism and discrimination could not be avoided.

Even more vexing, however, will be the problems of running a city of 500,000 with a council of 50 fragmented into separate community groups for planning and budgeting. Yet between now and the end of the year, a system must be devised to bring day-to-day order out of theoretical chaos.

Of this there is no doubt. Winnipeggers are already wondering whether unicity was not born prematurely. They concede it was a great idea; but in the cold post-election dawn they wonder how it can ever be made to work in its present form. If comes down in the end to a gigantic question mark:

What does a city of 500,000 need with 50 aldermen and 67 school trustees?

If the unicity is to have as many aldermen, school trustees and, for the interim at least, as many civic employees, what has it really accomplished except unname 12 of the units and make the community something in name which it has always been in fact, or vice versa.

Winnipeggers have always been Winnipeggers, whether they lived in St. James, East Kildonan or Fort Garry. In the mayority campaign they voted three to one for Winnipeg city's Steven Juba who has always contended that what the people of Winnipeg wanted was one city instead of the 13. Now they have got it, but whether they got what they thought they were getting only time will tell.

A Grateful Alderman

By the Grace of God and Medic One Seattle Fire Department I was able to make a recovery from a serious heart collapse. The care of the staff of the Horbour View Coronary Unit, in Seattle, followed by the hundreds of expressions of good wishes and hopes for my recovery were received with a feeling of humbleness.

Since returning home, my doctor has assured me that I should be back to normal activity in a few weeks.

May I express, through the press media, my gratitude and sincere thanks for so many good wishes for an early recovery. — Alderman R. Baird, 1310 May.

Dallas for a View

Please allow these thoughts from an old timer regarding highrises.

Sixty thousand people circulate the city streets each day and not one of them goes to the harbor to see the view. (What view?)

Harbor highrises have existed since just after the turn of this century, namely, the Empress Hotel, Belmont Building, old Post Office and the Legislative Buildings, then later came the Empress Annex, Heritage Court plus the Executive House. There was no derogatory comment about these because they are pleasing to the eye and above all are comfortably spaced.

The three round Reid towers surrounded with a park-like promenade will abolish the existing harbor eye sores.

Victoria's topography is one of confinement, it cannot expand outward so it must go up.

Reservoirs of people on both sides of Old Town will bring this area to life.

Highrises or not, new traffic arteries have to be built and the dog leg at Johnson, Wharf and Store Streets should be eliminated making Wharf and Store Streets into one, (this may be in the plans).

Fifty-five years ago there was a wooden bridge from the north end of Store Street. This connected with Bay Street. If this span was built again it would go a long way to easing the traffic flow.

People who wish a view have only to take a stroll a short distance to the beautiful Beacon Hill Park and the Dallas Road. Here will be found scenery unsurpassed almost in the heart of the city. "Lucky Victorians." — A. R. Johnson, 1174 Trans-Canada Highway.

Confined

The crowding and confining together continually in close quarters, without escape—in human beings, high-rise living, etc., in animals, birds, etc. confinement in cages, and stalls — is bringing about collapses into nervous breakdowns in all who are sensitive.

This is totally against what God meant for His creation. He meant us to have homes for families and for us all to work together with Him, yet there must be freedom of space and liberty, privacy, etc.

This captivity is gross cruelty and will end in chaos. — Mrs. Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester.

Ocean Treatment

Sewage treatment plants are not the answer. They are only something we have to resort to in places where proper planning has not been carried out. Nothing that science has come up with or is likely to ever come up with will take the place of nature's way of recycling organic matter.

Being a seaman and naturally one of those more directly affected by sea pollution, I wish to raise again the point that it is not harmful to dump wastes in the ocean and that the strait or any other moving body of water is a treatment plant in itself. Of course, this is quite elementary and quite true provided we are taking out of that treatment plant as much as we are putting in.

Any fool knows we are not even scratching the surface as far as the taking-out goes. The land, on the other hand, is becoming barren because we are taking everything out and putting nothing back.

The answer here could be quite simple and very much a political one. Until the everyday citizens make themselves a stronger political force than the land developers, those land developers through their pawns and yes-men will continue with their false promise of treatment plants and their phoney stall of monitoring, until we are well past the point of no return.

If 20,000 citizens instead of between 50 and 200 will show up at our next SPEC meeting, we will see some very significant changes in short order.—A Gahan, 748 Hockley.

Paris — A dispatch to Le Temps from Rome says it is learned from an authoritative source that friendly pourparlers between several powers and Italy on the subject of peace have been opened. The Italian government, however, while disposed to conclude peace with Turkey and also to accord concessions, remains inflexible with regard to the annexation of Tripoli.

In addition, the dispatch says, if the campaign of reprisals against the Italians by Turkey is carried further, the Italian fleet will be obliged to appear in the Aegean Sea.

Pippi Longstocking Comes to Canada

Who is Pippi Longstocking?

Why, surely Europe's most popular, best-loved child star, of course. Heroine of her own highly-acclaimed TV series in Sweden and other European countries. And now a regular feature of CBC Television's hour-long Saturday series for youngsters, Children's Cinema.

In all, 13 episodes of the Pippi series will be seen on the weekly hour-long series, telecast Saturdays at 1 p.m., throughout the fall and early winter months.

Little Pippi and her friends, Tommy and Annika, are forever searching for adventure . . . and trouble! They find it often, either in the robbers, Karlsson and Bloom, or the policemen, Kling and Klang. There are other friends, too, who help Pippi triumph over her enemies.

Children's Cinema, produced by CBC-TV's schools and youth department, also features a wide variety of live and animated features from Europe. A not-to-be-missed series, it is telecast (in color) Saturdays at 1 p.m., on the CBC Network.

Jimmy Stewart's Show a Loser

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jimmy Stewart enjoys the affection of almost everyone, in and out of show business, yet his new television show is an expensive bust.

Can it be that Stewart's debut as a series star is symptomatic of movie stars invading the tube?

Shirley MacLaine, Glenn Ford, Anthony Quinn, Tony Curtis and Rock Hudson, to name other film stars-turned-video-regulars, are not setting the world on fire either.

It may be that The Jimmy Stewart Show faces formidable opposition from The FBI and some powerful movies. Perhaps it takes time for a new series to catch on.

Whatever the reason, Stewart is baffled.

"I thought the series was a good idea," he said. "It has a good storyline. Henry Fonda helped influence me to do it, and there weren't any particularly exciting movie scripts in the future.

"But the ratings aren't good and I don't know why."

Stewart plays a whimsical college professor with a 19-year-old son and an 8-year-old son. He struggles with the generation gap and minor campus adventures.

Stewart agreed that the very basis of the series may be at fault.

First, the show takes place on a campus. Viewers think of Kent State and Berkeley and shy away from Academe. Second, Professor Stewart bridges the generation gap among his sons. Viewers have had the generation gap up to here.

Thirdly, The FBI has been in the top 10 ratings almost since Dillinger was Public Enemy No. 1.

That's three strikes before Stewart emerges from the dugout.

The No. 1 teleivsion show in the ratings, "all in the Family, features a bigot who dynamites bridges over the generation gap and who considers a college campus the no-man's land of the Third World War.

Viewers tune it in because Archie Bunker and clan don't communicate, are incapable of resolving problems and poke fun at precisely the decent God-fearing folk Stewart and family represent.

Vaguely, Jimmy Stewart is aware of this fact. Aware and confused.

"I wanted to play a fuddy-duddy," he said. "I like to work and always have. Making movies has always been a joy. I loved it. And I like making the show. NBC and Warner Bros. are great and they're giving us fine quality."

But Jimmy is thinking about his parts in Harvey, No Highway In The Sky, Mr. Hobbs Takes A Vacation and other gentle roles in films.

"Maybe I waited a year or two too long to get into television," he said, reflecting. "I'm new to TV and the ratings. I know that we've given it a good try."

"If this show doesn't make it I have no one to blame but myself."

Stewart is being magnanimous. He remains the super actor he always was. Apparently college campuses, gentle professors and generation gaps are a bad video scene. And that's not Stewart's fault.

TV Examines People on Move

Millions of Canadians were on the move this past summer, some in grand style, others by thumb and packsack.

On Oct. 19, at 10 p.m. CBC-TV's Tuesday Night examines two styles of travellers by way of contrast — elderly people on a guided bus tour through the Maritimes, and young boys and girls who often lived by wits alone as they hitch-hiked across the West in search of adventure and knowledge.

The program is titled The Divided Highway. Producer Don McQueen explains that although the two styles of travel appeared completely different, there was a strong element of dependency in both.

"At first, it seemed that a hitch-hiker's method of travel was utterly independent. He's on his own. But that's not true, because the hitcher's rides depended completely on the whim of the car driver who chose to pick him up. His sleeping place was organized by the government or other groups and he was fed. There were many exceptions, of course, since hitchers often carried sleeping bags and bought their own food if they had money.

"What we found is that hitchers didn't see as much of the country at all, since most spent their time in between rides, sitting on the edge of the highway, getting tired and grimy," says producer McQueen.

A Winnipeg social worker saw the annual trek by our young people as a form of "puberty rite" for a generation trying to create its own depression experience. A Prairie city mayor believed government agencies were encouraging youths to become bums.

On the other hand, the elderly bus travellers were guided by Carl Naumoff, who also narrates a large part of the bus segment on the program. Naumoff explains how he tries to weld a group of strangers into a temporary family and to give them a good holiday.

The CBC Tuesday Night crew which filmed the bus segment were soon accepted by the elderly travellers as an added attraction to their holiday.

"The program tries not to judge either group of travellers. Some people will see it and decide that Canada has a fine, older generation and a rotten younger one. Other people will find quite the reverse," says McQueen.

Early Rock Star Dies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jean Vincent, 36, a recording star of the early rock 'n roll era, died at a hospital late Tuesday from hemorrhaging caused by a bleeding ulcer.

Vincent, who appeared with Elvis Presley and co-starred in the movie The Girl Can't Help It with Jayne Mansfield, had four gold records from such hits as Lot a Loving and Wear My Ring.

Vincent is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kye Craddock and three sisters.

Kaye to Film For UNICEF In Manila

MANILA (UPI) — American entertainer Danny Kaye will arrive in Manila Oct. 22 for a two-day visit in the course of a Southeast Asian tour sponsored by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF).

During his stay in Manila, Kaye, as UNICEF'S Goodwill Ambassador will make a feature-length documentary film of UNICEF-assisted projects. The film, intended for information drives around the world, will reflect UNICEF assistance aspects, particularly on nutrition, health and better education among the world's children.

'ENTERTAINMENT SPECIALIST'

Ron Eckstine Carries on Tradition

A son of Billy Eckstine figures to become a musician. But Ron Eckstine almost didn't.

As a Los Angeles high schooler, the handsome 23-year-old son of the fabulous Mr. B of jazz song fame was such a talented football player that college scholarship offers poured in. And they were tempting for a while.

"But, after thinking about all those hard knocks," Eckstine explains, "I decided that there had to be a better future for me."

Eckstine and his four brothers were exposed to music from infancy, though their famous father never made a point of encouraging their interest. Billy's approach was more subtle. His Christmas gifts to his growing sons usually were musical instruments.

As a result, Ron became a gifted guitarist, plays the bass and sings with his own group, The Spicegarden, which soon will make its nightclub debut in Hollywood. Concurrently, he is polishing an acting career and plays a rock drummer in an episode of Cannon, the new adventure series starring William Conrad, to be broadcast Oct. 19 (9:20-10:30 p.m.) on CBS.

Young Eckstine is pursuing musical and acting careers simultaneously because he believes that the entertainment world of today demands more diversified talent than in the past.

"I say that I specialize in entertainment, rather than music or acting," he notes.

Being the son of a famous father can have its disadvantages, Ron admits. "Some people have preconceived notions about you that are wrong. My father has been very cool about it. He believes that the musical background is most important of all, and he has never consciously attempted to further my career. At the same time he is a good critic and suggests ways to improve."

With dramatic training from the famed character actress, Lillian Randolph, under his belt, Ron made his motion picture debut in The Love-Ins with James MacArthur and Richard Todd and since has appeared in the television feature, Shadow on the Land, with Jackie Cooper and on television in Room 222.

Small Town Look For BBC

BROOKLYN, Conn. (CP-AP) The BBC is coming to this rural community to record small-town American democracy in action.

The British films crew will be on hand for the town meeting.

The subject of the meeting: What to do about tent moth caterpillars.

WEEK'S MOVIES

Friday

Behind Prison Walls (XX). On 13 at 4. Prison drama about a man who is sent to prison on the testimony of his son.

Master of the World (XXX). On 7 at 7. Jules Verne's classic tale of Robur, the inventor and his flying fortress starring Vincent Price in the title role.

The Scapegoat (XX). On 12 at 7:30. A psychological drama adapted by Gore Vidal from the Du Maurier best-seller about a man who is tricked into assuming the identity of his double. Alec Guinness and Bette Davis.

I Take This Oath (X). On 13 at 7:30. Routine crime drama.

Marriage: Year One (XX). On 8 at 8 and 5 at 8:30. A TV movie, filmed on location in Chicago about a clash of values that sets two young newlyweds apart. A fairly good cast includes Sally Fields, Robert Pratt, William Windom and Agnes Moorehead.

The Dirty Dozen (XXX). On 7 at 9:30. (Part 2). An explosive attack on a Nazi-occupied chateau highlights Part 2 of this Second World War drama featuring an all-star cast.

Cash McCall (XX). On 12 at 11. Boy wonder of modern finance has made, lost and remade several fortunes with James Garner in the title role, and Natalie Wood as his leading lovely.

Frankenstein Conquers the World (X). On 7 at 11:30. Japanese-made Sci-fi.

Marriage: Year One (XX). On 6 at Midnight. (See earlier this evening for details).

House of Strangers (XXX). On 2 at 12:30. Powerful, engrossing story of a tyrannical banker (Edward G. Robinson) and his complex family relationships. Susan Hayward and Richard Conte round out an exceptionally strong cast.

The Outrage (XXXX). On 4 at 1. Superb film taken from the classic Japanese movie "Rashomon" about the elusive nature of "truth" and how it changes in the eye of the beholder. Excellent direction and sensitive performances by Claire Bloom, Lawrence Harvey, Edward G. Robinson and Paul Newman make this one great TV fare.

Take One False Step (XX). On 12 at 1:05. Murder-mystery with William Powell and Shelley Winters.

Curse of the Undead (X). On 7 at 1:45. Poor melodrama.

Saturday

Malaga (XX). On 11 at 2. About jewel thieves with Trevor Howard and Dorothy Dandridge.

These Thousand Hills (XX). On 5 at 4:30. The story of a young cowhand who strikes it rich in the old West. A fair cast includes Richard Egan Don Murray and Lee Remick.

Nabonga (X). On 13 at 8. A routine drama-adventure about a thief, a plane crash in the jungle and a cargo of stolen jewels with Buster Crabbe.

In Broad Daylight (XXX). On 4 at 8:30. An excellent performance by Richard Boone is the main attraction in this TV-movie about a man who is trying to murder his wife. Suzanne Pleshette and Stella Stevens play the ladies in his life.

Captain Newman, M.D. (XXX). On 6 at 8:30. A mind healer (Gregory Peck) at work in an Army psychiatric ward during the Second World War with strong back-up performances by Tony Curtis and Bobby Darrin.

The Satan Bug (XX). On 2 at 9. A Sci-fi tale about a diabolical doctor bent on destroying mankind with virus germs. Richard Basehart, George Maharis and Anne Francis.

Duel at Diablo (XX). On 5 at 9. A tough and effective western about a battle between the plainsmen and the Apache Indians. A fine musical score and strong performances by James Garner and Sidney Poitier make this a fairly good drama — but not for the squeamish.

To Die in Paris (XX). On 8 at 9. A story of a French underground leader during the Second World War with Louis Jordan.

Around the World Under the Sea (XX). On 12 at 9. TV fans will enjoy seeing familiar faces (David McCallum, Shirley Eaton, Keenan Wynn and Lloyd Bridges) in this scientific sea saga.

Men of San Quentin (XX). On 13 at 9:45. A routine prison drama.

The Egyptian (XX). On 12 at 11:05. A lavish Biblical spectacle about a physician who falls prey to the charms of a temptress with Edmund Purdom and Jean Simmons.

The Comancheros (XXX). On 5 at 11:15. A big-scale western with an equally huge cast including John Wayne, Lee Marvin, Stuart Whitman and Ina Balin.

Man: Eater of Hydra (X). On 7 at 11:15. All about man-eating plants.

To Die in Paris (XX). On 6 at 11:20. See earlier in the evening for details.

Sandra (XX). On 8 at 11:30. A well-directed but somewhat morbid tale of a decadent Italian family with Claudia Cardinale and Jean Sorel.

Flight of the Lost Balloon (X). On 4 at 11:45. A little science fiction and an even smaller plot with Marshall Thompson and Mala Powers.

Ambush Bay (X). On 2 at 12:15. A routine Second World War story with Mickey Rooney and Hugh O'Brian.

Sunday

The Pill Caper (X). On 8 at 11 a.m., and 6 at 2:30. Compilation of episodes from the 1966 TV series Mr. Terrific.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (XX). On 11 at 2:30. The Shirley Temple "classic" — 1938 vitage.

Angel and the Badman of the early West is helped by a family of Quakers when he falls wounded on their doorstep. Lots of action and fine scenery and it stars John Wayne and Gail Russell.

The War Lord (XXX). On 7 at 4:30. Colorful tale of action and romance in 11th Century Normandy with Charlton Heston and Richard Boone.

Teacher's Pet (XXX). On 11 at 6. Rollicking comedy about a gruff city editor (Clark Gable) who chases a journalism instructor (Doris Day).

The Sand Pebbles (XXX). On 7 at 7:30. Conclusion of the 1966 adventure-drama televised last week with Steve McQueen, Richard Crenna and Richard Attenborough.

No Way to Treat A Lady XX) on 4 at 9. Rod Steiger has a field day in this 1968 black comedy about a Broadway producer with a passion for murdering lonely women. Filmed on location in New York, and excellent supporting cast includes George Segal, Lee Remick and Eileen Heckart.

Come Fly With Me (XX). On 12 at 9. The lives and loves of three airline stewardesses with Dolores Hart and Hugh O'Brian.

Sandra (XX). On 6 at 11:20.

Casbah (XX). On 4 at 11:45. See Saturday for details.

Honeymoon (X). On 2 at 11:45. A somewhat uninspiring comedy with Shirley Temple and Franchot Tone.

Casbah (XX). On 4 at 11:15. A tale of a jewel thief who hides out in the infamous section of Algiers with Yvonne De Carlo and Tony Martin.

The Shrike (XXXX). On 7 at Midnight. A powerful version of the Joseph Kramm tale about a man (Jose Ferrer) driven to the brink of ruin by his domineering wife (June Allyson).

Monday

Sitting Pretty (XXX) On 4 at 9 a.m. A suave and sophisticated stranger (Clifton Webb) is hired as a baby-sitter by a young couple (Robert Young and Maureen O'Hara.)

Simba (XXX) On 6 and 8 at 12:45. Jungle drama with a strong cast including Dirk Bogarde, Virginia McKena and Basil Sidney.

Backtrack (XX) On 7 at 3:30. Well integrated 'bits-and-pieces' from TV's The Virginian and Laredo with Neville Brand and Doug McLure.

I Take This Oath (X) On 13 at 5. Routine crime-drama.

The Bliss of Mrs. Blossom (XXX) On 12 at 8:30. Fine acting highlights this comedy about a London housewife (Shirley McLaine) who keeps a lover in her attic.

Easy to Wed (XXX) On 4 at 11. A comedy about a lady who tries to sue a newspaper for libel with Van Johnson, Lucille Ball and Esther Williams.

McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force (XX) On 6 and 8 at 12:45. Tim Conway and Joe Flynn.

The Far Out West (XX) On 7 at 3:30. Comedy culled from TV's Pistols and Petticoats.

Men On Her Mind (X) On 13 at 5. Poor drama.

Suddenly Single (XXX) On 4 at 8:30. A thoughful drama about one man's cautious search for a new mate after a recent divorce. Excellent cast with Hal Holbrook, Barbara Rush, Margot Kidder and Agnes Moorehead.

Danger, Women at Work (X) On 13 at 11. Comedy.

Pillars of the Sky (XX) On 7 at 11:30. Mediocre western with Jeff Chandler.

Bedlam (XXX) On 2 at 11:50. Well-made tale of a young woman who tries to reform the conditions in mental institutions of 17th Century England with Brois Karloff, Anna Lee, and Jason Robards, Sr.

Bullet for a Badman (XX) On 6 and 8 at Midnight. Another Audie Murphy western.

The Restless Breed (XX) On 12 at 1:05. Rountine western with a totally wasted performance by Anne Bancroft.

TOP COUNTRY SINGER

Ex-Baseball Hopeful An Opry Hit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I remember when I used to pick cotton and listen to the Grand Ole Opry," Charley Pride said. "I wasn't expecting this."

The one-time Mississippi farmhand, one of the few Negro country singers, was the only double winner Sunday night in the annual Country Music Association awards presentation.

Pride, a native of Sledge, Miss., who turned to country music after an ill-starred fling at professional baseball, was named Entertainer of the Year and Male Vocalist of the Year.

Oddly, the awards had their roots in a long bus ride Pride took in 1964 from Helena, Mont., to St. Petersburg, Fla. He had hopes of catching on with the New York Mets baseball team.

When he reached St. Petersburg, he asked Mets general manager George Weiss and manager Casey Stengel for a tryout as a pitcher and outfielder.

The two Mets officials huddled, Pride recalls, and he heard Stengel say: "We ain't runnin' no tryout camp."

"I picked up my bats and headed to Nashville," Pride said.

"I had been doing some singing in clubs in Montana and folks were always telling me I should go to Nashville and get in country music."

His first recording came to the attention of Chet Atkins, a long-time country and western music star, and Atkins signed Pride to an RCA contract.

Since then, Pride has recorded such country hits as Kiss an Angel Good Morning and Is Anybody Goin' to San Anton?

"I still have three of the bats," the 35-year-old Pride said, "but I believe I swing a song and a guitar much better."

Lynn Anderson, who recorded Rose Garden, was Female Vocalist of the Year. The top duo was Dolly Parton and Porter Wagoner while the Osborne Brothers were the Group of the Year.

The Instrumental Group of the Year, for the third straight year, was Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass. Jerry Reed was Instrumentalist of the Year.

Art Satherly, 80, Columbia Records pioneer who first worked in the recording business with Thomas A. Edison, was selected for induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

In record categories, the Single of the Year went to Sammi Smith for her Help Me Make It Through the Night. Easy Lovin' by Freddie Hart was Song of the Year and I Won't Mention It Again by Ray Price was the Album of the Year.

The winners were chosen by 2,700 performers and other music industry-affiliated persons across the country. The awards were presented at the Grand Ole Opry before a television audience.

TV SPECIAL MARKS PICASSO'S 90TH BIRTHDAY

Picasso Is 90 and Chicano, two major CBS News documentary broadcasts, are part of the special three-hour all-news programming scheduled for Oct. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

The two hour-long features will be broadcast as the premiere of CBS Reports from 9-10 p.m. and 10-11 p.m., respectively. They will be preceded by a special edition of 60 Minutes, 8-9 p.m., on the Network.

The first documentary, Picasso Is 90, is an intimate portrait of one of the world's most famous artists and a retrospective of his life's work — his revolutionary impact on other artists, as well as his work's social and political implications. It will also highlight the artist's life from his early years in his native Spain to his later years in France.

Chicano, the second part of the CBS Reports premiere, is an examination of the rapidly growing movement of young militant Mexican-Americans. Focusing on Los Angeles, which has the largest concentration of people of Mexican descent outside of Mexico itself, Chicano will measure the influence of the movement since its inception.

CBS news chief foreign correspondent Charles Collingwood will be the reporter on Picasso Is 90, which will be broadcast four days before the master celebrates this birthday milestone.

"This broadcast will encompass a lifetime of living and work by one of the world's living legends," says Burton Benjamin, executive producer of the broadcast. "It will trace his life style from childhood into old age; it will offer a panorama of his work; it will recall his women, and it will assay his politics. It will involve everything that has made Picasso the man he is."

Appearing on the broadcast will be Picasso's son Claude; Sir Roland Penrose, an old friend and official biographer; William Rubin of the Museum of Modern Art in New York; Dominguin, the famous Spanish bullfighter and one of the master's closest friends, and Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler, Picasso's art dealer.

Among Picasso's great works to be included in the broadcast will be his paintings, sculptures and photographs, reflecting each of his major periods. These were filmed in locales throughout the world, including the Pushkin Museum in Moscow, the Mermitage Museum in Leningrad, the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum in New York and the Chicago Institute of Art.

Speaking of Chicano, CBS news correspondent Hughes Rudd, reporter on the broadcast, says, "In a country grown increasingly sensitive to the cries for dignity and opportunity from its minorities, Mexican-Americans have touched us the least. Their cries have not lit the fires of outrage in the hearts of most reform-minded Americans."

Discussing the grievances of the Mexican-American community, and the steps taken to alleviate them, are members of the Chicano movement, state and local political, law enforcement and religious leaders and Mexican-Americans themselves, some of whom oppose the actions of the young militants.

WEEK'S SPECIALS

Sunday

Children's Special, on 9 at 5: Mr. Smith and Other Nonsense. A child's-eye-view of the world is offered in this award winning blend of whimsical poetry and animation. Children's author William Jay Smith (Typewriter Town) reads "nonsense" verse about childhood fantasies against a moving background of fanciful creatures.

Drama Special, on 2 and 6 at 9: The Four-Day Wonder, a zany comedy with a science-fiction twist. The Willoughbys have no mention of allowing local land developers to tear down their charming old neighborhood for high-rise apartments. They plan to fight City Hall and they have just the weapon; 9-year-old Clarence's "magic disappearer" zapping gun.

Ed Sullivan, on 7 at 9. A Really Big Show is just like old times—Sunday night with Sullivan. Ed, with 90 minutes of film clips, recalls 23 years of show-stoppers. Songs: Elvis Presley—from the waist up—singing Hound Dog; the Beatles (All My Lovin', Yesterday, Ticket to Ride); Judy Garland (Smile); Petula Clark (Downtown); James Brown; pianist Van Coburn; Englebert Humperdinck; Tom Jones; Janis Joplin; Diana Ross and the Supremes; and Dionne Warwicke.

Philadelphia Folk Festival, on 9 at 10. John Hartford's Gentle on My Mind, John Denver's Wooden Indian and Doc Watson's Sweet Georgia Brown are the stand-out numbers in this concluding program form the 1970 Philadelphia Folk Festival.

Monday

Music Special, on 9 at 8. Sessions with two artists in the pop-rock field: Cat Stevens and Leon Russel. 1. Thirty minutes with singer-composer Cat Stevens, who does his hit Wild World, as well as Moonshadow, Hardheaded Woman and Miles from Nowhere. 2. Blues-rock from Leon Russel in an unrehearsed hour originally telecast on the Homewood series. Highlights: Delta Lady, Song for You, Honky-Tonk Woman, Prince of Peace, Emily. (90 min.)

Tuesday

All-Star Circus, on 5 at 8:30. One of the greatest shows in Europe—Copenhagen's Circus Benneweis—since 1885 a showcase for top international acts. Tonight . . . drama on the high trapeze as a lady perfroms the classic triple sommersault (the Humor Family); plate spinning par excellence by Eric Brenn; swaaypole comedy 70 feet in the air (Fattini); horses in a graceful show of precision (Diana Benneweis and Claus Jespersen); showmanship in the tiger cage (Taras Bulva, taped in Italy). Between acts, host Ed McMahon dons grease paint and costume to clown it up with England's acclaimed Jocko.

Wednesday

Men at Lunenberg, on 2 and 6 at 9, is a portrait of the Men of Lunenberg who for generations have gone down to the sea in wooden sailing-trawlers to catch swordfish. The older men reminisce about life at sea and friends who have been lost, and discuss their changing lifestyle now that most swordfish are contaminated and cannot be sold. The young people of Lunenberg talk about their hopes for the future, their feelings about their town and the role of drugs in their lives. Also: trip on the Frances Geraldine, the last of the working sailing trawlers.

Adventure Special, on 2 and 6 at 10. The days of the Caribou gold rush are re-created in The Gold Seekers, a documentary about the adventurers who flocked to British Columbia in the early 1860s to seek their fortunes. Readings from the diaries of six miners reveal the hardships and loneliness of life far from city comforts. Cameras follow the arduous Caribou trail into the gold fields and visit the restored town of Barkerville, pioneer mining community. Narrator: Robert Clothier.

Thursday

Here Comes the Electric Company, on 5 at 7:30, is a children's special from the people who brought you Sesame Street . . . a preview of a new series designed to teach reading skills to children aged 7-10. (It debuts Monday, Oct. 25 at 11 A.M., Ch. 5.) Like Sesame Street, Electric Company teaches by entertaining; it's a fast-paced grab bag of multimedia techniques, slapstick, music, animation and computer graphics. Bill Cosby and Rita Moreno are in the seven-member repertory troupe.

60 Minutes, on 7 and 12 at 8. Mike Wallace and Moreley Safer host this prime-time edition of the CBS newsmagazine. (Beginning October 31, the series returns to its Sunday, 6 p.m. slot.)

CBS Reports, on 7 and 12 at 9. Ambitious documentaries on Picasso, and the Chicano movement are featured in the first of a monthly two-hour series. 1. "Picasso is 90" celebrates the master's birthday four days early. Executive producer Burton Benjamin canvassed museums throughout the world for footage of his best paintings, sculpture and photographs. The feature traces Picasso's life from childhood into old age, recalls his women and assays his politics., 2. Chicano grievances are aired in a Los Angeles segment. Correspondent Hughes Rudd interviews members of the Chicano movement, political and religious leaders, and police officials. Also: footage of the August 1970 riot in which three Chicanos were killed.

TV Urged to Be Self Critical

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke, (R—Mass.), thinks broadcasters should criticize each other's performances.

"Why doesn't NBC criticize what and how CBS and ABC are doing their job — and vice-versa," Brooke said in a Friday speech to the Massachusetts Broadcasters' Association.

"What commandment, what canon, what etiquette-imperative keeps you in the news media silent about each other's foibles?" Brooke asked.

"Breaking that sound-sight-print barrier would be a revolutionary stride toward the kind of fully informed American citizen which the patriots in Philadelphia opted for when they framed the words of the first amendment," he said.

Broadening his challenge to the news media in general, Brooke said "a falsehood, bad editorial judgment, or slanted news coverage is best corrected by one's journalistic rivals and peers.

"It is in this area, in my judgment, where all the media have failed to reach anything like full potential."

Brooke told the broadcasters "you have a vital watchdog role to perform and you would better serve the public if you barked — and even 'bit' — each other now and then."

He said "as these comments may have suggested, the vice president and I drastically differ on what is wrong with the communications industry in this country.

"My objection is to blandness, sameness, homogenization of the news — the unwillingness for example, of the networks to take on each other as well as the other titans in American life.

"By all means, print and speak facts and opinions about the politics and policies of senators and government at every level," Brooke said.

But if we are to really have what Elmer Davis advocated so eloquently — a third dimension in news coverage — the why as well as the who, what, when — your critical rule must extend to your brethren in the fourth estate."

JIMMY STEWART'S 'WIFE'

Julie Adams' 1st TV Series

By DAN LEWIS
TV Time Staff Writer

NEW YORK — Back in 1952, Julie Adams won the role of Jimmy Stewart's leading lady in Bend in the River. When the film was completed, she and Stewart went separate ways, and never saw each other again until last June, even though they both lived in the same town all that time.

Now they're back together, as the husband and wife in Stewart's first television series. In fact, it's also Julie's first TV series.

Now married to actor Ray Danton, mother of two sons, eight and 14, Julie has the credibility of her experience as a mother, but playing the role opposite Stewart in this series presented some complications. She may have two sons of her own, but in the series she's a two-generation mother of a 28-year-old son, as well as an eight-year-old.

STILL YOUNG

"They told me at first I looked too young for the role," Julie recalled as we talked about it during an interview in Hollywood. "I went to the test feeling I wouldn't get the job, but I figured it would be a very nice day working with Mr. Stewart.

"But things are changing," she continued. "There are young grandmothers. And youth alone does not retain young looks. Look at Alexis Smith (long-ago movie star who made a dramatic leap to Broadway stardom in Follies) making the cover of Time doing a high kick. She's as young-looking, beautiful and trim today as she was 20 years ago.

Very little effort, in fact, has been made to age Julie. Her hair has been shortened only slightly, and she uses only a minimum of make-up.

"I have a very close friend who is a little older and has children in their 20s. I looked at her, observed her for a time and tried to pick out the mannerisms. She's a happy person, and her family is alive."

It is ironic that Julie's career, after time out while she raised a family, is beginning to re-emerge in two consecutive prominent roles, both casting her as a mother of older children then she herself has.

Before joining Stewart in his series, Julie spent three weeks in Peru on location with Dennis Hopper's recently released film, The Last Movie. She plays a jazzy-type mother whose daughter is in her 20s.

"I found it exciting, working with Hopper," Julie declared. "It was an unusual experience. A lot of it was improvisational. There was a structure, a screenplay, but so much of it was created as we went along."

Her immediate concern, however, is the Jimmy Stewart Show every Sunday night on NBC. The early ratings were not encouraging as the show got caught between the powerhouse films on the new CBS movie series on Sundays and the second half of the long-running FBI series on ABC.

Julie hopes the series will catch on the way so many of the family situation series have on TV.

"The country is in such a turmoil, people are longing to see happy families, and warm comedy on television," she said. "We do have a good time slot for capturing the family audiences with Disney as our lead-in show."

Disney and the Jimmy Stewart Show on NBC is the alternative to those looking for light entertainment now on Sundays. The rest of the programming is two movies (CBS at 7:30 and ABC at 9) or adventure drama such as Bonanza, and Bold Ones on NBC, Cade's County on CBS following its movies, and The FBI preceeding ABC's film at 9.

Firms Sue Cosby For $2.4 Million

BOSTON (UPI) — A breach of contract suit seeking $2.4 million in damages from comedian Bill Cosby has been filed in U.S. District Court.

An attorney for the plaintiffs disclosed the action Monday and also said a writ of attachment against Cosby's new farm in Shelborne has been filed at the Franklin County Registry of Deeds.

Bringing the suit were Acrite Industries and Frigidtemp Coep., both of New York, and Richard Packing Corp. of Minnesota. They claimed an agreement was made with Cosby to set up a national chain of franchise restaurants bearing his name.

After an initial investment of $100,000 each, the suit said, Cosby refused to allow his name to be used.

The entertainer has moved to Western Massachusetts to do graduate work at the University of Massachusetts school of education.

TV Ad Men Squeamish Over Buffalo Slaughter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Stan Freberg, the funniest man in advertising, and Stanley Kramer, a sober-sided movie-maker, are united in outrage over refusal of networks to run a commercial for Kramer's new film.

It was Freberg who coined the catch-phraise "Funnier than 'Cleopatra for Kramer's It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," triggering an uproar in Hollywood.

He was accused of kicking Darryl Zanuck when he was down because Cleopatra almost capsized the 20th Century-Fox.

Now it is with righteous wrath that Freberg-Kramer find themselves locked out of television advertising for Bless The Beasts and Children. The picture deals with a group of children attempting to save a buffalo herd. It's message is humanitarian and ecological.

In his usual oblique approach Freberg filmed a one-minute commercial to hypo the movie on the tube. Its theme is anti-violence.

All three local censors of NBC, CBS and ABC refused to run it.

"You know why," cried Freberg, his voice trembling with emotion, "They said it was too violent.

"All we had on it was a stock shot of a bunch of buffalo being slaughtered. It's not as if we set up the scene. It's a very old one."

The commercial opens on a talk show with an actor representing The American Gun Cult Assn. Condemning Bless The Beasts and The Children because it is a vicious attack on American hunters, "Just because we like to shot us a few buffalo now and then."

When another performer accuses the buffalo hunter of slaughter, he reacts by identifying the "bleeding hearts" as suffering from "the bambi syndrome."

Freberg plays the commercial for pure satire as the hunter concludes: "I wouldn't let my kids see 'Bless the Beasts and Children' . . . not unless I wanted 'em to grow up hating guns."

Network censors, not particularly known for high humor, said the spot commercial made it appear to be part of a news program, made reference to a private organization (The National Rifle Assn.) and that the buffalo scenes were too violent.

"I called one of the censors and said that our commercial was in better taste although more violent than the one of a man riding a boat in the tank of a commode," Freberg said.

"The man very seriously informed me it wasn't violent. Then I asked him what would happen if someone flushed the commode by mistake. You know what that guy said? He said, 'Then it would be violent.' "

Freberg and Kramer have the American Humane Association on their side with a letter stating the movie is humanitarian. It also is rated for general audiences.

Satirist Freberg and producer-director Kramer said network censors suffer "The Little Old Lady from Pasadena Syndrome."

Behind Scenes With 'The Man's' Girl

By MIMI MEAD
TV Time Staff Writer

NEW YORK — One of the most interesting people in ABC's new series, The Man and the City, is the Man's executive secretary Marian Crane, or Mala Powers.

Mala has been acting since she was eight years old. She is an author of children's books. She is an authority on the Mexican jumping bean. She was at one time the world's youngest diving champion. She is attractive, intelligent and an expert at juggling many things at one time, such as the new series, a relatively new marriage and being the mother of a 14-year-old boy.

"I took on the role of Marian for several reasons," she explained. "I wanted to work with Tony." (Anthony Quinn plays Mayor Alcala, the Man of The Man and the City) "I worked with him once before, in the film City Beneath the Sea with Robert Ryan, and I loved it. That was one reason.

"The other was that it was six blocks from our house," she added with a smile, "which sounds like it doesn't mean much, but in this crazy business it makes a great difference.

DEBUT AT 16

"Then too I have a 14-year-old son, and we're very close and if he wants to see me he can hop on his bike and come over. And I work only three days out of the six. They can call for more, but they have to pay me for more; and the way their minds work," she said wryly, "if they call me then they'll use me and I won't have to just sit around. I didn't want to work a six-day week."

Mala, the daughter of a newspaperman and a drama coach, made her professional debut on radio at the age of 16, studied at UCLA with the legendary Michael Chekhov (she is now executrix of his estate) and made her movie debut in Outrage, directed by Ida Lupino. To the public, however, one of her most memorable roles was as Roxanne in Cyrano de Bergerac with Jose Ferrer.

Looking back on that, Mala said thoughtfully, "I couldn't enjoy doing Roxanne in that it was the most prestigious picture I ever made and a great break for me. From the point of view of having fun, no, it was not my favorite picture. It was too awing. It was a classic, after all. As far as parts are concerned, I suppose Outrage was my favorite."

Not surprisingly for someone who studied with Chekhov, Mala prefers theatre work to movies, and is on the West Coast Board of Directors of ANTA.

"I prefer doing what I want to do on stage; that is," she added, smiling. "All those things are conditional and reltive. If it isn't exactly what I want to do, then I suppose I'd rather do it in a film than eight times a week on the stage."

Mala has worked out an acceptable working-commuting arrangement with her husband, publisher M. Hughes Miller whom she married 17 months ago. He works out of New York and commutes back and forth across the country. "I used to commute a lot more with him," Mala said ruefully, "but I can't now with the series. He does a lot more travelling than I wish he did.

YOU ADAPT

"He's wonderful about it, though. My husband understood thoroughly when we first met that I was not going to be able to stay at home and be a lady of leisure and travel all over the world with him at the drop of a hat. I'm not a women's lib lady by any means, but I do have my own needs.

"I've never been a quarreller with destiny. What destiny throws your way, you accept and make the best of that you can. So if he were suddenly transferred to North Africa I would go with him, of course, and try to make the best of it. But I would probably end up giving acting classes to the natives," she added with a twinkle. "You adapt. You do the best you can."

Mala met her husband at a party several years ago. "I had written a children's book and he was then vice president of Bobbs Merrill (Children's book publishers) and we got into a terrible argument. It was a literary party and they were taping it for a radio program, and we argued right along on the air.

"Then we sent each other Christmas cards for several years. I didn't see him for years and then I wrote another children's book, about Mexican jumping beans, and I thought, 'Well, I'll open up this old publishing contact again.' And I did and we were eventually married, but we are still always arguing about children's books!"

Mala Powers plays secretary to the mayor

Mala has guested on innumerable TV shows, but has only once been on a series regularly. "I was the next door neighbor the last year of 'Hazel.' It was a great part because you didn't have to have all the virtues of the heroines. I was selfish. I was thoughtless and I was also very funny sometimes.

"So I am used to doing a series. I think the Man and the City would interfere with my personal life as little as any series. The role of Marian doesn't leave room for a lot of characterization, but some. I grew up with Michael Chekhov, who said that it's so uninteresting to do nothing. You must make some characterization of any part, no matter what. So, I've tried to work out some differences between the character and me, just to keep interested."

Mala Powers is a fortunate combination of an extremely feminine woman who is able to fulfill herslf outside her private life. "It's because of my husband, really. He's very sympathetic with my need to work and have self-expression. He says he's very grateful in having been in a field all his life where he could express himself, and he wouldn't deny that to someone he loves.

"You know," she added warmly, "I think men have it so rough. People are always talking about women's lib these days, but men are told so young what it means to be a man and what they must do. I remember once in the superamrket when he was very small my son was crying, and some old biddy came up and said something about being a little man. I could have killed her. Why shouldn't men be allowed to express their feelings as women are?

"Working with Tony (Quinn) is great, you know. He's got great vitality. I think in many ways there's a similarity between my husband and Tony, not as people but as types, in the sense that they're both terribly intense, rather volatile people. I have come to understand them, as some people don't and I didn't either when I was younger.

"I mean, they can get terribly excited or explosive, and then five minutes later they won't remember anything about it. Now, I've never had that experience with Tony," she added grinning, "but I know that he is that same, vital, explosive type.

"One thing I do know: it's a type that I like very much."

Having struck a working balance between the series and her home life, Mala says she has every intention of continuing to act on the stage.

"Acting in repertory every night, for instance, I think would be injurious to my marriage. It might not be to everybody's but it would be to mine. But to do a play, say for eight months every two or three years would be fun. I'd like that.

"And undoubtedly I'll write more children's books. It's a great interest of mine. I'm editing one at the moment, and I couldn't imagine not writing more." And so on she goes, juggling motherhood, the series, acting, running a home and marriage — and undoubtedly arguing about children's books with her husband.

Shirley's World a Disappointing One

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Shirley MacLaine has much to offer television but her first series, Shirley's World (ABC) is a thudding, painfully disappointing show. In the early episodes, the scenery is the star.

Perhaps we expected too much. Shirley is now 37, an author with a good book to her credit, an impressive list of film credits and a career that reads like a fable made from spun sugar.

This is the girl who was born in Richmond, Va., and grew up in Arlington, where her life revolved around ballet. In her autobiography, Don't Fall Off The Mountain (Bantam Books), Shirley describes her "Lonely Life" as a teen-ager, catching a bus for high school at 6:30 a.m. and often not returning home from ballet class until 1:30 the following morning.

As Shirley recalls in her autobiography: "My dinner usually was saltine crackers smothered in ketchup and tabasco, and with them, a quart of ginger ale. I always ate standing up, and then I'd stagger to bed, rarely before 2 o'clock. Not surprisingly, my snacks produced nightmares, and the nightmares were always the same: Night after night I missed the bus."

After graduation Shirley went to New York and the spun-sugar fable began. She was understudying Carol Haney in Pajama Game and Carol broke an ankle. Shirley went on, was offered a movie contract and wound up as a star in Alfred Hitchcock's The Trouble With Harry. She was 20 years old.

'RING-A-DING'

She got to Hollywood and earned a reputation as a "real ring-a-ding." She became the mascot of Frank Sinatra's clan and the word used most often to describe her was "kooky." She was on the cover of Time Magazine, which decided she was the "brightest face, freshest character . . . in Hollywood."

She was nominated four times for an Academy Award and four times the award went to some other nominee. She made many movies; some were excellent and many of them were bad. She took to roaming the world, turning up with a civil rights group in the American South, in Africa and in the Far East. Her husband, Steve Parker, settled in Japan. Her 14-year-old daughter, Stephanie Sachiok, is in school in Switzerland.

MacLAINE
. . . poor showing

Shirley has often been called "a free spirit." Of her husband, who has become a successful film and theatrical producer, she told one interviewer: "We have a very deep friendship."

She wasn't paid much money during the first nine years she worked in movies. She had a long-term contract with producer Hal Wallis and Shirley describes him this way: "He had a very special feeling for his forty-odd million. He couldn't bear to part with a dime of it."

Throughout her career Shirley played a long collection of brainless floozies. She described herself as the ". . . prize doormat. Name me a victim. I've played her, or I can, especially if she has a few laughs."

NEW FREEDOM

She was supposed to have a new kind of freedom when she agreed 18 months ago to make a TV series, along with feature motion pictures. She was to have a piece of the action and the veteran Sheldon Leonard was to be executive producer of her TV series.

Leonard is a marvellous man; perhaps the most intelligent producer in film work. But he has had a long string of losers in TV. Situation comedy looks easy on paper, and it is one kind of program that is done best on TV. But it is also a fragile commodity and the failures have far outnumbered the successes.

In this one, Shirley Maclaine as "Shirley Logan" is a photographer who gets assignments that take her all over the world. This is supposed to provide a frame for drama, comedy and romance. It also provides travel, to which Miss Maclaine is addicted.

So far, fine. But ABC-TV scheduled the series at 9:30 p.m. on Wednesdays. This put the half-hour comedy against the final portions of Medical Centre (CBS) and NBC Mystery Movie. To compete in such a time period, Shirley's World needed to be a truly distinctive series, a powerhouse attraction. It isn't.

There is much to admire in Shirley Maclaine, particularly after reading an autobiography that is searching, obsorbing and written with a lack of pretense that is remarkable in a first book. But there isn't a thing to admire about a TV series called Shirley's World.

Hirohito: What Was He Up To?

By DAVID PERMAN
The London Observer

Emperor Hirohito walks past West German airmen on arrival in Bonn

The visit to Europe by Emperor Hirohito of Japan had an air of oriental mystery about it.

There have been extensive explanations, of course, of Hirohito's personal motives for breaking with the tradition of the Chrysanthemum Throne to become the first emperor of his line to travel abroad and of his reasons for choosing Europe. He is reported to have looked back with gratitude to his only other visit to Europe in 1921 as Crown Prince. He is now 70 years old and, according to some reports, may soon abdicate.

But this does not explain why people in Japan and elsewhere are regarding this visit as in some way symbolic of a new Japanese stance in the world. What sort of stance should that be, and how does the Emperor's visit help? It is not the typical Chinese-style diplomatic mystery with a deliberate attempt to mystify Western observers, but a mystery that is wholly Japanese, like a Shinto rite, with the participants moving almost instinctively.

Japan, despite her great economic strength — or perhaps because of that strength — is going through a period of diplomatic weakness. Since its defeat and occupation by the Americans in 1945, it has learned to rely upon the political support, the foreign policy guidance, and the open markets and the nuclear defence of the United States. But in economic terms Japan is now threatening its protector and learning that in many ways American protection is not as reliable as it was.

The Japanese realized the full force of this, of course, when President Nixon announced his coming visit to China and later the imposition of the import surcharge to protect the dollar. But many Japanese were beginning to worry about their relationship with the Americans long before that.

There are five specific worries. The first and most potent concerns China. The government of Eisaku Sato has now agreed to co-sponsor the American resolution at the United Nations to admit Communist China and yet keep a seat for Nationalist China (Formosa.)

The great fear in Japanese government circles, though, is that the Americans, having persuaded the Japanese to take up this unpopular cause, will somehow back away leaving Tokyo holding the baby in the face of widespread domestic opposition. This fear has been voiced by the Foreign Minister, Takeo Fukuda, although he added that he himself did not distrust the Americans.

The second Japanese worry concerns defence. At the moment there is no substantial reason to doubt the American commitment to defend Japan under the terms of the joint security treaty, renewed last year. But the Americans are putting strong pressure on the Sato government to take a more active role in its own defence, something the Japanese are unwilling to do both because of hostility at home, and because it would lend support to Chinese charges of a revived Japanese militarism.

Two other worries concern economic issues. Already the dollar crisis has forced the Japanese to float the yen. They are now trying to prevent a massive increase in the value of the yen against the dollar, which is something the Americans are strongly pressing for.

Then there are trade restrictions. This month the United States imposed tariff restrictions on Japanese textile imports and negotiations between the two governments to remove restrictions are getting nowhere. The Japanese have noted the growth of anti-Japanese feeling in American business circles and wonder whether there is to be a return to the 1920s, the era of the Oriental Exclusion Bill.

Then lastly there is the agreement for the return of Okinawa to Japanese sovereignty, which has yet to be ratified by the U.S. Congress and the Japanese Diet. There are fear that this could be the occasion for the United States to exert all sorts of diplomatic, defence and economic concessions from Japan.

But despite the fears which Japanese attach to the present state of their relations with their old protector there is no alternative to that relationship at the moment. The Emperor's stopover in Alaska for a brief meeting with President Nixon before coming on to Europe signified just that.

Could the Japanese not find some way out of these difficulties in Europe? Certainly, they would like to increase their trade in Europe, especially if there are going to be new tariff walls around the American market. But the Europeans are not exactly anxious to welcome an invasion of their markets by cheaply-produced Japanese goods. But this objective is not going to be achieved through the State visit of the Emperor and Empress, who in any case are not yet relegated to the status of economic envoys.

What the Emperor's European visit was really aimed at is acceptance for Japan among the peoples of Europe, many of them, like British and Dutch, still with bitter memories of the Second World War. It was easier for the Americans to accept and forgive the Japanese through the process of occupation and through the special relationship of the last 26 years. It has taken much longer for the Europeans. And yet in Japanese eyes the Europeans have had success in achieving a more independent relationship with the United States and this will be even more the case when the European Economic Community is enlarged to include Britain.

Here is something that the Japanese would like to emulate and adapt to their own use, just as in the past they have adapted European democracy and industry. In fact, this is really the theme of the Emperor's visit. As he said at a state banquet in London: "We have learned much from you in the process of building up a modern state during the past century, and wish to express our appreciation to you in the form of joint efforts with you for the preservation of tranquillity in the world."

The Brain Tinkerers

By BOYCE RENSBURGER

When psychologist Kenneth B. Clark proposed to his colleagues last month that scientists be mobilized to develop a peace pill that "all power-controlling leaders" would be required to take, there were many outside his field who scoffed. They called the idea politically unrealistic and technically impossible.

In a scattering of laboratories around the world, however, there were scientists who saw nothing funny in the notion. Over the past few years, they have been learning to tinker with the brains of animals and men and to manipulate their thoughts and behavior.

Though their methods are still crude and not always predictable, there is little doubt that the next few years will bring a frightening array of refined techniques for making human beings act according to the will of the psychotechnologist.

Aware of the dangers, Dr. Clark, in his presidential address to the American Psychological Association, stressed the need to develop a moral and ethical framework to deal with the questions it raises. The research itself, he said, was imperative — make possible the chemical pacification of national leaders who might otherwise initiate a nuclear war.

Perhaps the most famous demonstration of the potential of psychotechnology was an experiment carried out several years ago by Yale University's Jose M. R. Delgado. He implanted a radio-controlled electrode within the brain of a bull, a variety bred to respond with a raging charge when it sees any human being. But when Dr. Delgado pressed a button on a transmitter, sending a signal to a battery-powered receiver attached to the bull's horns, an impulse went in the bull's brain and the animal would cease his charge.

After several stimulations, the bull's naturally aggressive behavior disappeared. A similar device has been implanted in the brain of a man given to uncontrollable bursts of rage. When he feels such an attack coming, he presses a button on his battery pack and remains peaceable. The technique is known as ESB (electrical stimulation of the brain).

Related to ESB is CSB, chemical stimulation of the brain, a small but growing field. Instead of wires, scientists implant fine tubes in the brain through which various chemicals are dripped to produce changes in emotions.

Although CSB makes it possible to target a chemical more precisely, the necessity of brain surgery to implant the tube limits its use. Far more practical for treating a large number of persons is the pill.

CLARK
. . . peace through chemistry

The range of facts and possibilities in mind-affecting drugs prompted David Krech, who specializes in this kind of research at the University of California at Berkeley, to write in Saturday Review:

"American educators now talk a great deal about the innovative hardware of education, about computer-assisted instruction . . . and other devices. In the not too distant future they may well be talking about enzyme-assisted instruction, protein memory consolidators, anti-biotic memory repellers, and the chemistry of the brain."

Perhaps Japan Is Aiming for No. 1

By ANTHONY ROWLEY
The Times, London

LONDON — Japan would emerge unscathed from the current international monetary crisis and from the American import restrictions. It could then go on to surpass the Soviet Union and to challenge the United States in economic power.

These were the views that were confidently expressed by experts on Japan speaking in London recently at a seminar on Japanese finance organized by the Times of London in association with the Japan international bank.

A "substantial" upward revaluation of the yen, followed by an upsurge in Japanese investment in foreign portfolio securities, was predicted by a leading Japanese economist and banker.

Shogo Watanabe, director of the Japan Committee for Economic Development, listed the industry areas in Europe and elsewhere where Japanese investment was likely to be concentrated in future.

The petroleum, coal, non-ferrous metal, uranium, computer, aerospace, service and leisure, life insurance and tobacco industries were all areas unavailable to investors in Japan and ones on which Japanese investment trusts, insurance companies and other institutions could be expected to concentrate.

Once Japan's exchange control regulations were relaxed, Japanese industry would have considerable funds available for takeover of foreign companies in Europe and elsewhere, to provide themselves with sales outlets and other acquisitions.

The prospects for an early liberalization of capital transactions appeared remote however. Direct investment overseas by Japanese industry and by foreign industry in Japan would remain restricted in the foreseeable future. So also would foreign portfolio investment in Japanese securities.

Hisao Kanamori, deputy director of the Research Institute of Japan's economic planning agency, said he did not think that a revaluation of the yen would cause any serious harm to the Japanese economy.

Neither did he believe the 10 per cent import surcharge in America would seriously affect Japan's exports.

'It seems that the Japanese economy has within it a virtuous circle of growth, through which the continual high economic growth encourages positive investment, and thereby the export competitive power is so strengthened as to enable the high growth to continue further.

"If Japan's strong capacity for change in the past is taken into consideration, it should not be impossible for the country to maintain its real growth rate at about 10 per cent," he said.

"If Japan's economy were supposed to continue at the same rate as in the past 15 years (15.2 per cent annually in nominal terms), and the United States economy were supposed to grow at the rate of 71 per cent annually, then Japan's per capital gross national product would become more than 59,000 in 1982, surpassing that of the United States," said Kanamori.

He said he did not think labor shortages, a decline in the national will to work, inflation, pollution and the living environment, or changes in the wold economy would impede Japan's future economic growth, as was often suggested

Francois Missoffe, formerly French Ambassador in Tokyo, suggested it was probable Japan would shortly outstrip the Soviet Union in economic power and then start to catch up with the United States.

It would be wrong to suppose the Japanese government would seek to defy the United States over its recent economic measures, Missoffe said.

"The excellent understanding reached in economic matters and the maintenance by America of the nuclear shield to defend Japan appear for the time being to outweigh considerations of wounded pride."

A Fan's Confused Notes

By RUSSELL BAKER

There had been scattered reports, largely ignored or disbelieved, of sudden displacements for several months before the thing became a national embarrassment: A welder in Cos Cob, Conn., told the press that while watching a football game on his set one July afternoon he saw a hockey player suddenly skate onto the gridiron, intercept a pass and slam the ball into the net for a touchdown.

Such reports were typical of the early incidents. A steeplejack in Fargo said that his set had suddenly shown Wilt Chamberlain dribbling a baseball. A pastry chef in Paducah told of watching a shortstop kick off for Notre Dame. It is now known that many persons probably witnessed these displacements, but kept quiet about them because they did not want everybody saying they drank too much.

Whatever the explanation, no one was prepared for the first major incident, which occurred just before dawn that day on every television set tuned to the CBS network. It was an early July morning and the scheduled show — CBS's Dawn Game of the Week — had been in progress since 5:30 a.m. The Dallas Cowboys were leading the Goose Bay Honkers by a score of 17-0 on the strength of two touchdowns and a field goal.

Dallas kicked off on the small screen to the Honkers, and fans in an estimated 35 million living rooms saw Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles scoop up the ball on one bounce and whip it to Dave Johnson at second base, who threw it to Boog Powell at first for the double play, retiring the Cowboys in the top of the sixth inning.

Millions of fans drugged with sleeplessness blinked for the first time in days, because, being fans, they knew very well that the Orioles were not supposed to be on television until 10:30 that night, when they were to play the Caracas Crackers.

CBS stated that this curious displacement might have resulted from heavy sun-spot activity. Two hours later, however, NBC had an even more severe shock when millions of viewers saw Joe Garagiola interviewing Willis Reed, the celebrated New York basketball player, in the dressing room of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Jack Nicklaus took a little something off his slider," Willis was saying, "and I swung. I knew it was going out of the park when I felt it hit the bat."

By nightfall there was panic in the televised sports industry. Howard Cosell and Don Meredith of ABC, who had shown up in Miami prepared to try to pump life into a football game between the Miami Dolphins and the New England Patriots, found that their monitors would show nothing but an ice hockey game between the Montreal Canadiens and Muhammad Ali.

At 2:30 a.m. the Super Duper Whooper Bowl for the Summer Basketball Championship of All Three Networks was due to begin on all three networks. If you were sitting by your TV set that morning with a refrigerator full of beer — as who was not in those days? — you still remember all too well what you saw.

"The greatest game ever played," the sports writers have called it. And no wonder. There was Fran Tarkenton's amazing last-second scramble off tackle between centre court and the ring posts for the game-tying home run.

Then, when Willy Mays intercepted Arnold Palmer's 25-foot putt to take the lead by two lengths over Seabiscuit, the stage was set for the magnificent, come-from-behind clutch play of goalie Ken Dryden who, refusing to give up despite melting ice and a muddy track, broke through to the dressing room and put through an emergency call to a TV repair man.

It was useless, of course.

The damage was too deep to be repaired by engineering skill alone. A totally new plant, certain studies suggested, might eliminate the problem, but existing equipment—cameras, engineers, wires, relays, tubes, transmitters, monitors, lights, receiving sets, announcers, describers of play, shaving creams, tires, batteries, beer, razors, local stations, audiences — all had been so overburdened with sport during the long years of their existence that somewhere along the chain some vital link had lost the ability to discriminate.

President Nixon proposed a crash program to get sport back into focus, but desisted after engineers explained that it might require them to throw away the entire existing audience, which would include not only the president's constituents but also the president.

In any case, as the networks soon discovered, very soon the fans seemed to prefer the jumble. They had been so sated with incredible ninth-inning rallies, fantastic last-minute gridiron victories, mythological overtime occurrences on the courts, and Cinderella stories on the ice, track, boards, canvas, grass, mat, sawdust, cinders, oval, asphalt, water, high board, snow slopes, turf and greens, that it was a welcome change to see the winning touchdown pass gobbled up at third base by Brooks Robinson, whipped over to second and relayed to first for a brand new Indy 500 record.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto Sharply Higher

Prices on the Canadian markets were sharply higher following the federal government's announcement of tax cuts and other measures designed to stimulate the sagging economy.

At Toronto, industrial issues by mid-afternoon retreated somewhat from broad advances recorded early in the session, but remained sharply higher.

Trading, heavy during the first hour, tapered off near the close.

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.47 million shares compared with 1.18 million at the same time Thursday.

Canadian Tire A was up 2¼ to $31⅞, Electrohome 2¼ to $37½, Seagrams 1¼ to $53½, Irwin Toy 1¼ to $17 and Pine Point 1¼ to $23¼.

Canadian Superior Oil Rose ⅝ to $38⅝, Tara ⅜ to $12⅝, Inco ⅝ to $29, Noranda ¾ to $27¼, Asamera ¾ to $15 and Royal Bank ⅝ to $26.

AT NEW YORK, analysts said investors lack confidence because of concern about the economy.

AT MONTREAL prices were mixed to stronger near the close of moderate trading.

Credit Foncier gained $2¾ to 55¾, Dominion Bridge $1⅝ to $22½, Canada Cement Lafarge $1½ to $41½, Zeller's $1½ to 16¾, Stelco $1¼ to $22⅝, Simpson's 51⅛ to $19⅞, International Utilities $1 to $36⅞.

AT LONDON hesitation was evident on the market after Wall Street's sharp Thursday decline. Leading industrials recovered somewhat after an easier opening, but still were down about three pence.

British American Tobacco led tobacco shares lower in the wake of this week's anti-smoking warnings from the government.

Hudson's Bay was mixed on moderate volume.

AT VANCOUVER prices were up. Pre-noon volume was 883,968 shares.

Mercuria led the industrial issues and was unchanged at $1.05 after trading 3,000 shares. Block Bros. was up .10 at $2.90 and George Parling was trading at $2.50.

Peace River Petroleum topped the oils and was up a half-cent at .15 on a turnover of 10,010 shares. Freehold was up .02 at .65 and Stampede Internativnal was up .06 at .65.

In the mines, Slocan was down .01 at .78 on a turnover of 49,000 shares. Calta was up .05 at $1.02, and Great Northern was off .03 at .94.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG C(p) — Trading continued fairly active with prices generally higher at the close of the grain exchange today.

Rapeseed followed the Chicago soybean market as it developed a trend upwards on commission house and crusher buying and some exporter interest.

Exporters were active in flax, offsetting some hedge offerings. Oats, barley and rye had light local and commercial trade with some intermonth spreading.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybeans futures prices advanced in brisk activity on the Board of Trade.

Responding to a United States-Japan textile agreement and the promise of a better export picture, bean and corn futures bounded upward. Soybeans gained as much as 4 to 5 cents a bushel at midsession. The corn advances were more modest.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Rothman's

Unit cigarette sales rose 7.6 per cent in the quarter ended Sept. 30, reports Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., despite advertising bans.

Sales amounted to $3.3 million in the period.

A year ago, the company had consolidated net earnings of $2.42 million (31 cents a share) on gross sales of $56 million.

Abitibi

Third-quarter earnings improved to give Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. a nine-month profit to Sept. 30 of $2.66 million (12 cents a share) compared with $2.85 million (13 cents) for the period last year.

Sales totalled $207.46 million, down from $213.2 million. Abitibi said about half of the reduction resulted from the higher value of the Canadian dollar.

Third-quarter profit was $2.27 million compared with a loss of $255,000 during the corresponding period of 1970. Sales rose 6 per cent, but earnings were higher because of reduced provision for income taxes of a subsidiary company.

Issues

Two new financing issues Thursday were snapped up without public participation as the bond market continues to enjoy favor in Canada.

A $25 million eight-year issue of Canadian dollar bonds offered by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development at 7¼ per cent sold within the hour before allotments could be made. The issue was taken up by a syndicate headed by A. E. Ames and Co., Wood Gundy Securities Ltd. and Dominion Securities Ltd. at 99¾ to yield 7.29 per cent.

Inland Natural Gas offered $7½ million of 8¼ per cent bonds, which apparently was taken up by Dominion Securities without other dealer participation.

Kaiser

Third quarter operations of Kaiser Resources Ltd. turned around recent losses to show net earnings of $37,277 from sales of $26 million. But in the nine months, consolidated net loss amounted to $13 million from $55 million in sales.

The company said it had improved productivity, efficiency in the preparation plant, better maintenance and less labor turnover. Coal quality also has been upgraded. Modifications to the plant continue.

A year ago, third quarter loss amounted to $1.4 million on sales of $2.29 million.

FCA

Net profit amounting to $322,092 for the three months ended Sept. 30 is reported by Financial Collection Agencies Ltd., based in Montreal and with offices throughout North America, U.K., Ireland and Puerto Rico.

A year ago the figure stood at $184,588, the increase amounting to 75 per cent. Before tax profit was $607,720 vs. $346,970.

Accounts for collection rose from $30.3 million to $40.8 million.

Homestead

Canadian Homestead Oils Ltd. had earnings of $71,000 or 1.5 cents a share during the three months ended Aug. 31.

In the comparable period a year earlier the company earned $111,000 or 2.4 cents a share.

Gross revenue increased 14 per cent to $693,000, mostly as the result of higher crude oil production which was offset slightly by a decline in natural gas sales.

Fully diluted, share earnings were one cent compared with 1.6 cents.

Bond Clean-Up Rate Favorable

Successful sale of its first issue through the New York market is credited with obtaining a favorable rate on a supplementary issue Thursday by B.C. Municipal Financing Authority.

Described by chairman Hugh Curtis as a cleanup following the new York financing two weeks ago, the $1,258,700 additional amount was tendered in Canada and three groups bid on it.

Successful bidders were a group headed by Wood Gundy Securities Ltd., and Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd. Others in the syndicate were McLeod, Young, Weir and Co. Ltd., Bank of Montreal and Bell Gouinlock and Co.

The 25-year serial debenture issue was priced at 99.573 and bears interest at 7¾ per cent, for a net cost to the authority of 7.803 per cent.

This compares with the $20 million issue in U.S. funds at 8.375 per cent placed in the New York market, and an Ontario regional district's financing on Wednesday of this week which was placed at par for 8 per cent.

"We are extremely pleased at the rate," remarked Curtis. "It shows our breakthrough in New York firmly established the municipal financing authority in the Canadian market."

The money was needed to meet requirements for capital financing of waterworks, sewers and pollution abatement projects of B.C. regional districts.

Strong Recovery Predicted

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Walter Heller, former presidential economic adviser, predicted today a strong economic recovery in 1972 that will yield the first $100 billion advance in gross national product in U.S. history.

He predicted a "real" growth rate of 6½ per cent in the GNP — the sum of the value of goods and services sold during 1972 and a three-per-cent rise due to inflation.

Heller made the estimates in his annual economic forecast released today by National City Bank of Minneapolis. Now a professor of economics at the University of Minnesota, Heller was economic adviser to Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Heller said the GNP, expected to be about $1,050 billion by the end of this year, probably will hit $1,150 billion by the end of 1972.

Among his projections for the year:

—Rising consumer confidence coupled with rising after-tax incomes will lend to greater consumer spending;

—Home building will continue "on a high plateau";

—Business investment should accelerate;

—The U.S. budget and an improved balance of trade will aid expansion.

Gas Reserve Count-Urged

BANFF (CP) — The extent of natural gas reserves must be determined as accurately as possible because of the North American energy demand, John Maybin, president of the Canadian Gas Association, said Thursday.

Before the National Energy Board decides on the amont of gas Canada can spare for export, a careful evaluation should be made to determine the amount available to the growing Canadian market.

He told the 15th annual meeting of the Canadian Petroleum Tax Society that although Canada's ultimate reserves have been estimated at 700 trillion cubic feet, only 40 per cent of the amount has been discovered.

"I think it is most important that we find out as quickly as possible whether it is still reasonable to keep assuming that these areas are going to be as prolific as we hope.

"Personally, I don't see how we can resove the problem of how much gas we can spare for export except, perhaps, on a very tentative basis until we reach some conclusions about the outlook for major gas discoveries."

New Orders On Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — New orders for manufactured goods placed in August totalled $3.9 billion, up 5.2 per cent from revised figures for July, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

At the end of August, Canadian manufacturers had an accumulation of $4.49 billion in unfilled orders, almost as much as at the end of July.

Shipments during August were valued at $3.91 billion, up from $3.7 billion during July.

The statistics bureau said that when seasonally adjusted to take into account usual monthly fluctuations in business activity, manufacturers' shipments in August were up 7.1 per cent, new orders were 6.7 per cent higher, and unfilled orders at the end of the month were down by half of one per cent.

$1 Million In Payouts

TORONTO (CP) — The National Contingency Fund announced Thursday it has authorized payment of an additional $500,000 to certain clients of bankrupt Malone Lynch Securities Ltk., bringing the total paid by the fund to about $1 million.

The fund's board of governors said they have agreed to "make up whatever difference there may be to bona fide members of the investing public dealing with the firm at arm's length."

The fund was created in 1969 by Canada's major stock exchanges and the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada to assist investors facing losses due to the insolvency of a member firm.

CANADA'S FATE

A Lap Backward In the Air Race

If you think I'm going to give up on the subject of Concorde just because I see you unsuccessfully smothering your tiny yawns you badly underestimate my manic tenacity.

I happen to believe, you see, that Canada, a nation at the geographical crossroads of the world's flyways, is in danger of falling 10 years or more behind in The Aviation Age now poised at the edge of its supersonic break-through. I happen to believe that if the top brass of our two national airlines don't bestir themselves off their broad behinds there'll simply be no catching up. Yawn if you will, but that's going to be a mighty big consideration in this nation's future.

I have on my desk this morning a compilation of reports by some of the world's foremost aviation writers and experts who have been aboard recent test flights of the Anglo-French faster-than-sound commercial transport which already, in its first Atlantic crossing to South America, has shown us a glimpse of aviation's future.

They are unreserved paens of praise for a magnificent flying machine that will answer a purely commercial demand and, perhaps more importantly, as the late Grant McConachie and other great pioneers of Canadian flight saw the benefit of raw speed, will cinch closer together a divided world.

Wrote William Rademaekers, of Time magazine: "I asked myself: As a paying passenger, would I want to fly in an SST, even at the expected premium of 30 per cent above regular economy class? The answer was yes."

Wrote Wayne W. Parrish, the distinguished aviation editor, with an aside referring to the United States' cancellation of their SST program: "Conclusion: Passengers will love SST. It will be 'the way to go' on long-distance flights. All of the rot and the bunk and the lies and the distortions that advocates of Weak America have shoved out about SST will one day be forgotten as more and more people are exposed to supersonic flights."

Wrote John L. Hess, of the New York Times: "In that dawn of jet transportation, the new airliner seemed unbelievably quiet, free of vibration and fast. Newsmen who took Concorde's recent flight to Dakar, Senegal, on the other hand, returned in two-and-a-half hours and said that nobody would ever want to fly the same distance subsonically again."

My original quarrel with the Canadian airlines was directed entirely toward CP Air. It seemed to me, then and now, inconceivable that a global airline with such long-distance, over-water routes could be so lacking in imagination and faith that they would not even get on Concorde's waiting list though the makers of the airplane had offered them a deposit-back guarantee if the plane did not live up to their expectations.

Since then the chicken-heartedness has extended to Air Canada and its chief executive officer, Yves Pratte. I strongly suspect that Pratte has been influenced by some of the more fanatic of the self-styled "ecologists" who, totally without foundation, are prattling about pollution in the upper atmosphere where Concorde will so serenely fly.

As editor Parrish rightly puts it, an awful lot of rot, bunk, lies and distortions have intruded on this bold new venture into future flight.

If, as the Montreal Gazette recently suggested, Air Canada cancels its high-priority reserve positions for four of the first production models of Concorde then we'll have slipped right back into the horse-and-buggy era of air transport and can expect a whipping from dozens of airlines that compete with us on trans-ocean routes.

Whatever Pratte's motivations may be he has said some very strange things as the top man of an airline that has cause to know, more than most, the fierceness of competition.

He has said, for instance, that supersonic flight is "directed to a tiny fraction of the population." That's nonsense, directly at odds with his own airline's repeated boasts that business and tourism have discovered that the whole world can be our back-yard in the day of the jet.

The clear record of air travel is that customers will go the fastest way. The gap between supersonic and subsonic jet is just as enormous as the gap between the jet and the propeller-driven airliner. It's my hunch that the day will come, no more than a generation away, when the SST will, in fact, monopolize every long-distance route.

Pratte has said, as well, that "a good part of the energy, talent and money expended on the development of supersonic aircraft might have been better spent . . . on research and development into the means of transporting passengers efficiently over short distances."

Maybe so, but that's simply confusing the issue. Beyond a $400,000 returnable down payment, Air Canada has had no direct participation in the development of Concorde. It has not prevented Air Canada in the slightest from offering encouragement or backing in a parallel development of short-haul aircraft. He surely knows that the airlines of the future will have mixed fleets. Why, then, knock the historic collaboration between Britain and France, a collaboration in which we should be participants rather than niggling critics?

No one, not even the makers of the airplane, pretend that the technological and economic problems have all been solved, that the brilliant test performances to date are all that matter. Concorde still has a long way to fly before it can enter into service. Najeeb Halaby, the president of Pan-American (whose test engineers and pilots are closely involved with the development) has said, cautiously, "We're waiting, we want to be shown."

But that's a far cry from the outright rejection by CP Air and the pessimism of Air Canada. If and when they are left at the gate I hope I'm around to say, "I told you so."

Storytellers For Canada

An unforgettable journey through the history of Canada is offered by the national dance troupe Les Feux Follets, who arrived today for an afternoon performance at Vic High and an 8:30 p.m. show at McPherson Playhouse.

The internationally acclaimed performers have travelled around the world and starred at both Expo '67 and Expo '70.

Originally a Quebec group, Feux Follets has become a national company which includes dancers from across the country, including Dan Costain, 22, of 1320 Queensbury Ave., Victoria (standing fourth from left). He's been with the group two years.

Bennett Wants Showdown With Doctors—Wallace

WALLACE
. . . feud suits Bennett

Premier Bennett is seeking a confrontation with the doctors of British Columbia by emphasizing the shortcomings of a minority in the profession, MLA Scott Wallace said today.

A feud with physicians suits the premier as a major issue in the next election, said the Oak Bay physician who resigned the Social Credit party this summer and now sits as an independent.

He was commenting on release of a report Thursday by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service which is critical of some doctors' utilization of hospital beds.

The report is based on a five-month study by an unidentified doctor two years ago in a large but unidentified hospital in B.C.

Wallace said there is no doubt the survey refers to Royal Jubilee Hospital and is the work undertaken by Dr. David Longridge, a former general practitioner in Victoria now working for BCHIS.

The surveyor examined 805 cases over the five months and concluded that while there was no waste of hospital beds in four cases out of five:

- There was avoidable delay in nearly 19 per cent of cases.
- Doctors were responsible for the delay in 70 per cent of these cases.
- Lack of suitable facilities to transfer patients to accounted for 20 per cent of the delays and hospital service factors produced the other 10 per cent.

The report says that the 152 cases where there was avoidable delay meant patients lingered in hospital a total of 793 extra days. (It costs about $60 a day to keep a patient in an acute care hospital). The report proposes a number of ways closer watch and tighter control of bed utilization could be achieved.

Reaction of other doctors was caustic.

"If such a study was done in 1969, why does it take until October of 1971 to bring it to the attention of the public? It does seem odd," said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee.

Dr. Charles Ballam, medical director at the hospital, said conclusions that one patient in five remained too long in hospital represent the subjective, and admittedly sometimes arbitrary, opinion of one man — who never saw any of the patients.

There are a variety of psychological factors to be weighed in deciding whether to discharge a patient, said Dr. Gordon Lott, president of the Victoria Medical Society. And they don't appear on any chart.

"For a doctor to say there are not from time to time avoidable delays would be incorrect," said Ballam. "But to say delays are always an abuse is something else."

BALLAM
. . . delay not abuse

Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg, executive director at St. Joseph's Hospital, said the daily check conducted by doctors at the hospital has tightened up bed utilization as much as possible.

He estimated there were 4,000 patient-days at St. Joseph's Hospital last year (at $59.20 a day) directly attributable to not having any place to transfer patients who no longer needed that level of care.

The BCHIS report suggested one course of action would be to close hospitals to private practitioners. Salaried hospital doctors might be able to keep tighter control on bed use.

"I would just ask BCHIS to show me one example anywhere where the average patient's stay in a closed hospital is lower than in the ordinary community hospital . . . generally speaking closed hospitals have a longer average patient stay," said Wallace.

He said Bennett "in a cunning political way" is building an election issue based on the shortcomings of a minority in the medical profession.

Compulsory Dues Plan Urged for Gov't Staff

The B.C. Government Employees' Union agreed today that every civil servant should pay dues whether or not they belong to the union.

Delegates to the union's convention in the Empress said benefits "fought for and gained by the union" are shared by members and non-members.

They agreed that "strong representations" should be made to the provincial government to implement the Rand formula, which requires all benefiting employees to pay dues to the union.

FREELOADERS

On the central issue of bargaining rights, delegates passed amid applause a restatement of the BCGEU's continuing efforts to win these rights.

Executive member Ed Honcharuk said it is time that non-union government employees begin paying dues. "I find parasitic, freeloading attitudes offensive," he said.

ALL EXCEPT B.C.

The executive resolution said some form of collective bargaining is enjoyed by employees at all government levels in Canada except provincial employees in B.C.

Bargaining rights should include exclusive recognition of the BCGEU as sole bargaining agent, written contract and dispute settlement giving a bargaining unit the option of binding arbitration or conciliation with strike right.

The executive was instructed to submit a brief on the issue to the government, Civil Service Commission and MLAs.

A move by the highways council that the BCGEU press for "necessary drastic action" (strike) from Dec. 15 to "gain satisfaction" on bargaining rights and all negotiable issues was referred back to the resolutions committee.

Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which represents federal civil servants, told delegates he hopes the B.C. government will pass collective bargaining legislation.

FASTEST-GROWING

He also urged encouragement for union organizing of white-collar workers generally, saying only 17 per cent of this sector outside government service belonged to unions "yet this is the fastest-growing part of the work force."

Beach Water Depolluted

Good news for anti-pollutionists. In one corner of Greater Victoria a victory has been won.

Signs marking two Esquimalt beaches as polluted came down in a brief ceremony this afternoon. Tests of water samples show the beaches are now safe for bathing.

They are at Saxe Point and Fleming Park and have been given a new lease on life because a sewer outfall near them has been replaced.

The new $7,500,000 Macaulay Point trunk sewer system includes an outfall pipe which carries sewage 6,100 feet into Juan de Fuca Strait before discharging it at a depth of 200 feet.

Taking part in today's ceremony were Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Regional Board which organized the sewer project; Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer for the metro health board.

SANDRINGHAM SUPPORT ORGANIZED

Delegates to the B.C. Government Employees Union convention agreed today to demonstrate their support for the year-long Sandringham hospital strike. (See also Page 35.)

A committee was considering ways of doing this. One of the actions being contemplated was having all 152 delegates join the picket line Saturday.

The convention was to consider the form of the demonstration after one delegate urged a representative from each branch picket the hospital and that a collection be taken up.

Ambulancemen Assist Birth

Ambulance assistant Larry Tuttle and driver Ed Pfeifle helped bring parental joy to Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of 1170 Fort Street early this morning.

The Garden City ambulancemen arrived moments after the Scotts' first baby, premature by two months and weighing three pounds two ounces, was born.

Soon after, the men brought the second of the twin boys, weighing two pounds 13 ounces, into the world.

SOMETIMES IN OCTOBER comes a day that is the very essence of autumn. Its early hours may be cool or even chilly, but by 10 a.m. or thereabouts, the air is almost summer-warm. The wind's asleep, and the broad-leaved maples stand glorious in brown and gold.

The thing about a bonus day of that sort is that it may not be repeated in a season too short at best. I regard it as a sending, to be spent outdoors if possible, and in a manner to provide memories.

Up-Island, last Saturday began with dank fog. But the sun burned through while the forenoon was still young, and when we put our car into the river road, the maples were glowing against their backdrop of somber evergreen.

Where the road peters out at the edge of the tidelands, we unloaded the gear required for a day of the kind we planned. Hip boots. Fly rods. A rucksack into which we'd be stuffing our jackets before the sun climbed much higher.

A big tide had flooded into the river estuary. We trudged upstream by a fishermen's trail to a riffle that might be shallow enough for wading.

It was, though barely. On the other side, the woods are denser and the trail is narrower. Deer use it in the hours when intrusive mankind isn't about, and once we saw a bear emerge from it to swim a deep, smooth-flowing reach.

No bears on this golden day, or deer, either. Just the quiet woods, and beyond them a curve of high-tide beach packed with the drift-log jumble that has crowded it since last winter's gales.

In November, on a flood tide with a southeaster pounding in, that lee shore will be no place for man or beast. But on this calm, bright morning, it was one of earth's untroubled heavens.

Loons, gulls and diving ducks found good inshore feeding. We loafed along the beach with eyes peeled for other feasters. But there was neither swirl nor splash, and we began to wonder whether the sea-run cutthroat trout that we hoped to find were cruising in other waters.

It happens that way often enough. Still, it was no day for feverish endeavor. We laid our rods across a couple of logs, settled our backs against another, and devoted ourselves to the enjoyment of sunshine and utter laziness.

The seabirds reproved us with their industry. Presently something splashed close in to the shoreline.

"Bird," I said, not bothering to open my eyes.

"Trout," Win said, "and I'm hungry. If you caught it, we could have it for lunch."

Something swirled where no bird had dived. And though sea-runs can't be caught to order, it was worth a try.

"Okay," I said, "lunch coming up."

Vainglorious words; and they should have guaranteed failure. But the water humped behind my fly at the first cast, and before the Teal-and-Silver had travelled six feet, the bow-wave changed to an impressive boil.

Minutes later, the biggest cutthroat of our season lay shining on the pebbles. It wasn't the four-pounder of my dreams, but it was amply large for our purposes.

A wild crab-apple bush supplied a green toasting stick, and a couple of wiry twigs that would do for skewers.

To cap our luck, Win groped in the bottom of the rucksack and produced three drive-in packets of salt and one of pepper. Then she brought out two little cans of fruit juice.

We grilled our trout to a becoming shade of brown on both sides, found a sea-scoured log end for a table, and ate in good appetite.

I don't ask or expect many days like that. If any October obliges by sending one and no more, I'm properly grateful.

Next day, the clouds moved in. The throat-tickle brought from town fulfilled its warning by developing stage by stage into a pestiferous cold.

But that was a day divorced from the troubled world, and between sneezes, I've found it a good one to remember.

PITTSBURGH TAKES THIRD STRAIGHT VICTORY

BRILES CHILLS BALTIMORE ON TWO-HITTER

Bucs Poised for Knockout of Staggering Orioles

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates, poised on the threshold of World Series history, head for Baltimore hoping to deliver the knockout blow to the suddenly-staggering Orioles as quickly as possible.

The Pirates took command of the series by sweeping three straight games on the artificial tartan turf of Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium. They are set to go for the title in Saturday's sixth game with Bob Moose, another member of their nondescript pitching staff that has suddenly stilled the Baltimore bats.

It was Nelson Briles' turn in Thursday's crucial fifth game and the veteran right-hander responded with a brilliant two-hitter that gave the Pirates a 4-0 victory and left them one game away from their first title since 1960.

Suddenly, the series that seemed a mismatch when Baltimore won the first two games has turned around and the world champion Orioles are the team in trouble.

COULD BE FIRST

If the Pirates beat the Birds Saturday, they will become the first team in series history to win four straight after dropping the first two games.

Four other teams have won the title in seven games after dropping the first two. But no team has come back from that deficit to win the classic in six.

"We'll see what kind of club this is on Saturday," said Frank Robinson in the sombre Baltimore dressing room. "We can still win if we want to win."

Briles called his fifth-game victory, "the culmination of everything I've worked for in th last two years."

"They've been two hard years with a lot of work and not too much success," he said.

Briles was a mainstay of the St. Louis Cardinal pitching staff with 48 victories in three seasons before slumping to a 6-7 record last year. The Cards swapped him to Pittsburgh in a four-player trade last winter.

"We figured on him as a spot starter and long man out of the bullpen," said Danny Murtaugh, manager of the Pirates. Used both ways, Briles was 8-4 with a 3.04 earned-run average. He managed just four complete games.

MURTAUGH LIKES HIM

But Murtaugh planned to start him in the third game of the National League playoffs against San Francisco Giants.

Then, a few minutes before game time, he came up with a pulled groin muscle and the start went to Bob Johnson instead. The Pirates won the game but Briles felt lost.

"It was a low point in my career," he said.

But Murtaugh didn't quit on the veteran right-hander and gave him the start in the pivotal fifth World Series game. This time, Briles was ready.

He needed only 99 pitches to dispose of the Orioles and faced just 29 batters — two over the minimum.

He was in command from the start and got the only run he needed when Bob Robertson rocked Dave McNally's first pitch for a lead-off homer in the second inning.

Briles drove in a second run with a timely single and then the Pirates added two more—one without a hit when they capitalized on Gene Clines' triple and Roberto Clemente's single in the fifth.

LAPSES A LITTLE

Briles finished the Orioles off in the ninth despite a momentary lapse when he walked Don Buford with two out. When he got the final batter on a forceplay grounder, he was mobbed by his teammates.

"Today meant more to me than any game I ever pitched," Briles said.

Quiet Bats Just One Problem ...Shaky Defence Also Puzzle

BOBBLE FOR BROOKS was result on this play in third inning of Thursday's fifth game of World Series. Brooks Robinson, Baltimore's all-star third-baseman, reaches for ball after being charged with error on smash by Pittsburgh's Bob Robertson.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles, unable to explain what happened to their once-potent attack in Pittsburgh, tried to regain their batting eyes at a workout in friendly Memorial Stadium today.

"I don't know what's going on," outfielder Frank Robinson said, "but I think we ought to burn the bats we used in Pittsburgh."

After cracking three home runs among their 10 hits in the opening game of the World Series and 14 singles in the second game, both Baltimore victories, the Orioles suddenly went cold in Pittsburgh.

While losing three straight to the Pirates, the Orioles made just nine hits—just three in the last 18 innings after the first three batters singled to open game No. 4.

A Robinson home run averted a shutout as Steve Blass pitched a four-hitter in the third game. Two of the three first-inning singles in game No. 4 never left the infield, and the other safety was a bloop double.

"They haven't knocked the bats out of our hands, although they have pitched good games," third baseman Brooks Robinson said. "We've just stopped hitting."

BLAMES BATTING

Frank Robinson, while giving special credit to the performance of Blass, blamed Baltimore batters for most of the futility at the plate.

"We've been hitting the pitcher's pitch instead of waiting for ours," he said. "We've got to be more determined at the plate, and know what we want to do."

"I wish I knew what to do," Manager Earl Weaver said. "Maybe the day off will help."

The Orioles have had more trouble than merely a lack of hitting. Their usually tight defence has been charged with nine errors and the pitchers—including the four 20-game winners who have started every game—have been in almost constant trouble.

"When's the last time we had a 1-2-3 inning in the field?" Frank said. "Maybe we can't hit because we're all tired from standing out there."

"We've been bad in everything," he said, "defence, offence and pitching. It hasn't been one thing, but a whole combination of things. The thinking hasn't been too good, either."

Despite their troubles in Pittsburgh, the Orioles were welcomed home by a noisy throng at Friendship International Airport Thursday night. Several thousand fans, carrying home made signs and chanting, "We're No. 1," cheered their heroes.

Baltimore	000 000 000—0	2	1
Pittsburgh	021 010 00x—4	9	0

McNally 1-1, Leonhard (5) Dukes (6) and Hendricks; Briles 1-0 and Sanguillen. Home run: Pittsburgh — Robertson (2nd).

TORRE RATED BEST PLAYER

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinal third baseman Joe Torre has been named player of the year by Sporting News. Torre, 31, led the major leagues this season with a .363 batting average and 137 runs batted in. He hit 24 homers, eight triples and 34 doubles to boost his lifetime batting average from .297 to .305.

Cats Start Road Trip With Chance at Lead

Victoria Cougars open their first road trip of the Western Canada Hockey League season with a game against Edmonton Oil Kings tonight and share of first place in the loop's Western Division goes to the winner.

Cats, currently in a three-way tied for second spot with Edmonton, and New Westminster Bruins, are two points behind leading Calgary Centennials, who remain idle tonight.

Bruins vaulted into the three-way deadlock Thursday night by bouncing Vancouver Nationals 5-1 before 1,658 New Westminster fans.

Lorne Henning paced Bruins with three goals and an assist while singles were produced by Ken Ireland and Bernie Lukowich. Grant Casper scored the lone Vancouver goal in the third period.

In the only other WCHL game, Brandon Wheat Kings nipped Swift Current Broncos 6-5 in an overtime battle before 865 hometown fans.

PULLED GOALTENDER

Terry McDougall scored twice for Broncos, who tied the game in the last minute of regulation time after pulling their goaltender. Ed Lang, Kelly Pratt and Alex Kogler rounded out Swift Current scorers.

Woods Denied Fight

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Light heavyweight boxer Bobby Woods of Vancouver was refused permission Thursday to fight here Saturday because of a bruised kidney.

Woods, the Western Canada champion, was to have met South African Kosie Smith on an international bill in Johannesburg.

But the Transvaal Boxing Board of Control announced that the Canadian was found medically unfit to fight. "The board has acted to avert what could have been a tragedy."

Woods, who arrived in South Africa last weekend, was examined by a board doctor and found to have a bruised kidney.

The promoters of Saturday's tournament said Woods would be replaced on the bill by Kelman Santos of Vancouver. They described Santosa as "the No. 1 light heavyweight in Canada."

SWIFT CURRENT NEEDS CENTRES

Broncos Deficient at Centre

(Seventh of a series)

By ERNIE FEDORUK

On paper, Swift Current Broncos have too many marginal deficiencies to be considered serious threats for Western Canada Hockey League honors.

Fourth in the Western Division last season, Broncos' hopes for improved fortunes will have to ride with rookies and the outcome of Swift Current's talent-searching ability.

Centres, or candidates for the positions, have been getting closest scrutiny in the early going.

Coach Stan Dunn doesn't deny it.

"If we can come up with a centre or two, that could make a big difference," he said.

Nine holdovers reported to camp. They included (1) goaltender Henry Durkin, (3) defencemen Murray Worley, Vern McCormick and Gord Engle, and (5) wingers Brent Leavins, Murray Myers, Ernie Wurmlinger, Wayne Inglis and Ed Lang.

But nary a centre.

Wurmlinger later was sold to Victoria Cougars but the wing situation remained status quo when Dunn obtained Alex Kogler from Calgary Centennials in exchange for playing rights to a pair of rookies.

Dunn's returnees, from a standpoint of age, have experience. Five of his holdovers are 19, four are 18.

Durkin has class. Worley, McCormick and Engle should provide adequate protection.

Leavins and Myers should provide Swift Current with greatest firepower, along with Kogler. Leavins counted 22 goals and 23 assists in his rookie season while Myers, 17, never fully recovered from a mid-season illness.

Now shifted to the Eastern Division because of expansion, figure Swift Current for a drop to sixth place, with reservation on a right to make a change if Dunn can solve the centre-ice problem.

NEXT: Brandon Wheat Kings.

IT WAS PAINFUL way to celebrate goal for his club as Montreal's Marc Tardiff collides with a goalpost after falling over Minnesota goalie Gump Worsley. Defenceman Tom Reid watches puck rebound out of net after Henri Richard had scored for Canadiens. Reid turned out to be hero for North Stars, scoring in third period to give Minnesota 1-1 deadlock in National League game.

Back-to-Business Bruins Lead After 6-2 Romp Against Sabres

By The Canadian Press

Class will tell, they say. This was never more apparent than Thursday night when Boston Bruins belted Buffalo Sabres 6-2 to take first place in the National Hockey League.

After a glum exhibition series, Boston now has won two of its three starts for four points, one more than Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers. The runner-up Leafs and Rangers were idle Thursday.

At Minnesota, The North Stars capitalized on a penalty shot, the first of the 1971-72 campaign, to tie Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup defending champions, 1-1.

A ban on extra-curricular activities may be partly responsible for spurring the Bruins to a point where they look like the team that made them a runaway of the league last year.

Stung by a 3-6-1 exhibition record and a 4-1 loss to the Rangers in their NHL opener Sunday, general manager Milt Schmidt and coach Tom Johnson imposed a "no moonlighting" edict on the players.

The Bruins, sweating under criticism from the news media, rebounded with a 6-1 victory over Rangers Wednesday.

Then they followed up with their decisive triumph over the Sabres Thursday.

"I think a couple of days—Monday and Tuesday—got us into condition in a hurry," Johnson said. "I'm very satisfied with the progress since Sunday. That loss to the Rangers really shook them up."

Hodge Agrees, Collects Four Assists

Commenting on the curtailment of outside activities, such as personal appearances at banks, stores and banquets, Johnson said: "It's too early to tell whether it will help over all.' '

"The players never seemed to have any free time; they always were going somewhere. That's all over now. Maybe the restrictions won't last for the entire season, we'll see what happens."

Right winger Ken Hodge was inclined to agree with his coach.

"Last Sunday against New York we played at 19 individuals instead of a unit. But now we're starting to play as a team. Everything is going to be all right."

Hodge produced four assists against the Sabres, while Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman supplied two goals each. Bobby Orr and Johnny Bucyk scored the others.

The Esposito-Cashman-Hodge line set an NHL scoring record last season with 140 goals and 336 points. Espo, the skilled centreman, who also collected three assists Thursday, had 152 points last season—an NHL record.

Gil Perreault, 1970-71 Rookie of the Year, broke Ed Johnston's shutout on a screened shot in the second period and Mike Robitaille provided Buffalo's second goal in the final period.

There was no further scoring until 11 minutes remained in the game, when Minnesota's hefty defenceman Tim Reid beat Montreal goalie Ken Dryden with a low liner on the penalty shot.

North Stars were awarded the free shot after Reid was tripped by Guy Lapointe as he broke into the clear over the Montreal blueline.

FARMER'S BOY BECAME RICHEST OF BOOKIES

The 68-year-old multi-millionaire, who ran more than 1,000 betting shops in Britain, was found dead in the bathroom of a hotel in this horse-racing centre.

Hill's name was known to every Briton. Millions of people slip into his shops to have a bet on a horse when the big races are run.

He retired from active participation in his vast betting empire two years ago. Since then he had concentrated on breeding race horses.

Crowned Prince Takes Dewhurst

Rheingold was second and Mercia Boy third in the 11-horse race over seven furlongs.

Lester Piggott was aboard Crowned Prince, which went to the post as 9-to-4 favorite, and won by five lengths over Rheingold. There was only a neck between Rheingold and Mercia Boy. Victory was worth 10,408 ($24,980) to McMahon, who paid a world-record price for Crowned Prince as a yearling.

In recent years this race for two-year-olds has been an efficient pointer toward season form. Canadian-bred Nijinsky and Mill Reef, the last two Epsom Derby winners, won the Dewhurst Stakes as juveniles.

McMahon paid $510,000 for Crowned Prince in Kentucky 15 months ago. This was the colt's third race. He disappointed in his debut in July, but won his second race, the Doncaster Stakes, after being fitted with blinkers. The blinkers were dispensed with today.

Stockers Clip Uvic Vikings

Stockers North Americans of the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League romped to an 8-2 victory over University of Victoria Vikings of the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association in an exhibition game Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

The teams traded single goals in the first period before Stockers went ahead 4-2 in the second frame.

Debbie Ignites Bantam Hoop Win

Debbie Donaldson sank 12 points Thursday to pace Yarrows to a 47-21 win over Metropolitan in a bantam girls' Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association game at Central Junior High School.

STEWART LANG Reports on The Outdoors

Some rambling notes along the trail:

An increased number of hunters, many of them "greenhorns," will take to the woods with the opening of antlerless deer season in most Vancouver Island areas Nov. 6 . . . for them, as well as the buck, duck, grouse and pheasant hunters currently afield, a little preventive medicine might be in order to avert a tragedy . . . especially with the first fall of snow on higher elevations just around the corner.

First, always let someone know your destination and the approximate time you expect to return . . . in case you don't come back, it narrows down the search area considerably . . . and second, make sure you carry a survival kit . . . this essential item should contain waterproofed matches, fishing line and hooks, razor blade or small knife, spare compass, whistle (for signalling) and some form of concentrated food . . . other items to carry are a larger compass (and the knowlege to use it), a "sheath" knife and a topographical map of the area . . . also resist the urge to dip into your survival gear for non-emergency use.

We read with a certain amount of glee last week news of a federal study squashing the proposed Moran Dam on the Fraser River . . . any such development that could wipe out half the Fraser's salmon fishery is ill-conceived at best . . . not only would it affect fisheries but settling of silt above the dam might ruin the system of delta marshes which is one of the largest areas for waterfowl on the Pacific Coast.

Another bone-headed idea that made news this week arose out of the British Columbia Young New Democrats' convention . . . the delegates condemned hunting as a "barbaric act" that should be "totally banned" . . . sportsmen's groups, many of them "barbaric" hunters, have advocated self controls and staged campaigns for a quality environment long before such a position became socially fashionable . . . fees, from hunting as well as fishing licence sales, have gone far toward helping fight pollution, which poses a far graver danger to wildlife than strictly-controlled hunting seasons . . . they condemn the hunter because he hunts for sport, which is simply a term used to oversimplify the infinitely complex hunting experience and separate it from the slaughter-house killing of domesticated animals.

More on the same theme, Ed Chaney of the United States' National Wildlife Federation, replied to the oh-so sophisticated anti-hunter views rather well . . . "That's their connotation of squeaky-cold November mornings; dogs you've nursed, cursed and cried over; first tracks in new snow; wet feet, cold hands and singing muscles in pursuit of a beautiful wild creature that hasn't spent its life knee-deep in its own dung, inoculated with tenderizers, awaiting the reprieve of the sledge hammer they can buy its flesh in nice, neat, plastic wrappers and be spared the truth of blood, guts and death."

Seems like a new breed of bounty hunters could arise in the United States . . . Associated Press wire service carried the story recently of a mother and son who received a $12,500 bounty for taking action when they saw a concrete company dumping washings from its mixing trucks into a river . . . reports from the two led to the company being indicted for polluting the river . . . the firm pleaded guilty and was fined $25,000 by the district court judge, who ordered half the amount to go to Gwen Zeicher and son Steven, 17, under a proviso of the 1899 Refuse Act . . . how about that!

Irene Ashworth of Victoria phoned in with a "fish story this week . . . while trolling for coho at Becher Bay on Tuesday morning, Irene had a strike and played the fish awhile before the leader broke . . . later, while preparing to leave the spot, she spotted a fish thrashing around on top of the water . . . "I said to the others in the boat, 'that's my fish' " . . . and despite some good-natured ribbing from her friends, they returned to the spot . . . where she netted a 12-pound coho that still had her lure snagged to the top of its head . . . that's one instance where the "one that got away" returned.

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association are reminded of the first Frostbite Derby of the season from dawn until noon on Sunday.

Best spots for coho fishing on Vancouver Island this week have been Secretary Island, Becher Bay, Pedder Bay, Trial Island, Musgrave Point on Salt Spring Island, Cherry Point, Northwest Bay, French Creek and the mouth of the Oyster River.

Central Saanich Lions Club will hold its second annual derby from daybreak until 3 p.m. Sunday in Saanich Inlet . . . prize presentations will be at Anglers' Anchorage, with tickets available from all Inlet boathouses.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Test for Vic-West Defence When Labs Visit Saturday

After yielding only one goal in two matches this season, Victoria West-United players will attempt to continue their strong defending and make it three successive victories Saturday when they meet North Shore Labatts in a Pacific Coast Soccer League game at Royal Athletic Park.

United, currently tied for first place in the PCSL, has defeated Vancouver Firefighters (3-1) and New Westminster Blues (3-0) in its only starts. Victoria shares the league lead with Paul's Canadians, who are also undefeated after two games.

North Shore drew, 2-2, with Firefighters in its first contest last Saturday and appears to be a much-improved side this year over the one which finished fifth in the league standings last season.

Labs also have a solid defence, with playing-coach Colin Atkinson and Ken Legge anchoring the defensive unit. Both were members of the B.C. all-star team which defeated Dinamo Zagreb of Yugoslavia last year.

Other proven defenders include Norm Goss, Bill Nichol and Roy Nosella, while veterans Bobby Smith, Terry Brown and Lorne Taylor bring experience to North Shore's youthful forward line. Rick Sader, 17, and Ron Hilder, 18, are in their first PCSL seasons, while Robin Elliott, 19, joins Labatts from UBC Thunderbirds.

United coach Frank Grealy, meanwhile, says he will go with virtually the same lineup that overwhelmed the Blues at Empire Stadium last Sunday.

Ash Douglas, 17, will start in goal, and will be supported by what Grealy claims is the best back four in the league — fullbacks Howie Anderson and Ray Telford and halfbacks Jim Irvine Jr. and Brian Robinson. Ranjit Dillon will start at right half.

Centre-forward Tom Forrester, a 22-year-old Nanaimo product who has three goals in two games with United, will play between forwards Dean Stokes, Jan Bentley, Danny Lomas and Bob Duncan.

Reserves will be Ralph Anderson, Stewart Taylor and Ron Thompson, who recently returned from vacation in England but is experiencing foot trouble.

Game time Saturday is 2 p.m.

THE VIKING SCENE

Hoop Power With Alumni

Stars of past University of Victoria basketball teams meet this year's young and talented Viking squad tonight in the annual grad homecoming game at Uvic gymnasium.

Returning to play against the Vikings is one of the strongest alumni teams ever. Guided by former Uvic coach, Dr. Bob Bell, the graduates include Mike Taaffe, Corky Jossul, Stan Piper, Barry Burch, Brian Brumwell, John Lauvaas, John Frampton, Bill Glover, Don Frampton, Bill Carlson and Ken Baker.

Gary Taylor fills the position vacated by Dr. Bell. Taylor, who in the last two years led the Uvic Jayvees to the Canadian junior men's finals, has six new players on this year's Viking squad. Two of them — Doug Walton and Harry Hunter — have come straight from high school, eluding Jayvee ranks.

NEW POSITIONS

Hunter played for Reynolds High School last year and found little difficulty in changing from forward to guard this season for the Vikings. Walton, a product of Oak Bay High, earned B.C. high school all-star honors last year at centre. He has been moved to a forward position with the Vikings.

Former Jayvees with this year's varsity team include guard Barry Moen and forward Jim Hunter, Harry's brother. Mike Bishop and Dave Wallace were recruited from the Victoria Senior Men's League.

The youthful Vikings gain some much-needed experience from holdovers Tom Cmild, at guard, and centre Tom Hatcher who, at six-foot five, is the tallest member of the team. Gordie Hoshal and Fergie Anderson are other holdovers.

Playing in the western division of the Western Canada Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association, Uvic's competition this year is expected to be tougher. UBC, University of Alberta, University of Lethbrige, and University of Calgary round out the western section of the WIAA.

Game time tonight is 8:30 p.m.

RUGBY DATE

On Saturday, the Vikings rugby team meets UBC Thunderbirds for the third annual Wightman Boot game at Centennial Stadium.

Thunderbirds are the defencing champions and are favored to win again with the addition of five players who recently completed a tour with Canada's national team in Wales.

Game time is 2:30 p.m.

BANS FOLLOW BATTLES IN DISTRICT MATCHES

Fighting in last Sunday's Victoria and District Soccer League games has resulted in 10 players being either suspended or reprimanded by the disciplinary board of the B.C. Soccer Commission.

The commission took action Thursday night by suspending Bob Cooper of Saanich Braves and Barry Robbins of London Boxing Club for two games. Both are Division I players.

Brian Russell of University of Victoria Norsemen in Division II was handed a one-game suspension, while Tom Bentston and John Brum, both of Century Inn, were suspended until they appear before the board.

Gorge Division I players Dunc McCaig, and Bill O'Neil, Al Moore and George Rathfren, all of Century Inn, were severely reprimanded, while Tom Holgate, also of Century, received a reprimand.

BOB COX TRAILS

HARRELSON QUITS

Lanny Retains Lead

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins of Winston-Salem, N.C., the 1970 U.S. Amateur champion and Walker Cup player, was leading the field at the end of 72 holes in the 108-hole qualifying golf tournament of the approved Tournament Players School over the East course of the PGA National Golf Club Thursday.

He had a par 72 Thursday to go with opening rounds of 70-69-71 for a 282 total, six under par over this course where Jack Nicklaus won the PGA Championship last February with a 281 for the same distance.

Wadkins has led the field at the end of every round.

The original field of 75 players, those of the 357 who survived three sectional qualifying rounds for the current school, was reduced to 70 after Thursday's round.

Bob Zender, a Purdue University product, was in second place after four rounds with 285. He posted a 72 Thursday.

David Graham of Australia, a World Cup player, shot a two-under-par 70 for 292 and a tie for 12th place.

Paul Whitfield of Niagara Falls, Ont., shot a 74 for a 306 total, worth a tie for 53rd place.

Ken Harrelson withdrew from the tournament Thursday because his golf score looked more than a good baseball batting average. The former Cleveland Indians star, who retired from baseball to try and make it as a pro golfer, quit the six-round, 108-hole tourney after firing rounds of 72-82-75-83—312 for 24 over par.

RUNNING MEET SET SATURDAY

Victoria and District Track and Field Association will stage an all-comers cross-country meet Saturday at Beaver Lake.

First of eight age-class and open races will start at 12:45 p.m. from the meadow just north of Wooded Wonderland.

Mount Brenton Open

A field of 75 golfers, including 11 professionals, will tee off Saturday for the opening round of the inaugural Mount Brenton Open golf tournament at Chemainus.

The 36-hole tournament will wind up Sunday.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Hitting list of winners in first week of ninth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is Marg Vickery, who topped women's fivepin section with 794 series. Marg collected weekly award and berth in Bowler-of-Year rolloffs next April with games of 251, 266 and 277 rolled in Friday Breakfast League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Stamps Take Look At Minnesota Cut

CALGARY (CP) — Reggie Holms, who plays either as an offensive or defensive back, has been put on a five-day trial by Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference.

Holms, cut last week by Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, was a 12th round draft choice. He is five-feet, 11-inches and 185 pounds and played college ball at Wisconsin State.

FINAL RACE STARTS TODAY . . . . . . IN FIRST CANADIAN SERIES

Half-Ton Fleet Expected to Grow

By PAT DUFOUR

At 5 p.m. today the 10 boats competing in Canada's first half-tone series receive the start gun for the final race — a 150-mile offshore sailout off Vancouver.

Aboard one of them — a Sparkman and Stephens' Northern 29 named Enchantress — is Vancouver architect Vladimir Plavsic, who barely missed reaching the winner's podium in the European half-ton series, raced in Britain in late July and early August.

In that series, in which 33 boats competed, Vladimir raced a Scampi 29 named Orao, built in Stockholm. He was there for three weeks before he took her to Portsmouth, had one practise sail, then went out to win third place in the six-race series.

He could have come first. As he puts it; "We had the trophy in our hands — except for the fact that we couldn't find the rounding mark in the last race. The winner found it first and we ended up 29 minutes behind."

Orao will be shipped back to Vancouver by freighter and should prove a hot competitor in future half-ton racing on this continent. In the British series the first three boats were all Scampis.

Enchantress is lying fifth as she goes into the last race of the Canadian series.

Vladimir isn't too surprised. He explains, "We have no Genoa, compass or depth sounder — but it's fun to be in there."

He has been smitten with the half-ton bug for quite a while. He bought the Arpege Maistral originally and raced her in the 1970 Swiftsure, coming in 80th position out of a flotilla of 105.

This year he chose to race her in the Juan de Fuca classic, finishing 14th over-all.

The Arpege, designed by the French yachtsman Michel Dufour of La Rochelle, was a hot contender when Europe first began racing half-ton. But scuttlebut has it that local racing conditions do not suit her design so this is probably why Vladimir has now switched to the Scampi.

Only 10 boats are entered in Canada's first half-ton series but Vladimir reports that he already has 25 skippers willing to sign up for the 1972 series.

He is certain that half-ton racing, which sees boats competing on an equal basis up to an IOR (International Offshore Rule) rating of 21.7 is the coming thing.

"When you're all rated the same it's a great thing to go over the line first and not have to wait until the committee has figured who, in actual fact, is the winner.

"But, of course, you can get really broken up when you end up as tail-end-Charlie!"

Vladimir has lots of support in his campaign to get this part of the world half-ton minded. The new trend will mean that boat designers will be coming up with new designs, each trying to hit the 21.7 IOR dead on.

But, even if they don't, Vladimir is convinced that half-ton racing is the greatest thing to happen in the smaller offshore racer field.

He cites, as an example, the Columbia 26 that is now racing in the Vancouver series.

Although she's outsized by the rest of the fleet, when she's with them she can hold her own, proving that her designer, Bill Tripp, has a good thing going for him. Although her IOR is only 21, she's still a competitor.

And, as Vladimir says, add a foot on your spinnaker pole, increase your spinnaker or put a little extra weight on your keel — any of these factors — or others — can edge you up to that 21.7 cutoff.

There is also plenty of racing scheduled for local waters this weekend.

Members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will sail a six-mile race off Sidney on Sunday with the start gun scheduled for 10 a.m.

And, in Cadboro Bay, frostbiters of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be getting down to business in the first races of the season Saturday. The dinghy sailors will get their first start gun at 1:30 p.m.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will also be out in action. They will be navigating a tour of Victoria harbor, assembling at the Kinsmen's Park on the Gorge at 1 p.m.

And some of the tallest fish stories on record may be expected from the Capital City Yacht Club this weekend. Saturday and Sunday will be their annual stag coho derby in the Cowichan Bay area. Registrations can be made aboard Ken Lineham's Ken Mur, which will be docked at the government wharfs at Cowichan.

Glenlyon Wins

Glenlyon defeated Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School 10-4 in an inter-school exhibition colt rugby match.

Martin Screech and Tim McGee scored trys for Glenlyon, which led 6-0 at the half. Angus Izzard converted one of the trys.

PATRIOTS PLAN TRADE IF JOE REJOINS CLUB

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Upton Bell, general manager of the New England Patriots professional football team, says that if quarterback Joe Kapp came back to the National Football League team, he would be traded.

"We don't need people with that attitude," Bell told delegates to the annual New Hampshire Petroleum Convention.

Kapp, the quarterback who guided the Minnesota Vikings to the Super Bowl two years ago, refused to sign the standard league players agreement and left the Patriots before the season started.

He played formerly in Canada for British Columbia Lions and Calgary Stampeders.

Gulf
Service runs in our family.

When man first walked this earth, he was fascinated by the rocks and gems that surrounded him; and he used them to make his first primitive tools, weapons and even jewelry. Centuries later, he turned to these minerals again for the stories they had to tell about the nature and origin of his earth. Today, he's seeking to discover the origin of the moon and the universe from moon rocks. Rock collecting and man are so inseparable, it has become one of the most popular hobbies in the world today.

Get your free Collector's Plaque and free Educational Booklet (While the supply lasts.)

And now, it's easier then ever to start your own collection, because Gulf Canada dealers are bringing the exciting world of minerals to you with twenty-two authentic Minerals of Canada. Minerals like chalcopyrite, found in the Gaspé; gypsum, found in Nova Scotia; and serpentine, found in British Columbia. They're all yours for the collecting!

To get you started, your Gulf Canada dealer is giving away a FREE collector's plaque to display your minerals; and a FREE educational booklet, which explains the nature and use of each mineral.

Mothers line up with their children to receive milk distributed by UNICEF near refugee camps in India.

On the Edge of Survival

The rest of the world is short-changing India on the credit she receives for her care of Pakistani refugees, says Paul Ignatieff, 35, of Toronto.

Ignatieff is national executive director for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund and visited India this summer as vice-chairman of the combined appeal for Pakistani relief.

Here on a cross-Canada tour of UNICEF centres, Ignatieff says thousands of Indians survive on a lesser diet than the official ration the Indian government allots to each refugee.

"Two-thirds of the people living in Calcutta have less to eat than the people in refugee camps," he reports.

DAILY RATION

"The daily ration for men and women in the camps has a value of 2,210 calories while many, many of India's own people must survive on a daily diet of 1,600 to 1,800 calories.

"People should stop and reflect on this when they criticize India."

He says that eight million refugees are now in India and others are pouring in daily at the rate of 30,000 to 50,000 a day.

"This makes relief, based on figures of a few months ago, a drop in the bucket."

BREAKING POINT

Ignatieff visited more than 30 refugee camps while in India, as well as hospitals whose facilities were stretched to breaking point.

He tells of one hospital:

"I visited a children's hospital, run by a foreign agency, that could look after 100 youngsters. I asked the doctor why they didn't put two children in a bed. He said this was impossible — it wouldn't be very clean because many of the children were suffering from diarrhea. I told him if they doubled up they'd be able to save so many more lives.

"That's what this emergency is all about."

MAJOR PART

Ignatieff reports that UNICEF, which has programs in 112 countries, is playing "a fairly major part" in Pakistani relief work.

They've sent more than 200,000 tarpaulins, each valued at $14 and capable of sheltering 15 people, to India. They've also provided more than 2,000 jeeps and trucks.

IGNATIEFF

The Alpha project, organized with the co-operation of the Indian Red Cross and other bodies, is designed to help the thousands of small children who are suffering from malnutrition.

More than 1,000 feeding stations have been set up where children are fed properly prepared milk.

CANADA PROUD

To help them, sick bays have been organized next to the camps where children can receive intensive care for periods of seven to 10 days. While under care they're fed milk cassein, a high-protein food which UNICEF used in Biafra and Nigeria, and sucrose.

Ignatieff says Canada can well be proud of the part UNICEF volunteers play in helping the United Nations agency. They raised $1.7 million in 1970 through their Halloween and Christmas card fund-raising campaigns.

The local committee chairman is Mrs. S. A. Heron, 1957 Hampshire, and the Halloween campaign chairman for this year is Mrs. L. G. Toms, 2501 Central.

Introducing The Eaton Viking Fund Limited a new way to invest for tomorrow.

Read how this new mutual fund offers you a sensible investment program and why right now is an excellent time to begin.

Many Canadian families, in examining their long term financial security requirements, have found mutual fund plans to be a valuable addition to personal savings, adequate insurance coverage and other forms of investment. The Eaton Viking Fund has been founded with these considerations in mind, to help Canadians participate in the growth of their country through a sound and simple program of investment in securities selected by professional investment managers.

How does a mutual fund company work?

It invests in common shares and other securities selected by professional investment advisors. The shares are owned by the fund's shareholders, who share in profits and losses in proportion to the number of shares they hold.

Are mutual funds better than personal investment?

There is no guarantee that mutual funds are better, but if you can't take the time to manage a personal portfolio, they offer definite advantages. You can spread your normal investment risk over a broader range of stocks and securities. You can also enjoy the services of professional investment managers plus simplified paperwork and tax reporting. Additional special services are outlined in the Eaton Viking Fund prospectus.

What about risk?

In any investment there is an element of risk. So there can be no guarantee of the return of your investment. Share values fluctuate along with the market value of the securities bought by the fund. There is even the possibility that the market value of your shares at the time you choose to sell could be lower than the purchase price. However, because of the wider range of stocks in the fund, there is generally less risk than if you were to personally invest in a small number of stocks.

How much would I have to invest?

With the Eaton Viking Fund, your initial investment may be as little as $200 plus a $5 administrative fee to open your account. Additional deposits in multiples of $25 can be made at any time, but you are under no obligation whatsoever to make further or repeated investments.

How much is a share worth?

The value of a share varies from time to time. It is determined by dividing the total market value of the securities and other assets held by the Fund, less all liabilities, by the existing number of shares issued. A convenient way to determine share value is by checking the Fund's "bid price" in your daily newspaper, or by contacting an Eaton Financial Centre.

Do I get dividends?

The Eaton Viking Fund is designed primarily for long term capital growth so dividends are automatically re-invested in shares for your account. You may, however, receive dividends in cash if you so desire.

Can I get my money out?

Upon written request, you may redeem any part or all of your shares and receive the proceeds.

What does the Fund do for me?

In addition to investing primarily in shares of Canadian companies with established earnings and dividend records, the Fund provides written confirmation of all shareholder transactions and the services of professional investment managers. The Fund also sends annual T5 Income Tax forms to shareholders.

What does the Fund cost me?

There is a $5 administrative service charge payable when you first open your account. The Fund also charges up to a maximum of 8% when an investment is made. A service fee of $1.50 is payable with each partial redemption of shares. For management and administration, the Fund receives an appropriate percentage of the net assets of the Fund as outlined in the Prospectus.

Are there different ways to invest in the Fund?

Yes. To provide the broadest possible range of benefits from your investment, the Eaton Viking Fund offers three plans under which you may participate.

Voluntary Investment Plan

The VIP plan is extremely flexible. It allows you to invest in a single lump sum, to make periodic payments, or to invest additional amounts at any time you desire. Your initial investment, however, must be at least $200.

Registered Retirement Savings Plan

When you invest in this plan, you may qualify for certain income tax deductions designed to help provide you with financial security in later years. Under this plan, though, you may not pledge or transfer your shares to someone else. If you redeem your shares, such income may be taxable. Further information on this plan can be found in the Fund Prospectus.

Systematic Withdrawal Plan

If the value of your shares in the Fund is at least $5,000, you may arrange to have shares redeemed on a monthly or quarterly basis to provide income for you or someone of your choice. The idea behind this plan is to provide a source of regular supplementary income.

Why right now is a good time to invest

During the Initial Offering Period, which ends December 1st, 1971 the sales charge of up to 8% which is normally associated with an initial investment, is being waived. As you can appreciate, this means increased growth potential for you as an investor. If participation in the Eaton Viking Fund relates favourably to your long term financial considerations, right now is certainly the best time to begin.

How do I become a shareholder?

First you complete the reply coupon included in this advertisement and mail to the address shown. You will then receive a copy of the Eaton Viking Fund Prospectus and an application form.

Gentlemen: Please send me the Eaton Viking Fund Limited Prospectus and application forms. I fully understand that receipt of the Prospectus incurs no obligation on my part. I am, however, interested in the following plan.

☐ Voluntary Investment Plan
☐ Systematic Withdrawal Plan

Who Broke the Ballot Box?

One of the two candidates for student council president at Camosun College asked for a second election today.

Roberta Colli made the request at a noon meeting of the student council. She was protesting the manner in which ballots were counted.

A source close to the situation gave the account of how the election Wednesday went:

Polls for the 1,400 students at the new college were open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. The locked ballot box was to be left and the vote counted by the school staff Thursday morning.

But after the polls closed two students, one of them said to be a member of the student council, forced the ballot box opened and counted the votes.

The count, recorded on a blackboard, gave Wayne McStravick 173 votes and Roberta 117. The ballots were then destroyed.

Gordon Hartley, director of student services, said Thursday the manner of ballot counting had produced "a completely untenable situation" and predicted a second election would be held next week.

McKenzie Resigns From NDP

Former New Democratic Party Oak Bay candidate Jack McKenzie of 2569 Selwyn, Colwood, quit the party Thursday after he was voted off the executive of the Victoria-Oak Bay constituency association.

McKenzie sustained a non-confidence vote of 24 to 4 in a dispute over the issuing of unauthorized press releases.

He was a member of the constituency association for five years. McKenzie explained his resignation this way:

"The things I have done would have been considered in such a light that I would have been asked to resign. Fighting on this issue of releases to the press is over now."

He said he still believes in NDP principles and is likely to continue voting for the party's candidates.

McKenzie ran for the NDP in Oak Bay in 1969. He finished a distant last. He said he is not ruling out the possibility that he would run as an independent in the next federal or provincial election.

Mrs. White Funeral Held Today

Funeral services were held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel today for Mrs. Sarah Jane White, of 424 Linden, a resident of Victoria for more than 80 years.

She died Tuesday at West Bay Hospital in her 90th year.

Born in 1881 in Rhode Island, Mrs. White came to Victoria with her parents when she was a small child.

She was the widow of the late Henry Arthur White.

For many years Mrs. White was an active member of the Salvation Army, serving as a choir member and a worker for the League of Mercy.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Douglas (Laura) Gosse of Victoria; two granddaughters, Mrs. Stephen (Sally) Dzus of Port Alberni and Mrs. John (Marie) Crofton of Victoria; three great-grandsons and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Joyce, also of Victoria.

Today's service was followed by interment in Royal Oak Burial Park.

Uvic Vote Probe Now Under Way

Suspected irregularities in student elections held Tuesday at the University of Victoria will be investigated before election results are made official.

Balloting results became suspect Thursday after a recount was held of voting for student representatives to the university senate.

After Tuesday's count, Derry McDonell led the voting with 913 votes. Brian Alguire was second with 795 votes and Bob Higinbotham trailed with 768, only 27 behind Alguire.

Higinbotham requested a recount which resulted in his gaining four votes to 772 and Alguire losing 10 votes to 785. The difference is now only 13 votes. McDonell's total dropped eight votes to 905.

After the Tuesday count, a proposed constitutional amendment was believed defeated because it did not gain the needed two-thirds majority.

SWING OF 206 VOTES

The amendment, which would allow students to oust a poorly-performing executive member through a referendum, gained 1,010 votes to 531 against it, just under the two-thirds majority.

After the recount, the total was 1,192 in favor, 507 against, a total swing of 206 votes. The amendment with this result easily passes the two-thirds requirement.

Chief returning officer Mike Farr is preparing a report on the election, including what he says are irregularities.

The report will be presented to members of the Representative Assembly, the student government, at its meeting Sunday night.

IRREGULARITIES

"I am unable to release the official results of the recent senate elections, executive byelections, referenda and Representative Assembly elections until certain irregularities or inconsistencies in the holding of the polls have been thoroughly investigated," Farr said today in a prepared statement.

"The result of this investigation and my recommendation will be made available to the Representative Assembly for its decision as to the validity of the election."

Farr said he did not wish to elaborate on the irregularities of the election until he had finished his report. He did not discount the possibility of another set of elections being held, however.

One of the issues students voted on Tuesday was a proposed re-allotment of athletic funds to academic affairs. The result, if the referendum had passed, would have meant curtailment of the university's extra-mural athletics.

The referendum failed by a vote of 454 in favor to 1,601 against.

Also voted in was a proposal that a visiting professor be hired by students and paid from student fees. The intention was to hire dismissed English professor Dr. William Goede for the rest of this year. The referendum also failed, 584 in favor to 1,018 against.

Recounts were not made of these two referenda.

Wallace Quits Tories

Independent Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace said today he has resigned from the federal Progressive Conservative party.

Wallace said he had done so because he was told that federal party membership automatically means membership in the B.C. Tories. The MLA said he no longer has any interest in joining the provincial party because of internal bickering and a lack of concern for policy.

Wallace quit the Social Credit party in August. He says he is thinking about forming a new party.

Duncan Fears Not Amchitka

DUNCAN — In the event of disaster on Vancouver Island — Duncan is prepared.

Jim Quaife, chairman of the Cowichan civil defence organization, said today the group has the facilities and trained volunteers to handle any emergency that may arise in the Cowichan Valley or act as an evacuation centre for nearby cities.

With their portable hospital and generator, Quaife said civil defence can set up a instant hospital and kitchen facilities.

He assured local residents Cowichan civil defence can handle the aftermath of an earthquake, either the natural variety or one caused by detonation of the proposed nuclear blast on Amchitka Island.

"I hope that Canadian and American pressure being brought to bear on Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon is successful in stopping the blast," Mayor Quaife said.

"I would like to see all nuclear testing banned."

Quaife said his civil defence section can't take any further precautions in preparation for the blast.

On that day, if an earthquake should occur, Quaife said residents should listen to their local radio station which will have automatically gone on to emergency broadcasting.

"They will keep the public informed on further procedures to take. If homes are damaged we will have volunteer parties available to carry out evacuation."

Quaife said emergency procedures are determined by the local civil defence co-ordinator, Ted Bolin, and his assistant, John Sanders.

"These men determine the severity of a disaster. If they know it to be major they are prepared to spring into action."

MAYOR HADDOCK with the controversial plaque

ABOUT THAT PLAQUE MYSTERIOUSLY BACK

It was seven months ago that Mayor Courtney Haddock lost his fight to have a plaque of the city's coat of arms mounted over the mayor's chair in the council chamber. Now, in time for Thursday's council meeting, a colored wooden plaque has appeared above the mayor's chair.

The plaque's presence was soon noticed, and questioned by one alderman. But it was not until after the meeting that Haddock got a really angry reaction — from the resident who had donated the mahogany and gold-leaf screen on which the plaque has been mounted.

Mrs. Elsie Shepherd, 3751 Nancy Hanks, who with her husband had donated the screen to the city in 1964, buttonholed Haddock for some minutes and protested at the action.

NO OBLIGATION

Ald. Tom Christie first queried why the plaque was there and who had authorized it, as he understood council had killed the proposal at its meeting in late March.

Haddock replied it was there for aldermen to view, "to see if you like it or not." There was no obligation to accept it and no cost to the city involved, he assured them.

Ald. Percy Frampton, one of the original supporters of the coat of arms proposal, said at the time council had been considering the matter they had only a paper hand-painted scroll to look at.

"It didn't really give us any picture at all," Frampton said. The artist had therefore offered to prepare a proper wooden plaque for council to consider.

COUPLE OF WEEKS

"I personally think it looks very well," Frampton added. "It doesn't detract from the screen at all; it enhances the screen. Look at it for a couple of weeks and see how you feel."

It took less than two weeks for Ald. Ove Witt to make up his mind, and only four words to express his opinion. "I don't like it," he said.

Ald. Harold Olafson then got an assurance from the mayor that the matter would be raised again at the next council meeting.

Afterwards, as Mrs. Shepherd tackled Haddock, she described the screen as a work of art specifically designed to complement and display the three gilt and red plush chairs on the mayoral dais, the only furnishings retained from the old council chamber.

"It's like a painting," she went on. "You don't tamper with a painting. How would you feel if you'd given the Mona Lisa to the Louvre and someone stuck a rose on her dress?"

Assuring her nothing had been decided on the plaque, Haddock said: "If you make a gift to a person or an institution it is a permanent thing. You don't have a continuing claim on it."

Blood Donor Target Set

Red Cross officials have set a target of 1,150 donors for the seven blood donor clinics to be held next week.

The clinics will be held at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, Monday and Tuesday; the first day's clinics being from 2:30 to 4:20 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. On Tuesday clinic hours will be 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Clinics will be held at the University of Victoria's Student Union Building Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, starting each morning at 9:30 a.m. and continuing until 4:30 p.m.

Ceylon PM To Visit Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. Sirimavo R. D. Bandaranaike, prime minister of Ceylon, will arrive here Oct. 21 for a three-day visit, Prime Minister Trudeau announced today.

Mr. Trudeau had invited Mrs. Bandaranaike to visit Ottawa while he was in Ceylon in January. She will arrive here after visiting the United Nations and Washington.

Six Policemen May Face Charges Because of Riot

VANCOUVER (CP) Mayor Tom Campbell said Thursday six members of the city police force could face criminal charges as a result of their actions during the Aug. 7 Gastown riot.

Campbell said the information gathered in a police department investigation as well as a transcript of the hearings held by Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm had been turned over to city prosecutor Stewart McMorran, who will proceed with charges if he finds sufficient grounds.

If McMorran does not find grounds for charges, Campbell said, the matter will be referred to the police commission for possible internal disciplinary action.

In a report on the Gastown disturbance released last week, Mr. Justice Dohm said some members of the police force used excessive force during the riot.

Dohm's report resulted from 10 days of hearings, prompted by complaints about the behavior of police in dispersing a crowd in the rejuvenated old sector of the city. People had gathered to participate in, and to watch, a "smoke-in" organized to protest a police crackdown on drug use in the area.

Campbell did not identify the policemen currently facing action. He said the men will probably face charges of assault, if charges are laid.

The mayor made the announcement following an hour-long meeting of the police commission.

"The police were in a difficult situation that night and some of them might have made mistakes," she said.

Action Initiated

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Health Care Insurance Commission has started legal action against 23 policy holders who haven't paid their premiums.

A commission spokesman said Thursday court proceedings have been initiated against 19 persons in Edmonton, three in the Calgary area and one in another city.

He said it was the first time since the compulsory health insurance plan was implemented July 1, 1969 that "firm legal action" has been started against residents who "we feel are able to pay but are either unwilling or have neglected to pay their premiums."

Strike Continues

EDMONTON (CP) — "No school before Monday at the earliest," said the recorded announcement from the Alberta Teachers' Association Thursday night.

The news blackout on the strike of 850 teachers in eight districts north and west of here is broken only by a "this-is-a-recording" announcement by the ATA, which outlines daily developments in the contract dispute between the teachers and the North West Central School Authorities' Association.

The teachers went on strike a week ago, giving about 20,000 pupils in the area an enforced holiday.

The announcement Thursday night said only that the teachers' negotiation team is ready to hold meetings, but no date has been set and there would be no school before Monday — at the earliest.

Alumni Meet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Alumni of the University of Winnipeg gather at their alma mater Saturday to celebrate the university's 100th birthday and install the university's second president, Dr. H. E. Duckworth.

The institution, which opened with 17 students in a tiny schoolhouse in North Winnipeg, began under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church and was the first Canadian college west of Lake Superior.

Seeding Plans

EDMONTON (CP) — Prairie farmers plan to increase their seeding of wheat, barley, rye and rapeseed next spring, the Canadian wheat board says in a report on preliminary quota assignments for 1971-72.

At the same time, acreage seeded to oats and flaxseed will decrease compared with the 1970-71 crop year which ended July 31.

60 and Out

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — A resolution calling for lowering of the retirement age to 60 was defeated Thursday by delegates to the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Federation of Labor.

The retirement resolution was defeated on the grounds it would be difficult to put into effect across Canada.

"The only possibility is with provincial employees," a dissenting delegate said from the floor, adding that the Canada Pension Plan and other old-age programs are not available until the present retirement age of 65.

Contractor Fined

EDMONTON (CP) — John Schouten, an Edmonton contractor, was fined $5,000 in provincial court Thursday on three charges of income tax evasion and filing false returns.

Judge Carl Rolf also fined Schouten's company, John Schouten and Sons Ltd., $7,500 on one charge of evasion.

Schouten and the company pleaded guilty to all charges.

Protest Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — An organization of eight ethnic communities in the Vancouver area plans a series of protests during the Oct. 22-24 visit here of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The co-ordinating committee for the Kosygin protest is made up of members of Czechoslovakian, Estonian, Hungarian, Jewish, Latvian, Lithuanian, Polish and Ukranian ethnic groups.

Andy Semotiuk, a third-year law student at the University of British Columbia, said Thursday the organization was formed last week after the various groups had planned separate demonstrations.

'World Precedent'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's 28 ecological reserves, established this year, will provide "living laboratories" for future generations, Lands Minister Ray Williston said Thursday.

Williston told the annual meeting of the B.C. Ecological Reserves Committee that the natural reserves, set up to maintain specific areas in their natural state forever, were setting a precedent for the rest of the world.

The committee heard detailed applications for an additional 27 reserves, which will be forwarded to the government for approval. Many of them are being selected to preserve a unique type of vegetation, geology, animals or birds.

Join Meeting

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A group of Canadian members of Parliament, as yet unnamed, have been invited to Washington to discuss the proposed United States nuclear test on Amchitka Island with some U.S. congressmen.

Mark Rose, New Democratic Party MP for Fraser Valley West, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa Thursday that he spoke with Senator Mike Gravel and the Alaska Democrat proposed a meeting next week between the Canadians and U.S. congressmen opposed to the blast.

He said he hoped a representative of each party in the house of commons would attend the Washington meeting, tentatively scheduled for next Thursday.

THE WEATHER

Cooler and drier air now covers the province as an upper level disturbance moved to the south. This typical winter situation has cleared skies in all regions while outflow winds are occurring along much of the coast. This will hold through Saturday in all areas except for the north coast. A Pacific system now moving slowly eastward across the Gulf of Alaska will spread cloud into the north coast region late today. Temperatures will remain cool.

Mercury Montego MX Brougham 2-door hardtop

Get '72 Montegos while they're at '71 model prices.*

Today a new lifestyle. And now, a new car to match it. At yesterday's prices. The 1972 Montego.

This is the car that is causing so much excitement in the Mercury dealers' showrooms. The public reaction to it has been nothing short of fantastic.

A totally new car, Montego challenges all other mid-size cars and even the ride of larger cars.

To smooth out the road, we gave it a high stability suspension system—the same type design that's on our most expensive luxury cars. Smoothness that holds you through the curves and lets you make lane changes without excessive swerve.

There's a sporty 2-door Montego and a slightly larger 4-door model. It all adds up to make Montego one of the most maneuverable, easy-to-handle cars you've ever had your hands on.

Outside, a clean uncluttered sweep from the front grille to the smartly styled rear bumper with integral taillights. And ventless windows to give you a totally clear view.

Inside, luxury is the keynote. Contoured, deep foam padded seats that give you the feel and comfort of a much bigger car. And a sound insulation package that deadens noise, before it gets to you, is another feature that's standard on all Montegos.

As for value, we'll match it to any big car on the road.

Standard equipment includes a proven, economical 250-CID 6-cylinder engine. And front disc brakes, designed to stop you straight and fast.

In addition, for your protection, each Montego comes equipped with the full complement of Ford Motor Company Safety Design Features. Like the dual hydraulic brake system with warning light, energy absorbing steering column and steel guard rails in every door.

For even more luxury, Montego has an impressive list of options. Personal comforts like air conditioning, electric rear window defroster, AM-FM Multiplex radio, power side windows and 6-way power bench seats to name a few.

Montego — in nine exciting models, including station wagons. This is the car that challenges all other mid-size ca.s. Test drive the totally new Montego today, and find out how it can fit your lifestyle.

Manufacturer a Friend of Consumer

Women who are fed up with seeing bathing suits in the stores in February and wool knits in July have an unexpected champion in Montreal manufacturer Irwin (Dizzy) Dizgun.

Besides being unfair to consumers who don't like having either to buy out of season or put up with last year's rejects, he said in a recent interview, fashion is too volatile now for the customary habit of designing and selling three months in advance.

Furthermore, since store buyers commit themselves in May to clothes designed for September, they are forced to proceed with plans to advertise the garments even though a sudden switch in clothing fads has made them outdated.

For example, Mr. Dizgun said, hot pants were the biggest things going last May. Since the style which finishes a season strong traditionally leads the next season as well, designers planning their fall lines had little reason to fear that hot pants would not still be extremely popular in October.

But by June, the trend was shifting to warm pants, blazers and pleated skirts which hadn't been seen for years.

Hot pants were out, he said, and "I was embarrassed to see in August a full-page ad for fall hot pants that we had manufactured."

Buying Out of Season Disturbs Him Too

Promoting even slightly out-of-date clothes as up-to-the-minute styles just because a store is stuck with them is unfair to the customer, Mr. Dizgun continued, adding that it was this realization which prompted him to transform the entire manufacturing setup of Marty K Fashions Ltd.

Since June, his designers and assembly line have been working on an abbreviated schedule — six weeks from design to delivery and marketing.

What it means is that "we used to have 98 or 100 styles for advance buying and now we're down to 45 or 50."

"Instead of waiting for customer reaction, we must decide for ourselves what is so-called 'in' and right.

"It took a little courage and perhaps a little more money in the bank to begin with, but we find the operation extremely easy now.

"True, we may lose a little business now, but I'm confident we will catch up later on."

Mr. Dizgun said that whereas department store chains used to commit 60 per cent of their clothing budget to advance purchasing, the amount will drop to 50 per cent next year and "I advised them to go to 40 per cent."

The remaining 50 or 60 per cent of the budget will be used for re-orders of popular items and fill-ins from manufacturers "who have seen the light" and are on the six-week plan.

Mr. Dizgun said his company is not the only one to break into the shortened regime, but there are still a lot of holdouts who are, in his words, "just a little pig-headed."

Their stubbornness in clinging to the method of designing three months ahead, he explained, arises from a fashion tradition of trying to be first with a new style by rushing the season.

This worked for many years, Mr. Dizgun said, but now that fashion is so fickle, manufacturers and stores can't afford to sink their funds into styles which may be old before they reach the rack.

Asked about the potential of a four-week schedule, he said it was not technically possible at present.

"Besides, there isn't any need — what woman can afford to change her wardrobe every month?"

(By The Canadian Press)

DEAR ABBY

No Woman Is Too Old

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow of 67, but I don't look it. A widower of 52 has been after me to marry him. All my family is married, and so is his. I am a good-looking woman, I'm told.

Do you think I'm too old for this man?—Out East.

DEAR OUT: No woman is too old for a man she is young enough to get.

DEAR ABBY: You told Willie, who had been giving his female bookkeeper "a few kisses" because he couldn't afford to give her a pay raise, that the cheapest solution would be to give her a raise. (Willie's wife had already caught wise.)

You are probably on sound ground, marriage-wise. But are you on sound economic ground?

DEAR R.L.L.: Willie has it made. He can't give her a pay raise or Nixon will nail him. And if his wife catches him kissing his bookkeeper, he'll get it in the assets.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were invited to a 2 p.m. wedding. We arrived a few minutes late, so we tiptoed in and found two seats in the back pew.

Not 10 seconds after we had sat down a gentleman tapped my husband on the shoulder and motioned for us to follow him outside. He then told us we were not permitted to stay because we had arrived late. He said he was acting on instruction from the bride's parents. The ceremony had not begun.

We stood outside the church, terribly disappointed, and met another couple who had also been turned away. They were relatives of the groom and had driven 300 miles.

I know people should be on time for weddings, Abby, but what do you think of treating guests like this?—Good Intentions

DEAR GOOD: I can understand why late-comers would not be allowed to trail in during the wedding ceremony, but to have asked you to leave once you had entered quietly and sat down was ridiculous.

DEAR ABBY: Well I've heard it all — the pastor of a church in Indian Orchard, Mass., gives the wedding couple a $25 cleaning bill to be paid in advance in case rice is thrown at the bride and groom as they leave the church. I'll bet the same pastor sends out balance-due notices to greet the honeymooners on their return if they neglected what he felt was enough of that green stuff crammed into the pastor's envelope for service he rendered. Blessings, yet?

If it takes more than a half hour to clean up the rice before a funeral that is to follow, the I suggest more time be allowed between.

I hope at my funeral someone will leave behind a bit of the happiness of a wedding that just took place, and someone in that funeral sees it and smiles at the joy it must have brought.—Grandma.

DEAR GRANDMA: You're beautiful.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off you chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Trust Company Staff 'Takes Men Off Guard'

PICTON, Ont. (CP) — A trust company branch office here is completely staffed by women and the customers — even the men — seem to be enjoying it.

When Virginia Ralley took over managership of the Standard Trust Company office in Armory Shopping Mall she described it as "a real challenge."

Now, with Sharon Coulter and Linda Hogan on her staff, the office is completely female.

Mrs. Ralley joined the Picton branch three years ago after working for a time in Toronto with the citizenship and immigration branch.

With her husband Allan teaching at the high school here and her five daughters, now ranging in age from 11 to 16, growing up, she was ready for a new career.

How do male customers react when they find the manager is a woman?

"It takes them off guard for a moment — but they recover quickly," says Mrs. Ralley.

Males readily accept her financial advice and she thinks men like to have a woman wait on them providing she has the necessary knowledge and is efficient.

She recalls one older man who came to the company to buy guaranteed investment certificates. He paid for them with a large roll of bills well protected — with mothballs. The smell lingered in the bank all day.

Another Picton woman who combines the jobs of housewife and executive is Margaret Ackerman, a former nurse, who is mayor of Picton.

Test Determines Cancer Potential

BALTIMORE, Md. (Reuter) —Scientists at the Johns Hopkins school of hygiene and public health have found a fast, sensitive test to determine the cancer-causing potential of new chemical compounds.

The test could be a boon to industrial researchers and government regulators concerned with the safety of new products.

It usually takes at least three months to test compounds by determining whether substances produce cancer in laboratory animals.

The new procedure, developed by Dr. Paul Ts'o and his colleagues, can provide this answer in from 10 minutes to a half-hour.

Dr. Ts'o said that additional work being performed by his group one day may permit doctors to distinguish individuals with a lower resistance to cancer than others.

Persons found to have a low resistance would be told not to smoke and — perhaps — not to live in a heavily polluted city, he said.

The basis for his findings is the interaction between chemical compounds and DNA — deoxyribonucleic acid — in individual cells. DNA is found in all cells and is the material of which genes are made.

Essentially, Dr. Ts'o synthesized a chemical substance naturally formed by animals when they are exposed to a known cancer-causing hydrocarbon called benzoapyrene.

His team found that the substance produces what is known as a chemical radical that attaches itself to DNA. Other hydrocarbons, not known to cause cancer, did not react in the same way.

Pill Linked To Clotting

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Johns Hopkins University researchers have reported new evidence linking contraceptive pills with danger clotting in blood vessels following injury or surgery.

They said their research, which supported similar work in Britain and the United States, revealed that risk of the clotting condition, thromboembolism, was six times greater among women using contraceptive pills.

Her Illness Leads to Medical Discovery

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marilyn Rose has contributed "Staph Rose" to the annals of medicine.

"Staph Rose" is a stubborn strain of staphylococcus, first isolated from a series of 67 boils that made Mrs. Rose critically ill in 1955.

The strain of staph was used in the testing and development of a new antibiotic, minocin minocycline — approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). When the antibiotic was given to mice infected with "Staph Rose" it kept them alive through the night. Other antibiotics didn't do that. The mice died.

Mrs. Rose said in an interview that she contributed the strain of staph to the testing program somewhat by accident.

She was a secretary at the research laboratory where the drug was developed when the boils struck while she was recovering from abdominal surgery.

The series of boils occurred over a three-month period. Then her husband, Stanley, an electrician, began getting them. He had 28. Their daughter, five, was sent to live with relatives lest she, too, get the infection.

Mrs. Rose, of Pearl River, N.Y., recalled that all antibiotics failed to rid her system of the infection.

"It was the biggest crisis I ever had," she said. "The three months seemed like an eternity. I was so sick."

What finally happened was that doctors at the medical department of the Lederle Laboratories where Mrs. Rose worked tried what sometimes helps in such cases. They isolated the infectious agent in the boils and made a toxoid out of it.

Mrs. Rose then received injections of that for several months. Her body gradually developed antibodies — chemical soldiers — that battled down the pesky strain of staph.

The researchers kept the strain of staph alive — recording it in scientific annals as "Staph Rose." It was at the testing stage of the new antibiotic — actually a fourth-generation strain of tetracycline — that they put the drug on the firing line.

Mice infected with the submicroscopic "bug" died overnight when a battery of existing antibiotics were tried to cure them of the staph infection. Then, one day, during the 10 years involved in the development of the new antibiotic — the researchers walked in and found the mice had lived through the night. Indeed, they were getting well.

It was then that the scientists knew they had a potentially powerful antibiotic.

It's the Gamble of Racing She Likes

'A Crash Is a Good Thing'

EDMONTON (CP) — Louise Roberge is a faaaast woman!

Twenty-seven and the mother of three children, the pretty brunette from Quebec City is one of a rare breed. She's among the few women in the world who drive formula cars professionally — those funny machines that are little more than a powered fuel tank on wheels.

"I like the competition," she says when asked why she races cars, struggling to find the words in English to describe her love for what is primarily a man's sport.

"I like it not only in motor racing, but also in the other things I like to do. I also like the gamble. For me it's not work. It's a pleasure."

As well as campaigning for the national Formula Ford championship, she is a partner in a Quebec City graphic arts firm. And if this and her racing aren't enough, she also sails, skates, canoes, rides a motorcycle and has had a go at skydiving.

In case you're thinking this is a gravel-voiced female who would be at home in a lumber camp, Louise Roberge is a slim five feet four inches and weighs exactly 100 pounds.

Placed Fifth

Her racing career started four years ago when she bought an Austin Cooper S and entered a competition school event with a friend "just for the fun of it." A fifth-place finish and Louise was hooked.

Four novice races in 1968 won her a national competition licence. In 1969 she entered the Quebec regional championship in her Cooper, now much-modified.

Next was her step into the world of formula cars, twitchy rear-engined machines with a completely different set of handling characteristics from her little front-engined Cooper.

After trying a used Lotus 61, she bought a new Lotus 69 and took an intensive three-day course at the Jim Russell Racing School at le Circuit near Mont Tremblant, Que.

The 69, powered by a four-cylinder Cortina engine putting out 105 horsepower, is good for a top speed of about 135 miles an hour on a long straight with the proper gearing.

She and Louis Germain, her partner in Caractera Inc., their graphic arts firm, form the racing team sponsored by a tobacco company. The cars are white with a rainbow stripe.

This season was Louise's first crack at national competition, racing against men who have been doing it for years. But she has not placed in the money.

Her husband Matthieu, chief pharmacist at Quebec City's Hospital Christ-Roi, has been a great help.

'Encouraged Me'

"He was the first to encourage me to race and this is the first time he is not with me," she said during an interview in the back of a truck in the pits at Edmonton International Speedway between heats of a recent race.

What do her children, aged eight, five and seven, think of their mother being a race driver?

"I think for them it's quite normal. They've always been involved and I think it's just like a girl who is an artist — her children are used to it and don't think it's unusual."

Louise doesn't let the thought of a crash stop her from giving a race all she can.

"Accidents? I flipped the Mini at Trois-Rivieres after I braked too late before a turn but I wasn't hurt although the car looked like an accordion."

The only other crash she has had was at le Circuit when the suspension failed on the Cooper.

"I think, in a way, it's a good thing to have a crash. It's not too terrible to flip because everything is fastened down and there's really little danger. It's not too terrible at all."

Youths Save Salmon Fry

Feed the salmon fry, especially in smaller streams and creeks, before they reach the smolt stage and are ready to go down to the sea, and you cut the mortality rate by the thousands.

This has been substantiated during the past four years in fish nutrition research at University of Victoria's biology and biochemistry department, with Dr. David Groves a dedicated guide and counsellor.

Practical proof was added this summer. Through a federal Opportunities for Youth grant, 10 high school and university students took on the work of feeding salmon fry, twice a day, over a 10-mile area along De Mamiel and Tugwell creeks in Sooke.

Project Sponsored

The project was sponsored by the Amalgamated Conservation Society with a blessing from the federal department of fisheries and full co-operation of the Pacific Logging Company, as well as from field personnel in Sooke and Victoria.

Data for an official report on results is still being gathered. However, Dr. Groves, who acted as liaison between students, various groups and his own department, is certain the experiment was a success.

As he explains it, of the millions of salmon fry that come out of the gravel after hatching, not more than 15 to 20 per cent survive under wild feeding conditions.

There is not enough food to go around. Consequently the other 80 or so per cent starve . . . "at least the little ones starve or, in the struggle for survival, are eaten by the bigger ones."

He explains: "We did not feed the fry as much as they would take . . . that would have made them lazy. Rather we gave them perhaps 50 per cent of what they would normally get in wild feed."

Sacked commercial fish food was used. At the end of four months the fish were measured and checked. "And we discovered that, while the greater number were not quite as large as those that live on wild feed only, four times as many had survived and the smaller ones had received enough to give them strength to fight for existence."

In the normal course of events, salmon fry the students fed during the summer in Sooke migrate next March. By the fall of 1972 they will be grilse, and in the following fall they will return to spawn.

There is a possibility, however, as Dr. Grove tells it, that through this feeding, they may have gained a whole year in their life cycle and many could be back to spawn next fall.

Feeding was started in June when streams were getting low and the water was warming up. Fish require more feed then to keep alive and usually there is heavy loss during July, August and September.

On the other hand, as Dr. Groves explains, "fish can grow even in low, warm water, if feed is available."

He believes it is biologically and economically feasible to feed salmon fry in smaller streams through a continuing program, and in this way to send more and bigger smolt out to sea and with a better chance of survival.

$1,000 Each

Students who worked on this Opportunity for Youth project received $1,000 each. When you think of the number of fry they fed that works out to about 2½ cents a fish.

"You can't put hatcheries on small streams and creeks," David Groves reminds you, "and it is there you find the greatest mortality rate."

Then he looks straight at you and you know he is thinking — so let's feed them.

Other phases of the summer youth project saw 50,000 fry salvaged and placed in Sooke River above the falls, as many more put into Cowichan Lake and some feeding done in the Leech River area.

Future Diet of Pizza? 'Deplorable'

NEW YORK (AP) — Cooking experts and fancy food fans are predictably piqued at a nutritionist's suggestion that the menu of the future may be founded on such things as peanut butter and pizza.

"Deplorable," said one cooking teacher. "Purgatory," said another. "A rash statement," commented a gourmet shop manager; "impossible," sneered a restaurant owner.

The suggestion came from Dr. George C. Graham of Johns Hopkins University. He predicted that modern technology would enable women to spend less time in the kitchen and to serve nutritional diets composed of "hand foods" — sandwiches, pizzas, rolls and pastry.

The forerunners of the future, Graham contended, are hamburgers and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

"What a deplorable, miserable situation to live in — peanut butter sandwiches and pizzas. Cooking is a creative art and people, particularly young people, are beginning to find it out."

Maurice Moore-Betty, a Briton who runs a cooking school in New York and who recently wrote a cookbook, said of the suggestion: "My reaction is horror. I don't see why fine cooking should die out any more than people should give up painting or music."

What does he think of a diet of peanut butter and pizza? "It would be purgatory," said Moore-Betty. "I can't imagine anything worse."

One of the few exceptions to the general dismay was Graham Kerr, the "Galloping Gourmet" television chef with the casual approach to complicated recipes.

In a telephone interview from Bournemouth, England, Kerr said of the new food, "It's got to happen. If we don't take some sort of rational approach to in-depth agriculture, only the very, very rich will be able to eat natural food. What is considered good food today is going to be prohibitively expensive."

Besides, he said, "I predict that within 25 years 60 per cent of the people will be living on pills and a milky substance obtained from roots."

NEW COURSE

A course for those who dispose of their own sewage will be offered by the Saanich school board starting Monday night at 7:30 at North Saanich Junior Secondary.

The two-session course, entitled Septic Tank Systems, is for the householder who wants to know more about septic tanks and whether his tank is efficient or malfunctioning.

The second session will be on Oct. 25 at the same place.

Partridge Points To Excellence

University of Victoria president Bruce Paryridge told the Victoria Rotary Club Thursday a university which does not demand excellence is dead.

Partridge was speaking to the club on the pursuit of excellence and said that some people feel threatened when they realize quality is being demanded of them in their jobs.

When they are threatened, Partridge said, they protest. But the ones who maintain high standards in their work seek to keep the standards high.

Partridge made references to the dispute which has gone on at the Uvic campus over the last two years, first over the questioning of his degrees, and then over dismissal of three professors.

It is his personal conviction, he said, to maintain high standards, even when the cost is high and "the noise level intense."

He said society now accepts mediocrity and tends not to reward excellence out of fear of hurting the feelings of those who do not achieve highly.

Success Traced Back to the Crib . . . and Even Before

Success-Birth Order Theory Disproved

Many social scientists have found statistical associations between success and birth order — first born child, second, etc. Now comes Dr. Howard M. Bahr with a switch. He looked for associations between failure and birth order.

He found only one, but one which contradicted a success-birth order association. However, he had a technical problem the other scientists didn't have. It's easy to identify apparent successes. You take the men who are at the top of their calling or profession.

But how do you select a large group — and you must have a large group to achieve statistical significance — who are, by common consent including their own, dismally complete failures?

Bahr wanted to cross-check the success findings. These studies agreed that the successful were most likely to have been first-borns or only children.

Theories have been built on these findings. One is that first-borns and only children are given more responsibilities by their parents, have more opportunities to identify with them and other adults, and thus achieve a higher degree of socialization while still children.

"Successful adults usually not only take responsibilities but seek them. They readily affiliate with other people and are thoroughly socialized, that is, they're always in the swim whatever the swim is.

Bahr, who is a sociologist at Washington State University, took for his unchallengeable failures 203 residents of New York City's Bowery, one of the world's more notorious "skid rows," and 199 inmates of a rehabilitation camp specializing in Bowery bums.

Such men refuse responsibility, even for themselves. In Bahr's words, they are "under-socialized" which is speaking in a whisper. Their ability to affiliate, even with one another, is markedly low.

"They are commonly stigmatized as failures and conceived as occupying one of the lowest imaginable social statuses," Bahr said.

It should follow than, if first-borns and only children are more likely to succeed than those lower in a birth order, that relatively few first borns and only children should be among them.

Bahr found this was not so. First-borns were represented in the same general proportion they occupy in the general population. But only children were distinctly "over-represented."

In reporting his study to the Centre of Alcohol Studies at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N.J., Bahr offered an explanatiin which he conceded was speculation.

If parents expect more of an only child than they would of a number of children and if this accounts for so much success for only children, then the same set-up could account for many failures. "Unreasonably high parental expectations" could eventually foster a retreat from the competitive world, he said.

When a baby first discovers he can walk, he's so happy about the new-found skill that he practices it unto exhaustion.

But even before he gains that skill the little human discovers other skills while in his crib during the first year of life. If he doesn't get a chance to practice those new powers, he becomes bored.

Authorities in child development know that and have been trying to do something about it, coming up with mobiles that hang over the crib and keep the baby visually stimulated.

But the mobiles didn't quite offer the "total stimulation" needed in the first 12 months of life and that's why a team of child development experts headed by Frank Caplan, of Princeton, N.J., have invented a super crib.

Experts' $350 Super Crib Helps New-Born Develop

Caplan, in child development since the 1930s, learned his ABCs in the field under the tutelage of Carolyn Pratt, who started the nursery school movement in America. He went on to invent toys and later founded creative playthings.

The super crib has accessories designed to help the child practice newly discovered skills during what has been determined to be "the most powerful learning period" — the period right after discovery.

Some of these skills include grasping, pulling, turning, spinning, and even looking into a mirror and making faces.

Caplan said in an interview the super crib was designed to meet the needs for same as outlined by 16 pediatricians, psychologists and early childhood educators during a three-day conference on Infancy Stimulation and Environment.

The workshop participants agreed on the following:

"To develop an infant's powers of sight, hearing and touch, we must give him a way to control his environment and to make it more responsive to his demands.

"They agreed on the need to convert the cage-like atmosphere of today's cribs to a see-through environment that allows each infant to choose his own activities at his own pace, and provides challenge at each maturation level," Caplan said.

He thinks the super crib, produced by the new firm he heads, Edcom Systems Inc., of Princeton, N. J., does the job. The basic model costs from $125 to $150 and includes a kind of window. The mother changes displays of interest to the infant.

Then for $50 more the mother gets six modules, choosing same from many available. The inventory of modules includes mirrors, fish tanks, push and pil things, chimes, and rattles, pendulum balls, spiral twirlers, bar activators, gripper boards, bellows and pin wheels, peek-a-boo doors, design rods, crib rail cars and trains, texture boards. There are also electronic things: A microphone a child scratches. He hears the noise amplified.

The de luxe super crib costs $350, is hexagonal in shape and has three levels — crib, crawling level and what might be a terrace or canopy level. One level provides the developing baby with sight and sound stimulation.

New Plan Gives Patients Voice in U.S. Hospitals

NEW YORK (UPI) — To Anne Alexis Corte, former nurse, the patient is the most important person in the hospital. If necessary, she will go right to the director's door to see that the attitude prevails among the total staff.

Miss Corte represents a new trend on the national hospital scene — an ombudswoman, the liaison between patient and all those involved in caring for him or her, the person who sees that a complaint or request does not get bogged down in some departmental red tape. She's the direct line to the top.

It is not an easy job for the striking auburn-haired Miss Corte (pronounced Cortay). She works at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre, one of the largest medical complexes in the nation. Last year, the hospital's in and out-patient load totalled nearly 245,000.

She estimates that last year she saw some 1,500 of these personally and concedes that's only touching the surface — "obviously not getting to all the problems."

Idea Expanding

But the direct line idea is expanding. Miss Corte said in an interview that some 80 hospitals have named patient representatives and that a newly-formed organization, (she is the secretary), The Association of Patient Service Representatives, has petitioned the American Hospital Association for affiliation.

"When in doubt you take the patient's side," said Miss Corte. "It may be something as simple as a patient complaining there was no orange juice on her breakfast tray. Maybe she didn't want orange juice at all. Maybe she wanted attention."

Or it may be more complicated, since New York is a teaching hospital and "sometimes the patient feels like a guinea pig with so many doctors around." In such a case, she listens to the patient's complaints, goes to the floor's resident doctor and asks him to explain to the patient why other doctors also are around.

It may be a problem with bills. Or pills. "Many doctors now tell the patient what pills he's on and why," said Miss Corte. "The patient who wants to know should be informed."

Injured Back

Miss Corte, who's from the South Jersey resort town of Margate, came into her job as ombudswoman because of a back injury sustained while lifting a patient. Some monitoring equipment toppled onto her.

It ended the three and one-half year career she'd spent as R.N. New York-Cornell. But while she was recovering — "in a strange hospital" — she began to see acutely why patients left with little self-identification except a wristband with their name tag and a number on it, would have fears and anxieties.

During convalescence, she talked one day with Dr. David Thompson, New York Hospital director, about "the problems patients face when they are hospitalized." Why not a patient representative? Why not, Thompson said, and appointed her with full responsibility for reporting directly to him.

She concedes that some patients can be difficult, trying for doctors, nurses, aides and all. "But the problem is they're sick," she said, emphasizing again the patient first.

SHE SITS ON COUNCIL

CALGARY (CP) — For the first time in 11 years, Calgary has a woman on city council.

Barbara Scott, in her first political venture, was elected in the southwest section following municipal elections this week.

"I ran as a person. I don't feel that just because I'm on council the women of Calgary now have a voice. It's the Ward 4 people who have a voice."

Mary Dover was the last woman alderman and she served two terms, from 1949 to 1952, and from 1956 to 1960.

Miss Scott said she ran partly out of concern for the future of Calgary and because she wants more effective liaison between the city and communities.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, Oct. 16, 1971

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Guard health. Take nothing for granted where important chores, even details are concerned. Protect your own territory. Show others that you are not without allies. Means maintain ready stance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on the creative. Stick to your own style. Don't give in to one who may want you to take easy way. Key is to adhere to individuality. Welcome contacts, challenges. Make new starts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stress the practical. Steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes. Hunch pays off; heed inner voice. Aquarius person could play prominent role. Refuse to be drawn into family squabble. Be kind, mature.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent versatility. Realize you are not bound to one method. Indications point to short journey, special dealings wih neighbor, relative. Avoid scattering efforts. Finish one thing at a time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on money, personal possessions, ability to collect needed information. Be aware of apparent minor points. Important to check details, to read between the lines. Someone is telling you something.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle high; circumstances favor your special efforts. Be ready for change, travel, a variety of experiences. Member of opposite sex is involved. Be confident. Highlight bright colors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis is on what occurs behind scenes. Work in conjunction with organization, group, hospital. Fine for co-operating in charity drive. Family member comes up with valid suggestion. Give credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stress friendship, ways of increasing occupational income. Key is to be perceptive. Separate the real from fair-weather variety. A Pisces person can show you the way. Be receptive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Well-rounded view is a necessity. Taking bits and pieces would be an error. Key is to realize potentials. Avoid petty actions in business, personal life. Goal is nearer than you think.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect now coincides with journeys, higher education, ability to improve personal communications. Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. See beyond the immediate. Dig beneath surface indications.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money connected with investment, promissory note is highlighted. Mate, business partner play prominent role. Key is personal investigation. Don't take anyone's word; find out for yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low; play waiting game. Be wary of public relations. Be sure you are being quoted correctly. Share knowledge; learn by teaching. Accent on marriage, partnerships, long-term relationships.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, a nature-lover or one who respects the rights of living things to survive and thrive. You are basically gentle, but capable of fighting for a cause. You are fascinated with science and law. Many, when in trouble, seek your counsel.

He was a member of the Caterpillar Club and was a well-known businessman operating as "Joe the Bartender".

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by McCall Bros. Funeral Directors Ltd. (Flowers gratefully declined. Those so desiring may contribute to the charity of their choice.)

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our grateful appreciation to our many friends, relatives and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy extended us at the loss of our beloved son and brother — Warren William Mactier. Special thanks to Mrs. Smith of St. Joseph's Hospital, the RCMP Colwood and Shawnigan Lake detachments and the loggers at the scene of the accident. Also we wish to thank Rev. A. Calder and Sands Mortuary. — Mr. and Mrs. Allon W. Mactier and Family.

Mr. Thomas F. Alexander and family wishes to thank their many friends and neighbours for the kindness and cards of sympathy extended us in the loss of our beloved wife, mother and grandmother. Special thanks to the Nurses and Doctors at the Jubilee Hospital.

The Ellis Family wish to thank all the neighbours and friends that were so kind over the years to our dear departed Mother. Our thanks as well to the Nursing Staff and Doctors at St. Joseph's Hospital— Rev. David Stiven and Sands Funeral Chapel.

The family of Nicholas Cockburn wish to thank the many friends for flowers, cards, phone calls, and letters of condolence during their recent bereavement; especially members of the F.O.E. Also thanks to those who donated to the Heart Fund in lieu of flowers.

We wish to express our thanks to all those who by acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, calls and donations to the Cancer Society expressed their sympathy for the loss of a beloved wife and mother. — N. G. Adlington and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BARRETT—In loving memory of Bonnie Louise, who passed away Oct. 15, 1960.

We miss her because we loved her,
More precious than wealth
untold,
No treasure on earth can replace her,
Her memory will never grow old.
Always smiling and content
Loved and respected wherever she went,
To a beautiful life came a sudden end,
She died as she lived—
everyone's friend.
—Remembered, and loved forever, Mom, Dad and sister Sharon.

BARRETT—In loving memory of Bonnie Louise, who passed away Oct. 15, 1960.

Sweet are the memories,
Silently kept
Of one we loved and will never forget,
No length of time can take away
Our thoughts of you
from day to day.
—Lovingly remembered by Granny and Grampa Heaslip.

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

Recently I read a very good idea proposed by a wise man. He said that the stability and happiness of a marriage can depend much on how the wife behaves during eight minutes out of the day: the first four minutes in the morning when the husband wakes up, and the first four minutes when he comes home from work in the evening.

Often a wife, on waking in the morning, is irritable and much annoys her husband, perhaps criticizing him for a number of his "sins". Everyone knows the kind of wife who keeps telling her able and successful husband how not to run his business, perhaps quite oblivious of the fact that long before she tried to take over control, he had somehow or other managed to succeed very well.

One of the commonest sins of wives is nagging. A woman may think she is making a "better man" out of her husband, but along the way she is losing his love. The day may come when he may not even like her. He may especially resent being attacked virtually the moment he opens his eyes in the morning, and the wife is wise who makes the first few moments of the day pleasant ones.

The other important four minutes come when the man returns from his work and the foolish wife immediately starts telling him of her annoyance with her grocer or her maid or one of the children. The man does not want to hear all this on reaching home; he greatly craves peace.

I remember a fine physician whose wife so fussed at him for "overworking" and "killing himself" and "neglecting her" that he quit coming home for supper and began to see patients in the evenings. If ever a woman acted so as to bring about just the reverse of what she said she had wanted, this wife did.

Much to her detriment, she made home an unpleasant place. She would have been so much wiser if she had known what Mary Pickford once said, that "a wife should be a nice person to come home to." This sums up most of the problem of keeping happiness in marriage. If home is not a comfortable, peaceful and quiet place, the husband will tend to take refuge more and more in the very work that his wife says she wants to save him from.

Many an unhappy man is constantly being fussed at by his wife for "working too hard". She says she is afraid he will kill himself off and leave her a widow, and incidentally, she wants him to spend more time at home — amusing her. I often tease a woman who keeps nagging at her husband to come home early to talk to her or to take her out. I tell her she acts as if she were under the impression that in the marriage ceremony her husband had promised that besides cherishing her and endowing her with his worldly goods, he would amuse her.

I greatly sympathize with the wife of a very busy husband, who very much would like to spend more time with him. But as a marriage counsellor once pointed out, "The wife usually gets more time only as she earns it by being more affectionate, more approving, and in every way a more congenial and beloved and desired companion." And — I might add — remembering those important four minute periods of the day.

TRUE
or FALSE???

TRUE

That's why we can't offer any fancy sales gimmicks to move our merchandise. We do offer, however, high quality trailers, reasonably priced, and every sale is backed up by our expert friendly service.

STILL AVAILABLE

Powerful Bomb Rips Iranian Consulate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An explosion shattered the interior of the Iranian consulate late Thursday night, sending gas-fed fires through the building, and police said today they believed it was caused by a powerful bomb.

Fire officials said there were no injuries.

They said four young persons fled the consulate in night clothes after the blast.

Fire Chief Keith Calden said every window in the three-storey wood frame building was shattered, furniture and other contents were hurled about and walls and floors were tilted out of position.

Fires were touched off when the blast ruptured gas meters and the flames shot up dumbwaiters.

The force of the blast knocked out windows in homes two blocks away.

Investigators probing the devastated building, police Inspector Theodore Peck said, "are pretty well certain it was a bomb."

The blast apparently occurred in the basement, the chief said.

Calden estimated structural damage at $100,000.

In the past, the consulate has been picketed by dissidents protesting policies of the Shah of Iran.

Fired Man Arrested In Shooting

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Gagnon, 42, city manager of the western suburb of Verdun, was reported in satisfactory condition today after undergoing surgery for three gunshot wounds.

Police say Mr. Gagnon was getting into his car at his house early Thursday morning, when he was wounded by an assailant.

Police said later they arrested Guy Rejean de L'Etoile, 38, of nearby Lafleche, who was charged in connection with the shooting. They said Mr. L'Etoile had worked for the Verdun fire department but was dismissed two years ago.

Police chief Roger Dulude said Mr. Gagnon was shot twice in the abdomen and once in the shoulder.

The daylight shooting came exactly a week after three Du Pont of Canada Ltd., executives were fatally shot in their downtown Dorchester Boulevard offices in Montreal by a man who sought re-employment in the company.

Vincent Meloche, 27, has been charged with three counts of murder in the Du Pont shootings.

Recycling Profits Donated

OTTAWA (UPI) — Members of pollution probe have presented Jack Davis minister of the environment, with a deed for $1,000 — money made from the recycling of waste materials.

The group drove up to Parliament Hill with a large tractor trailer van, and five smaller vans filled with more than 13½ tons of discarded pop cans, glass, aluminum, human waste, newspapers, cardboard and other waste materials.

Monte Hummel, a spokesman for the group, told Davis, "we are presenting these resources and the revenue gained from their sale on to the receiver general of Canada as a first step towards supporting a national policy on recycling.

Rogers Eyes New Soviet Aid to Egypt

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — State Secretary William Rogers says the United States will have to reconsider its military commitments to Israel because of the Soviet promise of more military aid to Egypt.

Rogers conferred Thursday with Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban, who said afterward he put "great emphasis" on Israel's request for more U.S. planes.

Warplane shipments are reported to have halted last July at the expiration of the contract. The Israelis especially want more Phantom jets.

The Soviet pledge was issued Wednesday night after President Anwar Sadat of Egypt ended two days of meetings with Soviet leaders in Moscow. A Soviet-Egyptian communique said the two sides agreed "on measures aimed at further strengthening the military might of Egypt."

"In view of that," Rogers said, "we will have to carefully consider our position, particularly in the light of President Nixon's commitment when he said that the military balance in the Middle East will not change."

Rescuer Commended

A letter of commendation will be sent by Saanich police to Peter Jackson, 27, whose fast action is credited with saving the life of a well-digger Wednesday.

Richard Henderson, 27, of 3019 Pickford, was working about 25 feet down a well at 1558 Charlton when he was overcome by fumes from his gasoline-powered drilling equipment.

Jackson climbed down into the well and applied artificial respiration. Passersby lowered a rope and hoisted Henderson to safety before Jackson himself climbed out.

Oak Bay May Share Costs Too

Oak Bay may soon become the second Greater Victoria municipality to share maintenance costs of school grounds with the Greater Victoria school board in return for community use of the playing fields.

The council's parks and recreation committee agreed Thursday to recommend the cost-sharing program be accepted on a two-year trial basis. At the end of the two years there would be a review to assess cost and success of the program.

Esquimalt adopted a similar cost-sharing program May 15.

$4,500 EACH

Municipal engineer Geoffrey White told the committee that it would cost the municipality and the school board $4,500 each to maintain grounds at Uplands, Monterey, Willows, Oak Bay junior and Oak Bay senior high schools.

The school board would be responsible for watering the Oak Bay junior and senior high school grounds and Oak Bay would undertake the others.

White said that an additional tractor and mower would be needed and $8,000 would have to be spent on extra watering equipment. The $8,000, he said, could be taken from the equipment replacement fund.

Originally, Oak Bay had tried to negotiate an agreement with the school board based on cost-sharing for the Uplands school grounds only. The board had not been willing to negotiate on the basis of utilizing the grounds of only one school in the area.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Ald. John Goult noted Thursday that the new watering equipment could be used in other parts of the municipality and suggested the municipality should investigate the possibility of installing lighting on the fields at some time in the future.

In considering possible ways in which the municipality could participate in the provincial government's Job Opportunities Program, White suggested to the works committee that jobs might be provided by replacing cement sidewalks and the installation of sewer pipes.

Theatre Full For Poetry Reading

An enthusiastic audience of about 200 turned out Thursday afternoon at the University of Victoria to hear poet Basil Bunting read from his work.

The audience, made up of students, faculty and general public, jammed into a small lecture theatre for the reading, completely filling the aisles, with more standing in the back of the room.

Bunting read his most famous poem — Briggflatts — as well as several shorter ones. The response at the end of the reading was warm.

Pausing at intervals to drink from a bottle of wine, he spoke of sheepdog-trainers, of mortal Norwegian kings, of order in the seasons and elements.

On Oct. 28, Uvic poet Robin Skelton will read from his work. Other readings are scheduled later.

Nuclear Power for B. C. . . . Someday

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia must opt for nuclear power generation in the next few decades to meet the mounting need for electricity, Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, said Thursday.

In an H. R. MacMillan lecture he said the threat to the environment comes not from the use of electricity but from the method of producing the electric current.

With most of the world's hydro sites already developed and with the pollution and depletion problems caused by the use of fossil fuels, this leaves only nuclear power for the future.

Despite opposition by Premier Bennett and other provincial cabinet ministers to use of nuclear power generation, Dr. Shrum said it is the most pollution-free method known today.

"What is badly needed is an education program to help overcome the handicap created by the fact that nuclear energy was first used for an atom bomb.

"It is very important that misconceptions and misrepresenations about nuclear power should not turn environmentalists and conservationists against the one power source that is most in harmony with the environment and is the most beneficial to our society."

PAPER SAYS LIN DIED IN CRASH

HONG KONG (UPI) — A Hong Kong newspaper reported today Communist Chinese vice-chairman Lin Piao died in a plane crash in Mongolia last month when he was escaping from Peking after an abortive coup d'etat. (See also Page 39.)

The right-wing Daily Express, quoting what it described as "people with connections in China," said Lin, the designated successor of chairman Mao Tse-tung, "attempted to stage a coup to overthrow Mao during the National Day parade on Oct. 1."

"But the information leaked out and reached Mao," the Chinese-language newspaper said, "so the Chinese leader ordered cancellation of the National Day parade."

"Lin knew that his plan had fallen flat. Accompanied by (Air Force Commander) Wu Fa-hsien, he boarded a transport plane at the Peking military airport (Sept. 12), aiming to escape to the northeast to join his old army there and to stage a comeback in the near future," the Daily Express said.

"His plane crashed during an emergency landing in Mongolia because of a shortage of fuel," it said. The crash was reported to be north of Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia.

"But it could not be confirmed whether Liu was on the same plane too."

Province Asked to Join Inner Harbor Study

Victoria city council Thursday decided to set up a special joint committee with the provincial government to study the whole question of Inner Harbor development.

At the same time council took the first step in the lengthy process of considering the latest proposal for the Reid Centre development, by referring detailed plans, working drawings and specifications to its B committee.

LITTLE TIME

Committee chairman Ald. Harold Olafson said the package of detailed proposals had arrived at city hall only on Wednesday, and he had seen them just half an hour before the meeting.

"I don't think we can deal with it at any length today," he said.

The move to study Inner Harbor development on a joint provincial-municipal bais follows recent criticusm by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell that "internal politics" have stalemated progress on the Reid development.

Campbell said the Capital Improvement District Commission is willing to cooperate with Victoria on planning development of the city's waterfront.

APPROPRIATE

In a motion recommending establishment of the joint committee, Mayor Courtney Haddock noted this provincial interest in the Inner Harbor and added: "While I have strong convictions as to the part to be played by private development, I must agree that with the acquisition of the Ocean Cement site and the completion of the Downtown Plan in the near future, the time is most appropriate for a detailed review of land uses along the waterfront."

The city is to make its technical and staff resources available to the joint committee when it is established.

The meeting also approved the formal signing and completion of agreements with the federal and provincial governments for purchasing, relocating and demolishing the Ocean Cement complex.

City manager Bill Hooson gave council this breakdown of the total $1,130,000 cost of the project: acquistion and removal of Ocean Cement, $970,000 site clearance, $80,000 works and services, $31,500; administration and legal expenses, $48,500.

$1M NET COST

Hooson said after the site has been acquired the partnership will dispose of the land by selling it to the city for $130,000, so the net cost of the project would amount to $1,000,000.

He said the city's gross cost, made up of its 25 per cent share of the project plus the cost of buying the land from the partnership, would amount to $412,500.

But Victoria would recover the funds allocated for site clearance, works and services, as well as a quarter of the sum from the sale of the land, making the net cost to the city abut $342,625.

"For this sum the city will gain title to a cleared but unimproved site comprised of 3.7 acres in uplands area and water lot," Hooson reported.

Key Information Not Available

Some of the key information Greater Victoria Water Board is seeking from the three northern municipalities as guidelines for its long-term capital expansion program wasn't available for its meeting today.

And at least part of the reason seemed to be tardy postal services.

The board had invited representatives of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney to attend the meeting and bring along the answers to two basic questions:

- What their future water requirements will be.
- When the water will be needed.

All three did send representatives. But the Central Saanich delegate, Ald. Ken Stanley, said because the invitation letter dated Oct. 6 had been received Oct. 12, just two days before the meeting, there had been no time for the council to prepare its case.

WHOLE KEY

Ald. Tom Christie remarked, after hearing the representatives of North Saanich and Sidney, that Central Saanich seems to be "the key to the whole thing" as it supplies water to both those areas.

M. H. Britten, Sidney water district trustee, said Sidney's present consumption of about 100 million gallons a year is mostly supplied from its own wells, but during the summer it is necessary to supplement this by drawing about a million gallons a month from Central Saanich.

If the area's population continued to expand at its present rate the consumption could rise to between 170 and 200 million gallons a year in the next few years, he said.

"Although we are drilling more and deeper wells, these will take care of only about three-quarters of that figure. So we are still going to be dependent on Central Saanich for the next five or six years to supplement our supply during the summer months."

B. W. W. Clowes, chairman of the Deep Cove water district, said the district gets all its water from Central Saanich, and is now taking the full quota set some years ago.

Water Commissioner Ron Upward told the board he was given to understand last year by Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith the municipality was not interested in hooking up to the Greater Victoria supply "for at least 10 years."

FINE FOR THEM

On this Clowes commented: "That's fine for them, but in that case maybe they can spare more water for us."

Upward told the representatives Greater Victoria now has "all the water we want for a population up to 350,000," but the real problem is how to meet the crippling cost of extending the supply up the peninsula.

He said the first phase of building the pipeline from Goldstream lakes to Portage Inlet will cost about $6 million, spread over four years at about $1.5 million a year.

After that, Upward said, there will have to come the four-mile extension from Portage Inlet to Elk Lake, followed by another 14 miles to Sidney. "We are talking about something like $14 million for that 14 miles."

It was finally agreed that another meeting with the municipalities should be arranged early in the new year, with full briefs of their requirements to be submitted at that time.

Accused Awaits Telex Message

A 21-year-old man, arrested Tuesday on a Telex message to Victoria from Edmonton city police was remanded in custody for six days Thursday to await the warrant the Telex message said is coming.

If there is no warrant after six days, Judge William Ostler said, then Ronald Brian Cunningham, 139 Menzies, will be released.

MORNING

Prosecutor John Macintyre explained that the warrant hadn't arrived from Edmonton when Cunningham appeared in court Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning.

The Telex message said there was an outstanding warrant for Cunningham in connection with an armed robbery in St. Albert, Alta., April 15, 1970. The warrant was to follow, the message said.

Defence councel Harold Turnham said Thursday there had been ample time for a warrant to come from Alberta. He said it could have arrived that day by plane.

"I don't think it is fair to the accused," he said of Cunningham being held in jail.

Cunningham's predicament, however, may become more confused and Ostler noted this Thursday.

INTENDED

The judge said he didn't know what the Crown intended to do if the warrant arrived because Cunningham also faces charges in Victoria.

Cunningham appeared Tuesday and was charged with possession of heroin, marijuana and LSD. Bail was set at $2,000.

Ostler ruled Wednesday that the Telex arrest was lawful and a proper procedure in B.C.

He said he was satisfied Cunningham was picked up by police when they learned he was wanted in another province and on the understanding a warrant was coming as fast as possible.

Cunningham said Wednesday he had served five months for armed robbery in the same Alberta area about three years ago.

Economics Nobel Prize To American

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — The Nobel Prize for economics was awarded to American Professor Simon Kuznets of Harvard University.

The award, worth $86,400, was inaugurated in 1969 by the Swedish Central Bank to mark its 300th anniversary.

The bank said it had chosen Kuznets for his interpretarion of economic world growth. The 70-year-old Russian-born scientist, "more than any other scientist," has illuminated with facts — and explained through analysis — the economic growth from the middle of last century, the bank said.

Scientist Fined

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Charles Farmilo, a former Le Dain commission research scientist who pleaded guilty Thursday to possession of hashish, was fined $100 today in provincial court.

HOME GARDEN

'Late' Beauties Everywhere

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

Have you noticed how many late fall flowers are pink? You will, if your garden is planned to bloom in October and November. Amongst the beauty of berrying shrubs and colorful foliage you will have the luscious pink of the hardy amaryllis trumpets (A. belladonna); the more slender and dainty but equally pink of Guernsey-lilies (Nerine bowdenii), and the so-easily-grown Kafir-lily (Schizostylis coccinia) in the variety "Mrs. Hegarty."

All these come into bloom during the last days of September, continue throughout October, finally tapering off in November.

Much depends on the soil and location of the garden. Reports are common locally of the pink Kafir-lilies blooming all winter in warmly located gardens a block or so from salt water. The succession of spikes from established plants is astonishing.

Of taller growth and entirely different in every way to the foregoing plants are Japanese-anemones. These are varieties f Anemone hupehensis; they should be known as Chinese-anemones since they originally came from near Shanghai and another form from Hupeh.

These are lovely shades of soft pink; white forms are also known and are about two feet high. The variety sold as A. japonica goes up to five and six feet in good soil.

Pink shades are common among late Michaelmas-daisies (perennial fall asters) and cushion types of chrysanthemums. The latter particularly will give weeks of glowing color.

For two-inch-high miniatures of pink beauty nothing surpasses hardy cyclamens. The fall-flowering species C. neapolitanum blooms freely for weeks, added interest during the period being unfolding new leaves with exquisite silver and dark green patterning.

The most satisfactory way to get an established planting of hardy cyclamens is to buy the corms already growing and flowering in small pots. Plant them out of the pots where you want them to grow.

Recently seen for sale were three variations of C. neapolitanum all in bloom: pure white, a rich pink with crimson base, and a white with crimson base.

When you realize we've only considered the pink flowers of fall and not the blues, gold and reds, you readily believe that no garden in this area need be drab just because summer is over.

Small patches of these late beauties, planted where they cannot fail to cause interest, will dispell that old feeling of "the garden is over now."

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

In today's deal, our South declarer committed an error of omission which resulted in the loss of a game contract that an expert would have fulfilled. Can you find South's mistake?

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♢	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Upon winning West's opening club lead with his ace, East returned the club seven. Declarer, hoping that East possessed the club queen, played low, West taking the trick with his queen. A third club lead was captured by South's king.

The eight of spades was then led to dummy's ten, after which South finessed his queen of diamonds successfully. The board was now re-entered by leading the spade king to the ace. Another diamond finesse then made a winner out of South's jack.

Being unable to reach dummy again, declarer then cased the diamond ace, shoping to fell East's king. As can be observed, the king failed to drop. When play had ended, all declarer had made were eight tricks: three spades, one heart, three diamonds and one club. What was declarer's error?

From the very beginning, it was apparent to declarer that he would probably need four diamond tricks to fulfil his contract. For these to be made, he had to indulge in the wishful thinking that East possessed the diamond king. In addition, if East had the diamond king thrice guarded three entries to dummy would be necessary to take three finesses. On the face of it, there were just two entries to dummy, in spades.

A third entry could have been created at trick one. This could have been accomplished by playing the king of clubs on East's ace! Assuming that East then returned a club, South would follow suit with a low club, West's queen winning (creating a club trick in dummy). If East played back the heart 10 instead, declarer would still make his contract by covering with the jack and then taking the second heart trick, and leading a club.

By "unblocking" with the club king at trick one, South would now have his three entries to dummy, one in clubs and two in spades. He would then be able to take three diamond finesses, and bring home four diamond tricks.

Drug Report 'Hides Facts'

MONTREAL (CP)—A committee of prominent doctors objected Thursday to any legalization of marijuana and criticized the Le Dain commission for publishing a "highly permissive, fact-hiding and vacillating" interim report last year.

In a statement to a news conference, the committee of 10 doctors from six provinces also described as inexcusable a claim by the federal government's commission on youth that "soft drugs are relatively harmless, or at least, so they seem in the absence of any conclusive medical evidence to the contrary."

The Le Dain report had recommended that marijuana and hashish should be under the control of the food and drug directorate and that possession should not be a criminal offence. The youth commission report, presented to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier in July, was in favor of legalizing marijuana.

Dr. Frank A. Dunsworth, a Halifax psychiatrist, read the statement and said the group had been formed because of what the doctors saw as a lack of reaction from professional groups to drug abuse in Canada.

At the news conference with Dr. Dunsworth, a past president of the Canadian Psychiatric Association, were Dr. Fred Lundell, associate professor psychiatry at McGill University, Dr. Robert Duguay, associate professor of clinical psychiatry at University of Montreal, and Dr. Charles Brown, a Charlottetown, P.E.I., pediatrician.

Dr. Lundell, a practising psychiatrist, said he had seen enough evidence of adverse reactions to marijuana, hashish and mescaline in his patients to warrant a growing concern.

The committee said their most "immediate and grave" concern was the possibility that the final report of the Le Dain Commission, expected in December, will be similar to the interim report.

Used as an example of irresponsibility was the publishing of 25 unsigned latters, "unqualified, and completely unscientific, 22 of which extol the so-called 'delights' of using marijuana."

The committee said that the evidence of the harmful effects of marijuana was buried among hundreds of pages so that "no clear warning could be derived by an uncritical reader."

Treasure Found

HUGH TOWN, Scilly Isles (Reuter) — London lawyer Rex Cowan said Thursday he has located one of the richest treasure ship wrecks yet found around the British isles. The ship is the Hollandia, a Dutch East Indian vessel which sank off the Scillies off the southwest extremity of England in 1743 carrying gold and silver bullion said to be worth $4.8 million.

Speaker At Service

Rev. Bernice Gerard of Vancouver, pastor of Fraserview Assembly in Vancouver, will be the guest speaker at two services marking the 59th anniversary of Fairfield United Church on Sunday, Oct. 24.

The services will begin at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Gerard is well known in Victoria through her open line radio programs which are broadcast Sunday mornings and evenings.

She is also chaplain to the University of British Columbia and Simon Fraser University.

Sister Doreen Trautman will be the featured singer at the evening service which will begin with a gospel song program. Principal of Our Lady of Immaculate Conception in Vancouver, she is know for her unconventional singing of traditional Catholic songs.

MODERATOR

Rev. Gilbert Smith, moderator of the Victoria Presbytery of the Presbyterian church, and Clifford Horwood, chairman of the United Church Presbytery, will assist at the evening service. Singing at both services will be Mrs. Marilyn Fraser.

The church was started in 1912, services being held in a tent on the lawn of the home of Rev. D.W. Canton, the first minister. A church was built later that year, being a long wooden hall at the corner of Moss and Fairfield.

A larger one was constructed later and is now used as a gymnasium.

The present church was built in 1926, opened on Oct. 13 with Premier John Oliver acting as chairman for the evening meeting.

181,821 Abortions in Year

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A total of 181,821 women—most of them white, under the age of 25 and residents of another state or country—obtained abortions in New York state during the first year of liberalized abortion law.

Canadians who had abortions in the state totalled 1,649.

Three out of four of these abortions were performed during the woman's first three months of pregnancy.

And, it would appear, more unmarried than married women had abortions, although complete data could not be provided.

The state health department reported Thursday its "tentative conclusions' about induced abortions betwen July 1, 1970, and June 30, 1971, the first 12 months the state law was in effect.

FOR ANY REASON

The statute was passed by the 1970 legislature and permits an abortion for any reason during the first 24 weeks of pregnancy, provided it is performed by a physician and with the consent of the woman who seeks it.

Of the 181,821 abortions reported to the department, 98,084 were performed on women who live outside the state—about 54 per cent of the total.

Department figures show that 48.3 per cent of the total nonresident abortions were performed on women from Canada and the five states that border New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Vermont, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Three of every four abortion patients were white.

Government Employees Ready For Strike Vote Over UIC

Delegates to the B.C. Government Employees Union convention decided Thursday they are willing to go as far as a strike vote if necessary to ensure unemployment insurance coverage after the end of this year.

Union general secretary John Fryer indicated later that the machinery to send out ballots will be set in motion next week.

Under the existing federal legislation, the B.C. government has included 6,000 civil servants — most of them part-time or temporary employees — under unemployment insurance.

The remaining 14,000 to 16,000 employees are not covered.

Under the new legislation, provinces must include all or none of their employees. The B.C. government has made no decision and the deadline is the end of the year.

Key part of the resolution approved by delegates, extracted from a resolution by the marine branch (unlicensed), states that "in the event the B.C. government opts out of the federal unemployment insurance coverage scheme, then a strike vote be immediately taken as a means to rectify the situation."

This was added to an executive resolution which said:

- The convention re-affirm past policy advocating the principle of universal unemployment insurance coverage.
- The union continue its program designed to ensure no government employee loses unemployment insurance protection as a result of new federal legislation.
- Details of a brief presented to the cabinet earlier this year be given to all members of the legislature asking them to take action.

Some 152 voting delegates are attending the 16,000-member union's convention in the Empress Hotel.

Ferry worker George Hornett said every provincial government employee should be covered under the new legislation becuse all are subject to dismissal or layoff.

Lack of unemployment insurance in the face of layoffs was the cause of the ferry strike several years ago, he said.

Earlier in the day, delegates defeated a resolution to have the convention grant permission for the corrections branch to prepare a draft contract "to emphasize the relationship between salaries and working conditions, as a total package."

During debate, Fryer said the corrections branch and the union are not ready for an all-out fight with the government over this issue. The union does not have collective bargaining rights.

"When we take the government on in a bargaining rights fight, it's when the union decides it's ready to go," he said.

Fryer expressed a fear that allowing the corrections branch to go ahead and meet government resistance would back the union into a confrontation on grounds it hasn't chosen.

In an interview later, he said "we'll pick the time and place and grounds for a confrontation. We don't want to slip into it or fall into it."

As delegates considered a possible strike vote over unemployment insurance, Bernard Shaw of the corrections branch asked if Fryer could "give the same inspiring speech" as he did over the jails.

Another delegate said that while it had been decided the union was not ready for a "knock down fight" on one hand, it now was placing itself in this position on the other hand.

Fryer replied in an interview that the two positions do not conflict.

BALLOT SPECIFIC

A strike ballot over unemployment insurance was a specific, easy-to-understand issue while bargaining rights was a complex issue.

"The delegates are picking the grounds on this one," he said.

Asked if the union is ready for a confrontation with the government over one issue but not the other, he said "we won't know until the members vote."

If the unemployment insurance issue is not resolved, and if government employees voted to strike, a walkout would be illegal under the Mediation Commission Act.

One section of the act states: "Every person employed by the crown in the right of the province who takes part in a strike, and every person who declares or purports to authorize a strike by persons so emplyed, is guilty of an offence against this act."

The penalty, stated in another section, upon summary conviction, is a fine not exceeding $1,000 for an individual and a fine not exceeding $10,000 for a union, and a fine not exceeding $150 a day for each day the offence continues.

Before the Judge

Frederick Miller helped some friends load three chairs into a truck Thursday. The removal cost him a day in jail and a $200 fine.

Judge William Ostler told the accused, Miller, 18, of 501 Dupplin, the action nearly cost him a longer jail sentence because of his criminal record.

Miller pleaded guilty to three counts of possession of stolen property. The chairs, court was told, had been taken from the lobbies of two apartment buildings on Elford Street.

Ostler imposed the nominal one-day sentence with the fine after prosecutor John Mcintyre said leniency would be beneficial.

Macintyre said the accused had convictions for breaking, entering and theft and theft under $50 in 1969 and for causing a disturbance in 1970.

He added, however, that Miller now had a wife and a child and a job and was making a real attempt to become a useful member of society.

The prosecutor said evidence showed that Miller was not the ringleader in the offence.

A policeman testified that the accused arrived in a truck with two others about 5:30 a.m. Thursday at 1450 Elford.

He handed the chairs to the other persons, the officer said, taking them from where they were hidden in a hedge.

The chairs had been reported stolen earlier from the apartments.

Efficiency Can Cut Housing Costs

Efficiency can cut the cost of factory-built housing up to 20 per cent and make mobile homes competitive with site-built houses, a group of Canadian dealers was told this week.

At the same time, manufacturers can increase their profit potential, environmental design specialist Bob Vahsholtz said at the annual show in Winnipeg of Northwest Design and Fabrication Ltd.

The company, since entering mobile home manufacturing in 1967, has opened plants in Winnipeg and Ft. McLeod.

Vahsholtz, of Slayter Associates Inc., of Elkhart, Ind., said mobile homes in Canada at present cost two per cent per month less than conventional housing.

With factory economies as researched by Slayter Associates, the cost of mobile homes in Canada may be slashed to 86 per cent of the cost of conventional housing, he said.

In the U.S. it has been found that mobile homes can be marketed for 80 per cent of conventional cost.

START TO BOOM

"Mobile home sales started to boom in the U.S. when net monthly cost reached about 86 per cent. At this level the value of a mobile home reaches a point where it competes successfully with conventional housing," Vahsholtz said.

In the 1960s, when conventional housing costs began accelerating, it was found the square foot cost of mobile homes remained static.

But in the next 10 years, Vahsholtz predicts, the cost advantage to mobile home builders will go up slower and then decrease compared with the costs of other forms of manufactured housing.

Mobile homes cost more in Canada because of higher building standards, higher cost of raw materials and a lack of volume and experience, Vahsholtz said.

Brezhnev—Emerging as Top Kremlin Leader

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Leonid Brezhnev has not only enhanced his personal position in the Kremlin leadership—he is also emerging as a somewhat more colorful individualized personality.

The 65-year-old Communist party chief surprised West German journalists last month. While waiting at the airport for West German Chancellor Willy Brandt to arrive for talks in the Crimea, Brezhnev went up to the reporters and talked with them.

It was a big departure from the usual practice of the current Soviet leadership, which overthrew the late Nikita Khrushchev seven years ago. Khrushchev, a loquacious man ever-ready with a salty comment, was a reporter's dream. But his successors have been far less accessible.

As sometimes happens when a usually remote, highly-placed man makes himself unexpectedly available, the German journalists were so taken aback that they stood around sheepishly at first until one asked a question.

IT'S SURPRISE

What Brezhnev had to say was not the sort of stuff that makes headlines. He asked the Germans to write well about the meeting so as not to spoil German-Soviet relations which, he said, had been so bad before.

But what was interesting was that the burly general-secretary of the party was prepared to talk to the press at all.

One thing is certain about Brezhnev; he has emerged over the last year as the dominant personality on the foreign policy front, a sphere that was once Kosygin's domain.

At the Soviet party congress last March Brezhnev put forward an elaborate "peace program." He followed this with successive proposals for troop reductions and U.S.-Soviet naval agreements. All of this kept the name Brezhnev in world headlines in connection with the word "peace."

In addition, he has also flowered into a statesman meeting the world's other statesmen.

Four years ago it was Kosygin who undertook the first visit by one of the current leaders to London. Now it is Brezhnev who is making the first trip to Paris.

Not that Kosygin is out of it. He recently has visited several countries and will visit others soon as part of an itinerary which will have taken him to Canada, Algeria, Morocco, Denmark and Norway.

Amid all the guesswork there is room for belief that Kosygin is withdrawing from the foreign policy scene not simply because of loss of prestige but because, expert economic administrator that he is known to be, he is needed more on the domestic front.

The Laughs Were for the Wrong Play

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Times Staff

It was said of the poet Robert Browning that on being asked to explain the meaning of one of his more intricate pieces, he studied it for a time and then remarked: "When I wrote that, God and Browning understood it. Now only God does."

Lawrence Osgood, who is the author of Pigeons, one of two plays on view at the University of Victoria theatre department's Phoenix Theatre, is likely to find himself in the same predicament — if he hasn't done so already.

Of course one could presume that the author intended Pigeons to be nothing more than a dramatic pastime, an exercise, a slightly grotesque theatre game.

3 WOMEN

Three women meet in a junk yard; one tries to dominate the others by the power of suggestion. Each resists in her own way, but defeat finally comes.

Third-year student director Randy Cheveldave has grasped the material with firm hands, working with careful attention to the rules of emphasis and definition.

One gets the impression that he has taken great pains to obtain clarity, both in speech and action.

He succeeds, in fact, too well. There is rigidity in the persistently triangular blocking patterns, in business that is too studied and stilted movement.

DISTINCT PROMISE

But he and his cast of three — Mara Loeb (notable for her strength and control), Marie Stillin and Christine Puhl, show distinct promise, even if they didn't quite succeed in bringing this one off.

On reflection, one would be less concerned with meaning if the touch on the reins were lighter, and the comedy more fully developed.

It was not, in other words, nearly as funny as it should have been.

In the second offering the reverse error has been made.

It is, in fact, quite incredible that anyone could turn Jean-Paul Sartre's chilling, stark and compelling drama, No Exit, into broad comedy.

TOTALLY LOST

Whatever his intention may have been, that is how graduate student Julian Forrester's production evolves.

The play's bitter commentary on human need for acceptance, understanding, solitude — the desire to see one's reflection as one wishes it in the minds of others — is totally lost.

A lesbian, a child-murderess and a coward-weakling are condemned to spend eternity in a room without exit, forever lit.

For the audience the chill should come gradually, the terror built until the spine is stiff, the mind dark with it.

But nothing of the sort happens on the Phoenix stage.

RATHER SLEAZY

Instead we find ourselves watching a sort of situation comedy of a rather sleazy kind.

The cast, consisting of Forrester, Blake Carter, Mary Anne MacNeill and Maria Wozniak, surely capable of doing much better with this arresting play, were the victims of a woeful misinterpretation on the part of the director.

Sets by Robert Cothran and lighting by Robert Field were a notable asset to each production.

The program will be repeated tonight and Saturday, beginning at 8.

REMSENBURG, N.Y. — Far from "slowing down" as might be expected of one of his age, author P. G. Wodehouse celebrates his 90th birthday today busily engaged writing a new novel, devouring detective stories and indulging in a passion for television. The new novel, like many of his 70-odd books, is set in a vaguely Edwardian era — a period on which Wodehouse almost holds a literary patent.

PARIS — Yet another "inside story" on the assassination of John Kennedy. Mikhail Sagatelian, a Washington correspondent of Tass, says seven persons were immediately involved in the assassination and that former president Lyndon Johnson knows who they are. Sagatelian didn't disclose his source of information.

GRAPEVINE, Tex. — Ted Walters, who started life as a chicken thief and later moved on to big-time crime associated with Bonnie and Clyde, Thursday met his death at the hands of the same Texas Rangers who killed the legendary Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow. Walters, who was once declared Public Enemy No. 2, died trying to bargain his way out of a police trap using three hostages. He was shot by a Texas Ranger.

MARMANDE, France. — Years of argument over a plot of land has ended in death for two farmers in an apparent duel. Raymond Combion, 50, and Felix Choury, 45, were found lying in the middle of a road. They were both dead and had rifles beside them. The two men lived side-by-side in houses on the same street.

BUENOS AIRES — Grandmasters Bobby Fischer and Tigran Petrosian agreed to a draw Thursday night in the fifth match of their 12-game series. Each man now has 2½ points.

HALIFAX — Yugoslav President Tito will receive an honorary degree from Dalhousie University here next month as part of his Canadian visit. The rest of Tito's itinerary has not been announced.

WINNIPEG — Complaints from citizens have lowered police guns here. Up until now, shotguns have been prominently displayed between the driver and passenger seats in police cruisers. From now on the guns will be locked on clips below the front seat. "We don't want to develop the idea that a cruiser car is an armed tank," said acting police chief John Webster.

No Surprises By N.B. Grits

FREDERICTON (CP) — There were no surprise entries or withdrawls when nominations closed officially today for the New Brunswick Liberal leadership convention.

Nomination papers were filed before the deadline by all five candidates: Robert J. Higgins, 37, a lawyer and former economic growth and municipal affairs minister; Norbert Theriault, 50, a former health and welfare minister; John Bryden, 34, a former deputy justice minister; H. H. Williamson, 55, a former labor and economic growth minister, and Maurice Harquail, 32, deputy mayor of Campbellton.

A record 1,761 delegates are eligible to vote Saturday on a successor to former premier Louis J. Robichaud.

'FROZEN' TULIPS BLOOM IN FALL

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan State University researchers have reported what could be a tulip breakthrough — frozen spring bulbs that bloom in fall.

"Eskimo" tulips bloomed in early October at the university after being frozen since January.

"We just postponed spring until fall had arrived," said Dr. August De Hertogh, horticultural researcher in charge of an eight-year Dutch bulb project.

Zoning Plea

Victoria city council decided Thursday that in future it will not reconsider zoning applications previously refused by council following a public hearing until at least 12 months has elapsed from the date of the original refusal.

The only exception to the rule set by council, in approving a motion by Ald. Ove Witt, is where a unanimous vote to reconsider an application is carried by all council members present.

White Ignorance to Blame—Study

EDMONTON (CP) — A history of white ignorance is more at fault than anything else for the current plight of Canadian Indians and Metis, a University of Alberta instructor said today.

Anthropologist Robert J. Devrome, in a study of native education commissioned for an Alberta community, lays the blame on white bureaucracy for ill-conceived educational programs which have attempted unsuccessfully for more than a century to turn out "white Indians."

"The existing system of education has very little, if any, foundation in Indian tradition, family or community," the report said. It runs counter to the informal educational process in Indian homes, and eventually this white cultural bias cripples the personalities of Indian children to the extent it "becomes virtually impossible" for them to function in white schools.

The report said pre-school Indian children, like all other children, become familiar with their parents' traditional values, speech patterns, habits and the like, out of which develop their behavior and expectations.

White children had little difficulty adjusting to schools—which are based on the same attitudes they learned at home —"but what of the 'different' student who has experienced a different kind of pre-school, informal education?"

The Devrome report said this "potentially destructive situation" in school is made worse when the child faces a teacher who speaks a strange language.

Mr. Devrome's report said there has been little change in the basic rationale behind Canadian Indian education since the advent of reserve schools in the 1870s. The purpose has been to tear Indians away from their cultural traditions and turn them into pseudo-whites.

Mr. Devrome said in an interview, there is nothing inferior about North American Indian cultures, if whites would only recognize it.

Indian cultures, before whites set foot on North America, had produced domestic corn, irrigation, cattle raising and even multi-storey apartment-like dwellings.

The Devrome report said that among reasons the educational system has failed are these:

—About 97 per cent of Indian children fail to reach Grade 12, and only about 50 per cent go beyond Grade 6.

—While 40 per cent of Indian children entering school are unable to speak or understand English or French, few teachers speak or understand native languages and have little, if any, knowledge of Indian cultures.

—Inadequate housing conditions on reserves are not conducive to study.

—Half the Indian families on reserves earn less than $1,000 a year; and 75 per cent earn less than $2,000 a year.

—Canadian literature brands Indians as inferior and they receive prejudicial treatment as a result.

The report said the ability and knowledge is available to guide "less developed groups" towards a successful social adjustment. Yet, after more than a century, white governments had yet to realize their systems and institutions — especially education — have failed and would continue to fail until Canadian society realized that "a set of values pertaining to one culture cannot be applied to another without inevitable modifications."

Candidate in Hot Seat

ASSINIBOIA, Sask. (CP) — Like it or not, the federal Liberals have made it hot for their candidate in the Nov. 8 byelection in Assiniboia.

Farmers in this federal constituency in southern Saskatchewan, like farmers throughout the Prairies, are buzzing with discontent over the aborted grains-stabilization plan.

Jim Hooker, a 61-year-old farmer and former member of the Saskatchewan legislature, is contesting the seat for the Liberals and some observers believe he's fighting an impossible battle. But Mr. Hooker feels otherwise.

The former MLA for Notekeu-Willowbunch concedes a victory of sorts to the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats in having the stabilization plan withdrawn.

"But it was a hollow victory at the expense of the western farmers," he said during a panel discussion attended by the other two candidates—Conservative Lawrence Watson and New Democrat Bill Knight.

SEES LOSS

Mr. Hooker said the bill was not a cure-all but its withdrawal will be a big economic loss to farmers.

And so the stage has been set for the rapidly-closing campaign in a constituency that lost its representation in the Commons by the death of Liberal A. B. Douglas.

It is the type of setting that has appeal to NDP supporters —another opportunity to lambaste federal agriculture policies. That tack was largely credited for the party's provincial election victory over the former Liberal administration last June.

But it still could be a close race if the pattern of the last federal general election in the riding is followed.

In that 1968 election, Douglas deposed Watson by just 95 votes with a total of 9,636 ballots in his favor. The NDP candidate, Bruce L. Wilson, wasn't too far off the mark either. He polled 341 fewer votes than Douglas.

NDP HAS EDGE

In the last nine byelections since the 1968 general election, NDP candidates captured four seats; the Liberals three and the Conservatives two.

Nomination day in Assiniboia is Oct. 25.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, NDP Leader David Lewis and former leader T. C. Douglas all have campaigned in the riding.

Mr. Knight, a 28-year-old teacher from Weyburn, said his party accepts full credit for having the stabilization bill withdrawn from the Commons.

Mr. Watson, who represented the riding for the Conservatives before his defeat in 1968, is a big, plain-speaking man who says "nobody needs to tell me the farmers' problems—I've got them.

He believes the Liberal government never had western interests at heart.

GIANT PAGEANT MARKS PERSIAN ANNIVERSARY

PERSEPOLIS, Iran (Reuter) — A giant military pageant marked today's celebrations of the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian empire—highlighted Thursday night in this tented city by one of the most glittering banquets of the century.

Fifty guests of the Shah of Iran and Empress Farah—one of the largest gatherings of monarchs, presidents, and top government officials ever assembled—sat down to the feast in a blue and yellow tent within the shadows of the ruined imperial capital.

They dined on 90 plumed peacocks, quail eggs stuffed with caviar, mousse of crayfish tails, stuffed roast lamb with truffles, and truffle salad, creamed figs with raspberries in port wine, and pink champagne. Six different wines were served.

Envoys in Peking Play New Game Called Where's Lin

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — After travelling all the way from Romania the minister of the machine-building industry would doubtlessly have been disappointed to learn that many in his audience were more intrigued by the toast with which he closed his speech than by anything of substance he had to say.

At a reception here this week the Romanian minister raised his glass to the health of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, Premier Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders, but not to the chairman's deputy, vice-chairman Lin Piao, who has regularly been included in formal toasts ever since he was named as Mao's successor in 1969.

In more normal times observers here might have marked the omission down as an oversight. But there have been too many unusual developments of late for any departure from form, however slight, to be dismissed so casually and so the omission has been added to the mounting pile of evidence that something of importance has occurred behind the scenes in Peking.

Although they have not got a great deal to go on as yet, varying ideological persuasion are inclined to focus their attention on the status of vice-chairman Lin who, as minister of defence as well as deputy leader of the Communist party, enjoys a position of cardinal importance in the Chinese hierarchy.

The diplomats suggest that a number of recent developments, including the cancellation of the national day parade which was to have taken place on Oct. 1, could be the result of the vice-chairman falling ill or becoming otherwise unable to perform his functions.

Western correspondents, inured against suggestions of illness in the leadership by frequent false alarms in recent years, tended to discount the latest suggestions until recently when it became apparent that similar suggestions were gaining currency in the outside world.

In the last few days a number of them have invited official spokesmen to put a stop to the suggestions by confirming the vice-chairman's good health. In each case the inquiries have been noted but no reply has been forthcoming.

When the cancellation of the parade first became known inquiries about the health of Chairman Mao met with immediate assurances of his good form. The chairman has since appeared in public, meeting Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie last Friday.

Lin, now 64, was treated in a Soviet hospital many years ago for what is believed to have been tuberculosis. He was last seen publicly on June 3, when he was at the chairman's side to greet Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

In the circumstances diplomats are saying that Ioan Avram, the Romanian minister, who comes from a country which enjoys particularly close ties with China, may have omitted Lin's name from his toast deliberately. At the same time they are not ruling out the possibility that it was no more than a change in diplomatic protocol.

The diplomats point out that Avram was not the first to omit mention of Lin in a context where his name would normally be included. Only last week Tun Pi-wu, a vice-chairman of the republic, surprised guests at a state banquet for Emperor Haile Selassie by welcoming him on behalf of Chairman Mao, but not, as he has in the past, on behalf of vice-chairman Lin.

In his reply the emperor toasted both men. But in a desperate departure from normal practice the New China news agency dropped the toast from its verbatim report of the speech.

In fact the agency has not mentioned the vice-chairman in a substantive way since Sept. 11 when it cited his close ties with the chairman in a story marking the distribution throughout China of a set of 50 colored photographs of the chairman, some of them showing him in Lin's company.

That story was carried in the People's Daily of Sept. 12. Since then the only references to the vice-chairman have been in messages sent to the leadership on National Day. A number of those messages, including those from Albania, Romania, North Korea and North Vietnam, were addressed to Mao and Lin, and were reprinted verbatim in the press.

In another development sharp-eyed diplomats say they have noticed the disappearance of a number of the vice-chairman's quotations from public places around Peking. However this could be routine, since most of the quotations were changed as part of the repainting that preceded National Day.

Another development that has attracted attention is the sudden unavailability of copies of the October issue of China Pictorial, a magazine which is widely distributed throughout China. The issue, published in Chinese on Sept. 28, carried a photograph of Mao and Lin on the front cover, and several more inside.

The magazine is translated into several foreign languages, but foreign language copies have yet to reach most regular subscribers. Diplomats who have attempted to buy the Chinese-language version in Peking stores have been told that they have all been sold out, but that new copies will be distributed in a few days.

Against all this must be set the close bond between the chairman and the vice-chairman, particularly since the cultural revolution, which elevated to ascendancy as the chairman's nominated successor. That bond was nowhere better expressed than in the Sept. 11 story of the New China news agency, which will have to stand as testimony until the situation is clarified.

Said the agency: "Some of the photographs show the great leader Chairman Mao with his close comrade in arms Lin Piao, which makes us feel intimately that vice-chairman Lin Piao has consistently held high the red banner of Mao Tse-tung thought, resolutely carried out and defended Chairman Mao's revolutionary proletarian line, and is the brilliant example for the whole party, the whole army, and the people all over the country."

Defence Pay Hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Research Board administrators, accountants, buyers and computer-system managers were awarded a 16.8-per-cent pay increase over a 32-month period in an arbitration ruling announced today.

The employees affected are represented by the Union of National Defence Employees and include DRB administrative and foreign service personnel in Halifax, Valcartier, Ottawa, Toronto, Esquimalt and Suffield.

Before arbitration by Mr. Justice Andre Montpetit, chief public service arbitrator, the union and DRB had agreed to longer vacations and overtime benefits.

The contract is retroactive to Oct. 1, 1970, with increases effective Aug. 30, 1971, and July 31, 1972.

FLQ BILL $2.7M

OTTAWA (CP) — The bill for use of military forces to maintain order during the Quebec civil crisis a year ago amounted to $2,717,101.

A written reply in the Commons from Defence Minister Donald S. Macdonald said those costs incurred in late 1970 were expenses additional to normal pay and maintenance costs for the troops involved.

Of the total extra costs, $2,109,337 was spent in Quebec province and $597,764 in the Ottawa area, where troops were engaged in security duties.

GM
MARK OF EXCELLENCE
Buckling seat and shoulder belts is an idea you can live with.

Before we built our little Vega, we took a very close look at all the other little cars around.

There were all kinds of things we liked (and knew you liked, too) but we saw plenty we knew we could improve.

Here's how we went about building it.

You wanted fuel economy. Vega owners report up to 30 miles per gallon.

But at the same time, you wanted performance. Enough get-up-and-go for the freeways, long steep hills and any tricky traffic situations.

So we designed a unique, 4 cylinder, overhead cam engine. It's aluminum/silicon, light so it can be big. And a bigger engine in a little car means it delivers more, without working too hard.

Handling was something else you were very firm about. So Vega rides on a tight, 97-inch wheelbase. It has a wide stance and a low centre of gravity. To drive it is to love it!

The list of good things in a Vega goes on: front disc brakes; dual master cylinder brake system; Full Coil suspension; wraparound front and rear bumpers; wide doors; side-guard door beams; foam-filled front bucket seats (except truck).

But you let us know where we goofed.

Which is why the '72 Vega has a glove compartment, and an improved exhaust system.

Vega. We'll only change it to make it better.

We want your 1972 Chevy Vega to be the best car you've ever owned.

Tory Candidate Wants Members Alone to Pay

British Columbia Progressive Conservative leadership candidate John Green said Thursday the party must eliminate all corporate financing of party activities.

Green told a press conference in Victoria he wants to see the B.C. Tories financed solely through increased membership fees.

He believes this would be sufficient to run the party and finance a general election. Green said he has created a trust fund for conditional party memberships.

Money collected this way will be returned if the party fails to change its constitution to eliminate corporate financing.

CHANGE SYSTEM

Green, 44, is a newspaper publisher in Agassiz and the son of long-time Vancouver MP Howard Green who served in Prime Minister Diefenbaker's cabinet.

"I decided long ago that I wanted to change the system of financing a political party by corporate donations, and I have learned over the years that it's no use pushing from the ranks. That's why I'm runnning for the top job," Green said.

The Tory convention is Nov. 19 and 20 in Vancouver. Green said he has no particular complaint with leader John de Wolf.

INCREASE FEES

He said corporate financing should be ended because "people who set themselves up to make laws for everyone should not be financially dependent on one segment of society."

Green would increase membership fees from $5 to $10 for an individual and $15 for a family. A realistic membership base, he said, would be 10,000 persons.

He said the party must build membership before getting wrapped up in policy debates.

"If your party barely exists, what does it matter what you say about policy?"

The last Tory MLA in B.C. was Dr. Larry Giovando who represented Nanaimo in the 1950s.

The World . . . According to Phil

Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi laid the advice on strong Thursday night as he addressed the annual meeting of Victoria's life insurance underwriters.

He sorted out Canada's role in international fiscal matters, told Prime Minister Trudeau to "quit fooling around" and dismissed President Nixon's 10 per cent surcharge on imports from Canada with one or two terse sentences.

BIT OF ADVICE

"Surely we're not going to be servants just because of 10 per cent," he said. "Ten per cent isn't doing one-fifth or one-tenth or one-twentieth the damage you think it's doing."

The time has come, he said, for Canadians "to measure up as true Canadians."

He had a bit of advice for the ladies too.

"If God had of wanted you women to be men," he said, "He'd of built you that way."

Schools and universities today, he said, are grinding out far too many graduates with a "world owes me a living" philosophy.

The comment, he told the life insurance men, won't make him popular when the papers get hold of it, but "I could care less about being popular. I want to stand up for the things I believe."

He drew quite a few laughs at his own expense, to. There was a time, he said, when he had a jet plane to travel around in. And he finds getting along without it quite an inconvenience.

BIG LAUGH

"Why don't you insurance men get together and get that jet back for me?"

He mentioned highways, and got another big laugh. "I'll go down in history as the only man who ever built anything they wouldn't let him use."

The insurance men loved it, and so did the minister.

"Go sell more insurance," he exhorted in parting, "so I can come and talk to you again and the newspapers can write it up and sell more papers and buy more pulp from the mills and pay more taxes . . ."

Amchitka Blast Pollution One Chance in 4—Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis told the Commons today there is about one chance in four that the proposed nuclear test on Alaska's Amchitka Island will spill radioactive dust into the atmosphere.

As well, "there is a certainty of contamination of ground waters in the area," which will eventually seep into the sea, he said.

Mr. Davis was speaking in a special debate on a motion by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp which condemned nuclear testing by all countries, and especially the projected blast scheduled for this month.

Mr. Sharp said that if the U.S. and Soviet Union do not restrain their nuclear testing and the arms race, they cannot expect other countries to accept restraints on their own possession of such weapons.

Spokesmen for all parties in the House had expressed approval of the motion in advance.

SHAKE FOUNDATION

Mr. Sharp said the balance of nuclear deterrence remains the foundation of world peace, but detonation of more and more efficient bombs is not the way to provide a more secure foundation.

"The world is made apprehensive by continued nuclear tests. It is becoming weary of the endless delays that are postponing a nuclear ban."

Mr. Davis stressed the environmental danger.

But he estimated as "remote" the danger of an earthquake in Canada started by five-megaton underground blast, or of a tidal wave set off by earth movements in the Amchitka area.

He said that the last nuclear test in the continental United States—underground in Nevada last December—had leaked radioactive dust despite predictions by U.S. officials that such venting could not or would not happen.

The radioactive cloud drifted north to Canada, finally settling in the Thunder Bay area.

Court Upholds 'Light' Penalty

A B.C. Appeal Court in Vancouver Wednesday upheld the February manslaughter sentence of a Victoria man but disagreed with a principle that was part of the sentence.

The Crown had appealed the sentence of Dewa Singh Guray, 33, of 1292 Denman, who was sentenced to four years and nine months in prison for the shooting death of Hardev Singh Gill, 29, of New Westminster.

The Crown felt the penalty too light. Guray was sentenced Feb. 8 by Justice J. G. Gould in Supreme Court.

Gould had said the "proper sentence" would have been eight years if the accused were of Canadian origin.

INDIAN-BORN

He added of the India-born Guray that he "is a resident of Canada, but in his mores he is still untransferred from the country of his origin."

The Appeal Court Justices C. W. Tysoe, Angelo Branca and M. M. McFarlane, however, disagreed with this principle.

They said any person coming to Canada from another country would have to expect to live by mores and customs of Canada. They indicated they felt Gould is his sentence was concerned with the effect of prison life on Guray and his rehabilitation.

Several factors, they cited, for not changing the sentence included the accused's previous good character, his drunken condition at the time of the offence, the number of people in the car where the victim was shot and the fact an argument had taken place.

NO INTENT

The jury at Guray's trial ruled the accused innocent of non-capital murder but guilty of manslaughter, a lesser offence which presupposes no intent to kill.

Gill was shot to death Nov. 7, 1970, while he sat drinking whisky from paper cups with friends in a car parked near the Guray home.

Oak Bay Students Winners

Two Oak Bay and four Island high school students are among 19 who will receive slide rule awards from the B.C. Association of Professional Engineers for achieving the highest marks in the province in chemistry, physics and mathematics.

Winners in physics are Martin John Cavin and James Allen Brander, both of Oak Bay Senior Secondary, and Gary Bruce Little of Cowichan Senior Secondary and Gregory Clarke Field of Georges P. Vanier Secondary in Courtenay.

Little also was also a winner in chemistry, with Norman Gaffe of Alberni District Secondary and Gregory John Peet of Cowichan Senior Secondary.

Selective Welfare Backed by Tories

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The Conservative party approved today plans by Prime Minister Heath's government to put welfare on a more selective, self-help basis.

The 4,000 delegates to the party's annual convention overwhelmingly endorsed, by hand votes, plans to concentrate housing subsidies and health and welfare benefits where they are most needed while reducing benefits for those who can afford to pay.

The Opposition Labor party, by contrast, favors a universal application of welfare-state services, with equal benefits available to all.

Housing Minister Julian Amery told the Conservative party convention rent subsidies would be further reduced for those who can afford to pay and raised for those who cannot.

He also put emphasis on encouraging tenants in state-subsidized housing to buy their homes, if family finances permit. He said this would permit a concentration of state housing funds for top priority needs, such as slum clearance.

Labor opposes the sale of subsidized housing on the grounds it gives the buyer, at lower than market cost, a home built at the taxpayers' expense.

Health Minister Sir Keith Joseph defended the increased charges in the national health service on prescriptions, optical and dental care, ordered by the Conservatives for those who can afford to pay. He said such steps would free funds to help those most in need.

Nation Boasts Only One Road

NEW YORK (CP) — Has "time," romanticized by poets, caressed by philosophers, belabored by economists, become anathema?

Do you, too, wonder what to do with it?

"Dost thou love life? Then do not squader time, for that is the stuff life is made of." The words are Benjamin Franklin's, in Maxims prefixed to Poor Richard's Almanac, 1757.

For many North Americans the advice has become increasingly difficult to follow.

On one hand is the so-called Protestant ethic, which holds that work is good for soul. On the other is the steady march of technology, which has reduced the work week for employees to five days, for some to four days and even, experimentally, to three days.

Travel has boomed, industries catering to man's leisure-time activities are among the fastest growing. But many an employee remains dissatisfied. He can't square his ingrained aversion to time-wasting with all those hours he spends before a television set.

"The Americans are a queer people; they can't rest," Canadain humorist Stephen Leacock once said.

But man's use of time can be reordered. And Dr. Robert Butler, a psychiatrist and gerontologist in Washington, D.C., suggests how.

Dr. Butler derides the standard education-work-retirment cycle of man's life. He would replace it with school-work-temporary retirement, more school, more work — perhaps in an entirely new field — and a continuation of the cycle as long as desired. This, says the psychiatrist, would produce lifelong spiritual, psychological and mental growth, filling man's need for surges of creativity interspersed with periods of regeneration.

Some beginnings have been made toward improving man's work satisfactions. Job enrichment studies have led some firms to end deadening, assembly-line procedures by combining tasks so that a worker makes a recognizable product for which he has responsibility and in which he can take pride. Other firms are relieving monotony by switching assignments around.

Some companies are sending workers to school, to create more valuable employees.

The Conference Board in New York City reports that hundreds of corporations now sponsor tuition-aid plans and fellowships, seeking to keep employees abreast of the knowledge explosion.

But, since the employee is expected to return to the company that pays for his sabbatical, these plans do not go as far as Dr. Butler's proposals.

Pension plans are often the main deterrent to a series of school-work-retirement episodes in one man's career. Complete portability of pension credits is the answer, although statisticians still say the idea is actually unsound. Some thought now is being given to portability of pensions within entire industries.

Time should not hang heavily on the hands of a person faced with the possibility of several careers. His leisure time would become his stepping stone to his next job.

Reef Protected

LONDON (Reuter) — A conference of international maritime experts here has unanimously approved a proposal aimed at protecting Australia's Great Barrier Reef from oil pollution. The proposal would prohibit the dumping of oil from ships within 50 miles of the reef.

TOO MANY PEOPLE AT SANCTUARIES

It arises from too many humans, their cars and other vacation paraphernalia in already crowded game parks.

The problem facing the reserves, as they are called here, is this: one aim in saving wildlife is for people to come and look at them, but there comes a time when this attraction may overwhelm the reserve itself.

Coupled with traditional afflictions such as poachers, occasional drought and competition among beasts, the animals are under more pressure than ever.

Packaged tours plus new hotels plus improved air service from other continents have strained facilities in some famous sanctuaries in east Africa.

MAKES MORE WORK

At Rhodesia's Wankie National Park more and more time has to be diverted to administration at the expense of animals and habitat. Some rangers grumble that they must waste time seeing to the collection of rubbish dropped by thoughtless visitors. Others worry about the increased danger from fire. One blaze last year at Wankie scorched 113,000 acres.

More cars create more dust which forces animals away from viewing roads because the grit makes vegetation bordering the road unpalatable.

South Africa's Kruger Park has a network of tarred roads. The speed limit is 20 miles an hour, but speed traps are necessary to curb violators. Kruger's lions adapted quickly both to heavier traffic and hard surface roads. Some lions like to sleep on the sun-warmed tar on chilly days.

About 3,500 beds are available in a chain of pleasant camps which are surrounded by high fences. Visitors who take day trips into the 7,340-square-mile reserve must be out before the gates close at dusk. Hundreds are turned away on weekends and holidays; authorities limit the daily quota of cars to 3,500.

Despite the controls, some experts are convinced that Kruger Park is polluted by people. One botanist contends that park administrators "don't think of it in terms of a balanced ecology."

"They think of it in terms of the number of tourists that can be crammed into it and the revenue that can be earned."

PUBLIC HEARINGS ON ACCIDENT PREVENTION REGULATIONS

Public hearings, to consider submissions in regard to the proposed new Accident Prevention Regulations of B.C., will begin Tuesday, October 26 and continue until all submissions have been covered.

Draft copies of the proposed new regulations have been circulated to employers, employer associations and union representatives.

Additional copies are available for examination 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday in the Board's Legal Department, 5255 Heather Street, Vancouver, B.C.

The hearings will be held in the WCB auditorium, third floor, 5255 Heather St., Vancouver 13, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 2:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Universities Used 'False Arguments'

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Public resentment towards university spending is increasing, in part because the universities themselves tried to justify increased education spending with a false argument, says the president of Brandon University.

Dr. A. Lloyd Dulmage said in an interview that universities have sought more funds from government by arguing that expanded facilities are required to prepare growing numbers of young people for positions in the work force.

The argument was "a fallacious one in the first place," said the 54-year-old president.

"What we should have been saying is that we are in the business of developing people intellectually and socially. This is the purpose of the university."

There is another kind of resentment towards the university, particularly in Brandon, that has to do with attitudes towards youth in general, as well as to the fact the New Democratic Party in Manitoba draws support from many individuals at the university, said Dr. Dulmage.

It is unfair to be resentful towards the university just because it deals with the young, and just because some of its professors in their personal capacity support the NDP, he said.

The university neither created the problems of the young, nor did it put the NDP into office.

Critics of the university should realize "the university is extremely valuable in providing opportunities to the young to devise a meaningful and consistent philosophy of life."

Dr. Dulmage, who was dean of arts at the University of Manitoba before coming to Brandon University in 1970, recommended "a much more open policy towards providing university education for the adult population."

The opportunity to develop in areas of liberal arts, drama, music and creative arts should be there for all the people in the province.

He said it was difficult to proceed in this direction because the financial structure requires that fees should pay all the costs of providing such courses.

"The three universities of Manitoba are co-operating now to offer 15 or 16 courses in the north this year as compared to two or three last year. This is encouraging."

Cattle Rustlers Beware!

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Sgt. Ab Willms rides around in a pickup truck in ranch clothes, his face weatherbeaten from being outdoors.

The average guy out to slice a cow or two from somebody else's herd would never suspect him of being head of the RCMP's rustler patrol.

Sgt. Willms, 46, a Mountie for 23 years, covers 57,000 square miles of ranching country with Constables Dave Ayres and Bob Scory and they all are on 24-hour call.

Working out of the Kamloops subdivision, the three chase cattle thieves from the Canada - United States border north to the Chilcotin, from the Fraser Valley to the Alberta border.

If a rancher is watching for rustlers and is missing a cow or steer, they get a call.

The British Columbia Beef Cattle Association based here offers a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a cattle thief.

Last year, the B.C. Beef Cattle Grower's Association says, 446 cattle were stolen. That same year, Sgt. Willms and his men charged and convicted 14 rustlers.

Strangely, all 14 pleaded not guilty, even when apprehended with the beef in their possession.

One man at Vernon got three years in penitentiary for killing six cows.

Sgt. Willms said one of his men saw the culprit's truck going up into the hills, but lost track of it. They waited, and met him coming down.

The man refused to stop, even with a flasher light on the vehicle following him. Finally, he jammed on his brakes, jumped out and headed for the woods.

War Act Probe Will Return

MONTREAL (CP) — The citizens' commission of inquiry into the War Measures Act concluded three days of hearings an hour behind schedule Thursday.

Because of interest in the hearings, the commission announced it would return to Montreal for additional sessions in December.

The commissioners heard 54 witnesses, six of whom testified privately.

Most but not all witnesses condemned the Quebec and federal authorities for their handling of events following the kidnappings last October of British Trade Commissioner James Cross and Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, who was later murdered by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Charles Gagnon, a former sociology professor at the University of Montreal, told the hearing Thursday the establishment used its strength last October to crush the movement for independence among the people of Quebec.

SHOULD BE REMOVED

Several lawyers testifying before the committee agreed with Bernard Mergler, who defended several persons charged during the crisis, when he said the section of the act dealing with apprehended insurrection should be removed.

Mr. Mergler said the term was open to subjective interpretation.

Lawyers criticized the act for removing or substantially reducing judicial powers in several areas.

Labor leader Michel Chartrand said that many judges were picked to sit at FLQ cases because of their political background.

Lawyer Claudt Fillon suggested that an independent committee be formed to name judges.

The committee would represent the bar, unions, the department of justice, professional corporations and other sectors of society, and would ensure competent judges, willing to act fearlessly.

COULDN'T SEE CLIENTS

Several lawyers said they were unable to talk to clients arrested under the War Measures Act for sevral days after they were detained.

Camille Laurin, leader in the national assembly of the Parti Quebecois, said the crisis was sparked by the scandalous economic disparity between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

The Oct. 5, 1970, kidnapping of James Cross crystallized the discontent.

"The real causes of the crisis are still there," Mr. Laurin said.

Mr. Mergler said the citizens' commission could be more valuable than a royal commission into the War Measures Act, "because they're not beholden to anybody and they're not being paid."

Commissioner Fernand Daoust, secretary-general of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said in a pre-session interview that the commission was established because, "although many groups wanted a formal royal commission, the governments refused to set one up.'"

The idea originated at the University of Waterloo about eight months ago.

TRADE SURPLUS $184 MILLION

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada had a commodity trade surplus of exports over imports amounting to $184 million in September, bringing the cumulative surplus for the year to $1.81 billion, Statistics Canada reported today.

The figures were down only slightly from a September surplus of $189.3 million last year, when the nine-months total ran to $1.96 billion.

Imports in September amounted to $1.3 billion, up from $1.2 billion a year ago. Exports, previously announced by the statistics bureau, amounted to $1.5 billion in September this year, compared with $1.4 billion a year ago.

Imports for the first nine months of 1971 amounted to $11.3 billion, compared with $10.6-billion last year. Exports were $13.1 billion this year, compared with $12.5 billion in nine months last year.

The latest import figures showed major increases in purchases from Japan, the European Common Market, and Commonwealth countries other than the United Kingdom. Imports from the United States were up 9.5 per cent, and from the U.K. up 2.5 per cent.

For the nine-months period, the main increase in imports came from Japan. Imports from the U.S. were up 5.2 per cent to a cumulative total of $8 billion out of the all-country total of $11.3 billion.

Latin Trade Links Stressed

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONTREAL (CP) — The tough new economic policies of the United States have shown "dramatically" Canada's community of interest with Latin America, says the secretary-general of the Organization of American States.

Galo Plaza, who was president of Ecuador before becoming head of the 22-country organization, told the annual conference of the Canadian Association for Latin America Thursday night that CALA itself is evidence of growing Canadian interest in the southern regions.

"Canada has a vital stake in the development of Latin America," he added. "The identical reactions of the government of Canada and of those of Latin America to the new economic policies of the U.S. has dramatically brought home the point that there is an underlying community of interests."

Unlike the U.S., Canada is not a member of the OAS but Mr. Plaza noted that the federal government plans to appoint a permanent observer mission to the hemispheric association.

"The increased difficulties for both Canadian and Latin American exports to the U.S. market should lead to a rekindling of reciprocal interest in exploring each others' markets," said Mr. Plaza.

What is the outlook for increased trade?

EXPORTS TRIPLE

A CALA survey showed that Canadian exports to Latin America tripled in 10 years to more than $500 billion.

"There is every reason to hope that Canadian exports to Latin America could triple again in the present decade if government and the private sector co-operate to that end, and if Latin America is in turn permitted greater access to the Canadian market," said Mr. Plaza.

"There are also opportunities for more consultant and service contracts, in view of the high respect for Canadian technology throughout Latin America."

In general Latin American nationalism is positive rather than negative in character, and the need for foreign capital is fully recognized, said Mr. Plaza.

Korean Troops Occupy Campuses

SEOUL (CP) — The government sent troops and police into seven universities today to quell riotous demonstrations raging for more than two weeks. They arrested more than 1,000 students.

The education ministry closed nine universities and colleges in Seoul and one in Kwangji, 170 miles south of Seoul, saying "normal classwork was impossible because of the demonstrations."

The demonstrators have been protesting corruption in government and business and compulsory military training on the campuses.

Police and troops were camping at seven universities this afternoon after forcing the students out.

No noticeable resistance came from the students, except at Korea University. There dozens of students hurled rocks at more than 200 troops. The troops fired tear gas canisters, herded the students on to army trucks and drove them to the capital garrison command headquarters.

The troops were called out at the request of Mayor Taikshik Yang, who said the police alone could not control the student protests.

Mainland Power Struggle

VANCOUVER (UPI) — One year after the People's Republic of China, the increasingly militant supporters of Mao Tse-tung are engaged in a power struggle with Nationalists in Vancouver's Chinatown.

Although the Maoists and the Nationalists together form only a small minority of Chinatown's population, observers feel they are struggling for dominant influence and power in the community.

Since Ottawa recognized the Peking government on Oct. 13, 1970, the Maoists have become a militant, active force and Chinatown residents feel the group is working toward a role as undisputed spokesman for their countrymen on Canada's west coast.

OWN PAPER

The group publishes a newspaper, organizes welcomes for visiting mainland Chinese vessels and distributes leaflets when provoked by community issues.

It also sells mainland products, including the writings of Chairman Mao, in an increasing number of stores.

Observers predict the Maoists will either try to gain control of the major societies in Chinatown, which are at present either neutral or dominated by supporters of Chiang Kai-shek, or set up parallel organizations to compete for membership.

Status and influence in the Chinese community is at stake since the function of the Chinatown societies is now chiefly ceremonial. The government has largely assumed the societies' original responsibilities of protecting the Chinese population against poverty, injustice and discrimination.

LITTLE OUTCRY

The issue of Canadian recognition of Peking provoked little outcry from the substantial portion of Vancouver's Chinese community. Many local Chinese were pleased and the few efforts to organize protests fizzled.

More than half the Canadian Chinese live in B.C., with 30,000 in Vancouver alone.

Many Chinatown establishments have been staunch supporters of the Nationalist government and were strongly opposed to Ottawa's action.

Two months before Canada's recognition of Peking, the Maoists made their first major appearance on the Vancouver scene. When the freighter Dong Feng (East Wind), built and manned by Communist Chinese, arrived in Vancouver more than 500 Chinese met it at the docks with banners and music.

British Party Tackles Isthmus

LONDON (CP) — The first automobile crossing of the Latin American isthmus, between Panama and Colombia is planned by a British party with support from both South American governments.

The journey across the Darien Gap will take up only 250 miles of a planned British motor expedition of 13,000 miles between Anchorage, Alaska, and Tierra del Fuego in Chile but it will be among the toughest.

With no detailed maps of the area available, the explorers will chart their own course, felling trees to build bridges across rivers and using the local knowledge of Indian tribes for guidance through jungle and mangrove swamps. So hazardous is the terrain that the explorers expect to cover no more than three miles a day while crossing Darien.

The party will be made up of 57 British Army volunteers and civilian scientists and will include four women.

AUTHOR

Man behind the journey is writer Tim Nicholson, author of a number of books on motoring history, who enlisted the interest of Maj. John Blashford-Snell of the Royal Engineers, chairman of the Scientific Exploration Society, and Lt.-Col. Julian du Pare Braham of the Anglo-Colombian Society.

Approval followed from the British ministry of defence and an appeal for army and specialist volunteers provided the complete team for the first motor crossing of the isthmus.

Only six members of the expedition will take part in the first and final stages of the drive. The remaining volunteers will manoeuvre the expedition's two Range Rovers across the hazardous Darien Gap. They will use pack mules for food and equipment and additional supplies will be dropped by parachute.

Cities Favor Program

Times News Services

Municipal leaders today are enthusiastic about the new economic incentives offered by Ottawa but financial officials expressed fears the $1 billion program may spur inflation.

And Premier Bennett said he will turn B.C's share of the $100 million over to the municipalities for job-creating projects.

He said the program is a good idea and noted that B.C. has advocated a renewed winter works program for several months.

Bennett would not say whether the $1 billion program would show a reduction in B.C.'s unemployment rate by next spring. He also refused to say whether he thought the planned $1 billion federal budget deficit would lead to a new round of inflation.

AMAZED

He said he was amazed that Finance Minister Benson and Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that Canadians should thank United States President Nixon's economic moves for leading to the new government plans.

Mayor Courtney Haddock has greeted the announcement with enthusiasm, but warned it could lead to falsely expanded municipal work forces.

Haddock said the proposals were "interesting," provided they don't require municipalities to put on extra staff to handle the workload.

"If there's money in it for Victoria, we'll go for it," the mayor said. "But we must be careful not to put on extra permanent staff which eventually would become the city's responsibility."

MILD MEDICINE

He referred to a $50 million grant to municipalities to finance labor incentive programs.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the programs were "mild medicine when major surgery is indicated," but said the municipality would take full advantage of them.

Mayor Art Young of Esquimalt said the $50 million grant, coupled with another $50 million to community organizations to formulate other projects, "would sure be a shot in the arm."

W. V. Scully, chairman of the Steel Co. of Canada, said:

"How are they going to pay for it? I suppose it will mean printing money."

However, he said, "something had to be done to tide us over the winter."

INFLATIONARY

Jack Mackenzie, vice-president of Canada Permanent Trust Co., said he believes "a $1 billion deficit has to be wildly inflationary. . . ."

"I think interest rates will go up in the next 12 months and the government will have to print money to expand credit."

Forrest Rogers, economic adviser to the Bank of Nova Scotia, said in Vancouver:

"The program will spur the economy to a degree, but the extent will depend on the success the U.S. has in coping

WHAT TAX CUT IS WORTH

OTTAWA (CP) — The new three-per-cent reduction in federal income taxes announced Thursday will mean a saving of $15 for each $1,000 that a taxpayer has been paying to the federal government this year, a finance department source said today.

But precisely how the reduction affects taxpayers with various amounts of incomes and deductions for supporting a wife and children has not yet been worked out by the finance department.

The tax reduction is retroactive to July 1 and will continue, Benson said, until the end of next year.

Since it applies only to half of the current calendar year, the tax reduction amounts to 1.5 per cent of federal taxes payable for 1971.

The reduction applies only to federal income taxes. Tax tables put out previously by the finance department include both federal and provincial taxes, the latter at the rate of 28 per cent of basic federal tax.

More to Come Says Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — A $1 billion shot in the arm for the laggard economy, including income tax cuts, was delivered by the federal government Thursday night.

Prime Minister Trudeau followed up the announcement today by stating at a press conference that further policies would be introduced before a general election is called — probably in 1973.

Job-Making Projects

The program of temporary individual and corporate tax reductions, plus financial aid to provinces and municipalities for job-making projects, was outlined by Finance Minister E. J. Benson during a special Commons debate called to consider the slack state of economic activity.

The measures came after a sharp increase in the unemployment trend and amid fears that U.S. trade restrictions will cause more damage.

"The economy will be booming by the end of 1972," Mr. Benson told reporters later. But, he added: "This is not an election budget."

The prime minister described the planned deficit of $1 billion in the current fiscal year as "about right."

If more spending was needed, the government would bring in more budgetary measures.

Action on Inflation, Too

And if inflation became severe, the government would "have to act on that side."

Trudeau said he hoped there would have been some indication from the U.S. that its trade restrictions would be more temporary than they appear. Had this been the case, Thursday's "budget" would have been easier.

He said Canada still had a wide variety of choices to follow in its trade relations with the U.S., but he still felt it would be 100 times better if any type of hostility could be avoided. Recalling that in 1911 an election campaign was won on the slogan of "not truck or trade with the Yankees," Trudeau said "it's not a course I would like to follow."

When American intentions become more clear, Canada could decide on, for example, specific ways of expanding trade with the U.S.; or, if necessary, reorienting trading patterns to other countries.

He said he would be discussing Canada-U.S. trade with Russian Premier Kosygin when he visits Canada next week.

$160 Million in Loans

"Obviously he'll be interested in knowing our position."

The spending program provides a three-per-cent reduction on individual federal income tax and a drop of seven per cent in corporate tax, both retroactive to July 1 and due to run to the end of next year.

The tax cuts would be in addition to those announced in June — removal of the three-per-cent surtax for individuals and corporations imposed in 1968.

Thursday's proposals include $160 million in loans to provinces and municipalities for projects to help employment, $100 million in grants to municipalities and community organizations for the same purpose, $35 million to improve manpower training and an $80 million federal works program.

There will be a speed-up of $113 million in loans from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and $10 million in loans for construction of multi-purpose exhibition buildings.

The total cost of the package will be $1,070 million, including the loss in tax revenue.

Highest Since 1946

Mr. Benson estimated the budget deficit for the financial year ending next March 31 will be $1 billion, the difference between spending of $14.58 billion and revenue of $13.58 billion. That is up from the deficit of $750 million estimated in the June 18 budget for this year.

The new figure would be the biggest deficit since 1945-46, when revenues were more than $2 billion below spending, reflecting costs of the Second World War.

Opposition spokesmen who had called repeatedly for special measures to stimulate the economy, called the program too late and too little.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the economic stimulants were too tardy to have enough effect on winter employment. The country had no confidence in the finance minister, and he should resign.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis charged the government with doing more for corporations than for the ordinary people. He also said the measures were too late.

Caouette Castigates

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, castigating economists and wasteful bureaucrats for getting the economy in a mess, called for a guaranteed annual income and discounts on Canadian-made products.

Mr. Benson, in his 23-minute budget-like statement of 2,000 words, did not concede there is any essential fault in the economy.

To opposition hoots of derision he concluded his speech with:

"The economy is strong and growing. The measures I have proposed today are designed to keep it that way."

He urged higher consumer spending as an antidote in the U.S. surtax on imported goods, a barrier to Canadian exports.

"Spending by individuals makes up two-thirds of national income and is the base on which the whole economy rests," he said.

Mr. Benson said the federal government "will be consulting the provinces forthwith on the early implementation of the program."

A federal-provincial conference was scheduled for Dec. 6-8 but the federal government, under pressure, has been trying to arrange an earlier date amid conflicting provincial requirements.

The programs to spur employment contain incentives for winter starts on construction projects. Local and provincial governments will get back $3 for every $4 of on-site labor costs incurred up to May 31, 1972.

Think-Up Work Centre of Plan

OTTAWA CP — Make-your-own-work projects are to be a $100-million feature of the federal government's winter campaign against unemployment.

Taking the lead from the $24.6 million Opportunities for Youth program of last summer, Finance Minister E. J. Benson announced Thursday the money will be available for projects submitted by municipalities, community organizations and private groups.

As with Opportunities for Youth, the new local initiatives program will be "weighted in favor of those regions and sub-regions where unemployment is most serious."

Also, as with the youth program, the local initiatives are not to be profit oriented and are to serve the best possible good of the communities involved.

Just how much the jobs to be generated will pay has yet to be established. The rules under which projects will be selected are to be announced within the next few days.

Perhaps a key difference between the two programs is that the original was introduced by Secretary of State Gerald Pelletier, whereas the local-initiatives program is to be administered by Manpower Minister Otto Lang.

Mr. Pelletier had a youthful corps of administrators, many with no experience in the public service, to screen and approve a rush of applications for funds. Its decisions were open to widespread criticism, but many of the Opportunity for Youth projects won community approval.

Mr. Lang indicated in an interview after Mr. Benson's speech that the new program will be more concerned with jobs for unskilled workers.

"There won't be as many esoteric projects as there were in Opportunities for Youth," he said.

He suggested that pollution clean-ups and urban rehabilitation projects would likely be typical of the initiatives to be approved under the program.

Half of the money available through the program is to go to municipalities after consultation with provincial authorities. The balance is reserved to finance projects submitted by local groups.

Proposals are to be made to regional manpower offices before Jan. 31, 1972, and processing of applications will begin almost immediately Mr. Lang said.

Action on Free School 'Violation of Policy'

The provincial department of education has violated its own policy in withdrawing accreditation from Campbell River Senior Secondary, Joe Harrison, president of the Campbell River District Teachers' Association, charged in a circular distributed to members.

Meanwhile, in other developments, an overflow crowd of more than 600 person, including teachers, students and parents, jammed Cedar Elementary gymnasium in Campbell River Thursday night and voiced overwhelming support for Principal John Young in his battle to regain accreditation for the school.

And today Education Minister Donald Brothers said in Victoria that the school lost its accrediation because Young's teaching methods lowered education standards. "It doesn't help education if it (the accreditation issue) becomes a matter of debate in the community," he said.

POLICY ENCLOSED

In his circular Harrison enclosed the department's policy section on accreditation which states that as a first step "accrediation is renewed for one year but the district superintendent is informed in the comments that some marked improvement will be expected in the item concerned."

If there is no improvement by the following year, "a further renewal of one year is given, but the principal is notified directly that accreditation beyond that year will depend specifically upon improvement."

The policy statement also stresses that this procedure "ensures that accredited schools maintain suitable standards without penalizing them because some aspect drops below the desirable level for a single year."

FIRST WARNING

In photostat copies of letters enclosed with the circular, it is shown that principal J. A. Young was given his first warning on accrediation on May 4 from J. R. Meredith, superintendent of instructional services, and was advised on Sept. 24 that accreditation was withdrawn.

The first warning stated that the accreditation committee "wishes to advise you that this school will retain its accreditation status for the school year 1970-71 only and that continuation of accreditation will be dependent upon improvement in standards of achievement."

Young wrote back asking for an explanation "in specific terms of what is meant by '. . . improvement in standards of achievements'."

ANALYSIS

Meredith replied: "An analysis of standards of all accredited schools is now being made. As a matter of policy, information is provided to the district superintendent for use at his discretion in discussions with school principals and their school staffs."

Young then queiried this reply: "It seems reasonable to request that I be informed very precisely about what the standards are, and what specific improvements have to be made. It will be impossible for me to undertake any corrective measures if I am not informed about what is allegedly deficient."

Meredith answered: "As I informed you earlier, specific information will be provided by the department of education through the district superintendent."

Meredith was not heard from until four months later when he advised that the school had lost its accrediation, which means that all

Machine-Gunners Kill 2 Belfast Police

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Machine-gunners in a speeding car shot two policemen to death in Belfast's Roman Catholic Ardoyne area today, the army said.

The policemen were in a parked patrol cruiser near the Ardroyne fire station when another car, machine-guns poked through its windows, roared past and raked the police vehicle with bullets.

The fusillade killed one policeman instantly. The other died soon afterward, an army spokesman said.

The fatalities raised the death toll in Northern Ireland this year to 90, including five policemen and 25 British soldiers.

Today's attack followed widespread violence Thursday in which the army said troops shot three gunmen in Belfast Catholic areas and fought a two-hour skirmish along the Irish Republic border with what one officer estimated were up to 40 gunmen. An estimated 450 rounds were fired. One soldier suffered leg wounds.

'Nations Exploiting Developing Areas'

Times News Services

VATICAN — The North Atlantic nations are exploiting developing countries economically, culturally and politically, the Roman Catholic synod of bishops was told Thursday.

A paper, read by Archbishop Teopisto Albertoy Valderrama of the Philippines says that:

—All racial and ideological discrimination must be eliminated so the poor can progress and become more productive.

—Aid given by wealthy nations to poor ones should be considered a responsibility and not just "charity."

—"Only a small part of mankind benefits from the cultural riches of the world."

—"World trade in unregulated free markets is the main source of oppression in the world."

The paper goes on to suggest that the church's administration of its property sometimes led to "an accumulation of wealth that causes identification of the church with the rich and powerful," while reducing her credibility when she does speak out against injustice and to promote justice."

Secret Talks Held on B.C.'s North

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of the United States and British Columbia governments met in August in secret to discuss development of northern B.C., the Sun says.

Adolph W. Schmidt, American ambassador to Canada, and Milton Rewinkel, U.S. Consul in Vancouver, met with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at Prince Rupert on the north coast and were taken on a tour of the north, the newspaper says.

Premier Bennett said Thursday he knows nothing about the meeting, but a spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Ottawa confirmed that Schmidt had come out to B.C. late in August for the four-day meeting with Loffmark.

The Sun says there was discussion of increasing co-operation between Canada and the U.S. to allow for transportation of resources and possibly power across the Alaska panhandle from land-locked northern B.C.

Also talked about was the hydroelectric potential of the Stikiseiskut River system in northern B.C.

A visit to the Aluminum Co. of Canada's refinery at Kitimat was included, along with inspection of copper-rich and timber-producing regions north of Prince Rupert.

CANADA'S FATE

A Lap Backward In the Air Race

If you think I'm going to give up on the subject of Concorde just because I see you unsuccessfully smothering your tiny yawns you badly underestimate my manic tenacity.

I happen to believe, you see, that Canada, a nation at the geographical crossroads of the world's flyways, is in danger of falling 10 years or more behind in The Aviation Age now poised at the edge of its supersonic break-through. I happen to believe that if the top brass of our two national airlines don't bestir themselves off their broad behinds there'll simply be no catching up. Yawn if you will, but that's going to be a mighty big consideration in this nation's future.

I have on my desk this morning a compilation of reports by some of the world's foremost aviation writers and experts who have been aboard recent test flights of the Anglo-French faster-than-sound commercial transport which already, in its first Atlantic crossing to South America, has shown us a glimpse of aviation's future.

They are unreserved paens of praise for a magnificent flying machine that will answer a purely commercial demand and, perhaps more importantly, as the late Grant McConachie and other great pioneers of Canadian flight saw the benefit of raw speed, will cinch closer together a divided world.

scott

Wrote William Rademaekers, of Time magazine: "I asked myself: As a paying passenger, would I want to fly in an SST, even at the expected premium of 30 per cent above regular economy class? The answer was yes."

Wrote Wayne W. Parrish, the distinguished aviation editor, with an aside referring to the United States' cancellation of their SST program: "Conclusion: Passengers will love SST. It will be 'the way to go' on long-distance flights. All of the rot and the bunk and the lies and the distortions that advocates of Weak America have shoved out about SST will one day be forgotten as more and more people are exposed to supersonic flights."

Wrote John L. Hess, of the New York Times: "In that dawn of jet transportation, the new airliner seemed unbelievably quiet, free of vibration and fast. Newsmen who took Concorde's recent flight to Dakar, Senegal, on the other hand, returned in two-and-a-half hours and said that nobody would ever want to fly the same distance subsonically again."

My original quarrel with the Canadian airlines was directed entirely toward CP Air. It seemed to me, then and now, inconceivable that a global airline with such long-distance, over-water routes could be so lacking in imagination and faith that they would not even get on Concorde's waiting list though the makers of the airplane had offered them a deposit-back guarantee if the plane did not live up to their expectations.

Since then the chicken-heartedness has extended to Air Canada and its chief executive officer, Yves Pratte. I strongly suspect that Pratte has been influenced by some of the more fanatic of the self-styled "ecologists" who, totally without foundation, are prattling about pollution in the upper atmosphere where Concorde will so serenely fly.

As editor Parrish rightly puts it, an awful lot of rot, bunk, lies and distortions have intruded on this bold new venture into future flight.

If, as the Montreal Gazette recently suggested, Air Canada cancels its high-priority reserve positions for four of the first production models of Concorde then we'll have slipped right back into the horse-and-buggy era of air transport and can expect a whipping from dozens of airlines that compete with us on trans-ocean routes.

Whatever Pratte's motivations may be he has said some very strange things as the top man of an airline that has cause to know, more than most, the fierceness of competition.

He has said, for instance, that supersonic flight is "directed to a tiny fraction of the population." That's nonsense, directly at odds with his own airline's repeated boasts that business and tourism have discovered that the whole world can be our back-yard in the day of the jet.

The clear record of air travel is that customers will go the fastest way. The gap between supersonic and subsonic jet is just as enormous as the gap between the jet and the propeller-driven airliner. It's my hunch that the day will come, no more than a generation away, when the SST will, in fact, monopolize every long-distance route.

Pratte has said, as well, that "a good part of the energy, talent and money expended on the development of supersonic aircraft might have been better spent . . . on research and development into the means of transporting passengers efficiently over short distances."

Maybe so, but that's simply confusing the issue. Beyond a $400,000 returnable down payment, Air Canada has had no direct participation in the development of Concorde. It has not prevented Air Canada in the slightest from offering encouragement or backing in a parallel development of short-haul aircraft. He surely knows that the airlines of the future will have mixed fleets. Why, then, knock the historic collaboration between Britain and France, a collaboration in which we should be participants rather than niggling critics?

No one, not even the makers of the airplane, pretend that the technological and economic problems have all been solved, that the brilliant test performances to date are all that matter. Concorde still has a long way to fly before it can enter into service. Najeeb Halaby, the president of Pan-American (whose test engineers and pilots are closely involved with the development) has said, cautiously, "We're waiting, we want to be shown."

But that's a far cry from the outright rejection by CP Air and the pessimism of Air Canada. If and when they are left at the gate I hope I'm around to say, "I told you so."

Storytellers For Canada

An unforgettable journey through the history of Canada is offered by the national dance troupe Les Feux Follets, who arrived today for an afternoon performance at Vic High and an 8:30 p.m. show at McPherson Playhouse.

The internationally acclaimed performers have travelled around the world and starred at both Expo '67 and Expo '70.

Originally a Quebec group, Feux Follets has become a national company which includes dancers from across the country, including Dan Costain, 22, of 1320 Queensbury Ave., Victoria (standing fourth from left). He's been with the group two years.

Bennett Wants Showdown With Doctors—Wallace

WALLACE
. . . feud suits Bennett

Premier Bennett is seeking a confrontation with the doctors of British Columbia by emphasizing the shortcomings of a minority in the profession, MLA Scott Wallace said today.

A fued with physicians suits the premier as a major issue in the next election, said the Oak Bay physician who resigned the Social Credit party this summer and now sits as an independent.

He was comenting on release of a report Thursday by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service which is critical of some doctors' utilization of hospital beds.

The report is based on a five-month study by an unidentified doctor two years ago in a large but unidentified hospital in B.C.

Wallace said there is no doubt the survey refers to Royal Jubilee Hospital and is the work undertaken by Dr. David Longridge, a former general practitioner in Victoria now working for BCHIS.

The surveyor examined 805 cases over the five months and concluded that while there was no waste of hospital beds in four cases out of five:

- There was avoidable delay in nearly 19 per cent of cases.
- Doctors were responsible for the delay in 70 per cent of these cases.
- Lack of suitable facilities to transfer patients to accounted for 20 per cent of the delays and hospital service factors produced the other 10 per cent.

The report says that the 152 cases where there was avoidable delay meant patients lingered in hospital a total of 793 extra days. (It costs about $60 a day to keep a patient in an acute care hospital). The report proposes a number of ways closer watch and tighter control of bed utlization could be achieved.

Reaction of other doctors was caustic.

"If such a study was done in 1969, why does it take until October of 1971 to bring it to the attention of the public. It does seem odd," said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee.

Dr. Charles Ballam, medical director at the hospital, said conclusions that one patient in five remained too long in hospital represent the subject, and admittedly sometimes arbitrary, opinion of one man — who never saw any of the patients.

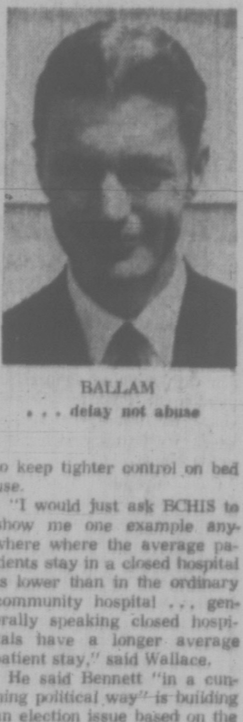
There are a variety of psychological factors to be weighed in deciding whether to discharge a patient, said Dr. Gordon Lott, president of the Victoria Medical Society. And they don't appear on any chart.

"For a doctor to say there is not from time to time avoidable delays would be incorrect," said Ballam. "But to say delays are always an abuse is something else."

Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg, executive director at St. Joseph's Hospital, said the daily check conducted by doctors at the hospital has tightened up bed utilization as much as possible.

He estimated there were 4,000 patient-days at St. Joseph's Hospital last year (at $59.20 a day) directly attributable to not having any place to transfer patients who no longer needed that level of care.

The BCHIS report suggested one course of action would be to close hospitals to private practitioners. Salaried hospital doctors might be able to keep tighter control on bed use.



BALLAM
. . . delay not abuse

"I would just ask BCHIS to show me one example anywhere where the average patients stay in a closed hospital is lower than in the ordinary community hospital . . . generally speaking closed hospitals have a longer average patient stay," said Wallace.

He said Bennett "in a cunning political way" is building an election issue based on the shortcomings of a minority in the medcal profession.

Compulsory Dues Plan Urged for Gov't Staff

The B.C. Government Employees' Union agreed today that every civil servant should pay dues whether or not they belong to the union.

Delegates to the union's convention in the Empress said benefits "fought for and gained by the union" are shared by members and non-members.

They agreed that "strong representations" should be made to the provincial government to implement the Rand formula, which requires all benefiting employees to pay dues to the union.

FREELOADERS

On the central issue of bargaining rights, delegates passed amid applause a restatemen of the BCGEU's continuing efforts to win these rights.

Executive member Ed Honcharuk said it is time that non-union government employees begin paying dues. "I find parasitic, freeloading attitudes offensive," he said.

ALL EXCEPT B.C.

The executive resolution said some form of collective bargaining is enjoyed by employees at all government levels in Canada except provincial employees in B.C.

Bargaining rights should include exclusive recognition of the BCGEU as sole bargaining agent, written contract and dispute settlement giving a bargaining unit the option of binding arbitration or conciliation with strike right.

The executive was instructed to submit a brief on the issue to the government, Civil Service Commission and MLAs.

A move by the highways council that the BCGEU press for "necessary drastic action" (strike) from Dec. 15 to "gain satisfaction" on bargaining rights and all negotiable issues was referred back to the resolutions committee.

Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which represents federal civil servants, told delegates he hopes the B.C. government will pass collective bargaining legislation.

FASTEST-GROWING

He also urged encouragement for union organizing of white-collar workers generally, saying only 17 per cent of this sector outside government service belonged to unions "yet this is the fastest-growing part of the work force."

Beach Water Depolluted

Good news for anti-pollutionists. In one corner of Greater Victoria a victory has been won.

Signs marking two Esquimalt beaches as polluted came down in a brief ceremony this afternoon. Tests of water samples show the beaches are now safe for bathing.

They are at Saxe Point and Fleming Park and have been given a new lease on life because a sewer outfall near them has been replaced.

The new $7,500,000 Macaulay Point trunk sewer system includes an outfall pipe which carries sewage 6,100 feet into Juan de Fuca Strait before discharging it at a depth of 200 feet.

Taking part in today's ceremony were Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Regional Board which organized the sewer project; Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer for the metro health board.

SANDRINGHAM SUPPORT ORGANIZED

Delegates to the B.C. Government Employees Union convention agreed today to demonstrate their support for the year-long Sandringham hospital strike. (See also Page 35.)

A committee was considering ways of doing this. One of the actions being contemplated was having all 152 delegates join the picket line Saturday.

The convention was to consider the form of the demonstration after one delegate urged a representative from each branch picket the hospital and that a collection be taken up.

arthur mayse

SOMETIMES IN OCTOBER comes a day that is the very essence of autumn. Its early hours may be cool or even chilly, but by 10 a.m. or thereabouts, the air is almost summer-warm. The wind's asleep, and the broad-leaved maples stand glorious in brown and gold.

The thing about a bonus day of that sort is that it may not be repeated in a season too short at best. I regard it as a sending, to be spent outdoors if possible, and in a manner to provide memories.

Up-Island, last Saturday began with dank fog. But the sun burned through while the forenoon was still young, and when we put our car into the river road, the maples were glowing against their backdrop of somber evergreen.

Where the road peters out at the edge of the tidelands, we unloaded the gear required for a day of the kind we planned. Hip boots. Fly rods. A rucksack into which we'd be stuffing our jackets before the sun climbed much higher.

A big tide had flooded into the river estuary. We trudged upstream by a fishermen's trail to a riffle that might be shallow enough for wading.

It was, though barely. On the other side, the woods are denser and the trail is narrower. Deer use it in the hours when intrusive mankind isn't about, and once we saw a bear emerge from it to swim a deep, smooth-flowing reach.

No bears on this golden day, or deer, either. Just the quiet woods, and beyond them a curve of high-tide beach packed with the drift-log jumble that has crowded it since last winter's gales.

In November, on a flood tide with a southeaster pounding in, that lee shore will be no place for man or beast. But on this calm, bright morning, it was one of earth's untroubled heavens.

Loons, gulls and diving ducks found good inshore feeding. We loafed along the beach with eyes peeled for other feasters. But there was neither swirl nor splash, and we began to wonder whether the sea-run cutthroat trout that we hoped to find were cruising in other waters.

It happens that way often enough. Still, it was no day for feverish endeavor. We laid our rods across a couple of logs, settled our backs against another, and devoted ourselves to the enjoyment of sunshine and utter laziness.

The seabirds reproved us with their industry. Presently something splashed close in to the shoreline.

"Bird," I said, not bothering to open my eyes.

"Trout," Win said, "and I'm hungry. If you caught it, we could have it for lunch."

Something swirled where no bird had dived. And though sea-runs can't be caught to order, it was worth a try.

"Okay," I said, "lunch coming up."

Vainglorious words, and they should have guaranteed failure. But the water humped behind my fly at the first cast, and before the Teal-and-Silver had travelled six feet, the bow-wave changed to an impressive boil.

Minutes later, the biggest cutthroat of our season lay shining on the pebbles. It wasn't the four-pounder of my dreams, but it was amply large for our purposes.

A wild crab-apple bush supplied a green toasting stick, and a couple of wiry twigs that would do for skewers.

To cap our luck, Win groped in the bottom of the rucksack and produced three drive-in packets of salt and one of pepper. Then she brought out two little cans of fruit juice.

We grilled our trout to a becoming shade of brown on both sides, found a sea-scoured log end for a table, and ate in good appetite.

I don't ask or expect many days like that. If any October obliges by sending one and no more, I'm properly grateful.

Next day, the clouds moved in. The throat-tickle brought from town fulfilled its warning by developing stage by stage into a pestiferous cold.

But that was a day divorced from the troubled world, and between sneezes, I've found it a good one to remember.

Ambulancemen Assist Birth

Ambulance assistant Larry Tuttle and driver Ed Pfeifle helped bring parental joy to Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of 1170 Fort Street early this morning.

The Garden City ambulancemen arrived moments after the Scotts' first baby, premature by two months and weighing three pounds two ounces, was born.

Soon after, the men brought the second of the twin boys, weighing two pounds 13 ounces, into the world.

Gains Tax to Help The Trust Business

MONTREAL (CP)—Trust companies are gearing their operations to provide a record of all stock transactions and other information that will be required when the proposed capital gains tax becomes effective.

Until now, all that was required of investors when filing income tax returns was a year-end statement showing the amount of income arising from investments.

When the new capital gains tax goes into effect, expected Jan. 1, investors will have to show in their income tax return a record of each stock transaction throughout the year.

Under the proposed legislation, 50 per cent of the profit from the sale of shares would be taxable up to about 50 per cent. This means that an investor who made a profit of $100 on the sale of shares would have to pay tax on $50—or about $25.

A record will have to be kept on each stock transaction, showing the amount of profit or loss on that particular transaction, and the amount of tax to be paid at the end of the year will be determined by net profit.

NEW SERVICE

This is where the services of trust companies will come in, says J. K. (Ken) Allison, assistant vice-president of the Montreal Trust Co.

"Our role is going to be primarily in the keeping of records and the furnishing of tax statements which will allow the owner of a portfolio of securities to file proper tax returns.

"Everyone who owns securities now will be expected to keep records which he didn't have to keep before."

Take, for example, a case of someone with shares in Montreal Trust. When the person sells the shares, the company's records will show he owned the shares and that they were transferred out of his name.

But they don't show whether the shares were sold or given away, and they certainly don't show whether the shareholder made a profit.

INSTALLED COMPUTERS

Mr. Allison said that trust companies and banks for years have provided a safe custody service which involved the collection of revenue and the keeping of detailed files.

Large trust companies, because of the volume being handled, have gone heavily into computer operations, he said. While the capital gains records could be kept by hand, this could become an expensive proposition.

"What we are doing is modifying our operations to put us in a position to keep records and produce capital gains statements with our sophisticated equipment."

Mr. Allison said initially there will be a big cost when the new system goes into operation but once it is running smoothly it would be practically automatic.

He did not foresee an unreasonably high cost to the investor for the keeping of the records because of the competitive nature of the business.

"We will be providing a service to people who did not have to come to us until now. Investors who didn't have to keep a record of stock transactions, interest and dividends will now have to come to us. This is where we see a source of new business."

Dollar Surplus Declines

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan had a surplus of $260 million worth of U.S. dollars in her balance of payments for September, the finance ministry said today.

This was a large decline from a record surplus of $3.3 billion in August, which the ministry said was an abnormal phenomenon caused by a heavy increase in advance payments to exporters in view of international monetary uncertainties and the protracted U.S. dockers strike which slashed imports.

Japan's balance-of-payments surplus in September, 1970, was $393 million.

Meanwhile, the floating yen today soared to and closed at a new high level of 329.60 to the U.S. dollar—9.22 per cent above its old parity of 360.

The Bank of Japan was believed to be buying dollars at that point to prevent the yen from rising further on the Tokyo foreign exchange market.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG C(p) — Trading continued fairly active with prices generally higher at the close of the grain exchange today.

Rapeseed followed the Chicago soybean market as it developed a trend upwards on commission house and crusher buying and some exporter interest.

Exporters were active in flax, offsetting some hedge offerings. Oats, barley and rye had light local and commercial trade with some intermonth spreading.

Thursday's volume of trade was 382,000 bushels of rye, 1,549,000 of flaw and 3,397,000 of rapeseed.

Tanker Fleet Proposed

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — This old seaport is to be the headquarters of a company that will operate a worldwide fleet of Canadian-flag supertankers, Premier Joseph Smallwood announced today.

Mr. Smallwood told a news conference that Newfoundland Oil Tankers Corp. is being established here by Panmaritime Ltd., an international organization based in Zurich, Switzerland.

Josehua Lahav, inspector general for Maritime Fruit Carriers, an Israeli company owned by Panmaritime, said the new corporation will operate four to six tankers of 225,000 tons each.

The first tanker, costing $35 million, is about to be built, said Mr. Lahav, a former naval architect with the Israeli navy.

Mr. Smallwood said he had "good reason to believe and know" some of the tankers would be built at a shipyard in Marystown, on Newfoundland's south coast Burin Peninsula.

The premier announced in August the four-year-old yard in Marystown would be expanded at a cost of more than $50 million and would be bought "over a period of years" by Marystown Shipping Enterprises Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Panmaritime.

Mr. Smallwood, in the midst of a campaign for the Oct. 28 provincial election, said he did not want the announcement linked with politics.

VSE President 'By Year's End'

VANCOUVER (CP) — G. H. Stevenson, chairman of the board and acting president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Thursday the VSE hopes to appoint a new president by year's end or shortly thereafter.

He said applications for the position are being received.

Action on Free School 'Violation of Policy'

The provincial department of education has violated its own policy in withdrawing accreditation from Campbell River Senior Secondary, Joe Harrison, president of the Campbell River District Teachers' Association, charged in a circular distributed to members.

Meanwhile, in other developments, an overflow crowd of more than 600 person, including teachers, students and parents, jammed Cedar Elementary gymnasium in Campbell River Thursday night and voiced overwhelming support for Principal John Young in his battle to regain accreditation for the school.

And today Education Minister Donald Brothers said in Victoria that the school lost its accrediation because Young's teaching methods lowered education standards.

"It doesn't help education if it (the accreditation issue) becomes a matter of debate in the community," he said.

POLICY ENCLOSED

In his circular Harrison enclosed the department's policy section on accreditation which states that as a first step "accreditation is renewed for one year but the district superintendent is informed in the comments that some marked improvement will be expected in the item concerned."

If there is no improvement by the following year, "a further renewal of one year is given, but the principal is notified directly that accreditation beyond that year will depend specifically upon improvement."

The policy statement also stresses that this procedure "ensures that accredited schools maintain suitable standards without penalizing them because some aspect drops below the desirable level for a single year."

FIRST WARNING

In photostat copies of letters enclosed with the circular, it is shown that principal J. A. Young was given his first warning on accreditation on May 4 from J. R. Meredith, superintendent of instructional services, and was advised on Sept. 24 that accreditation was withdrawn.

The first warning stated that the accreditation committee "wishes to advise you that this school will retain its accreditation status for the school year 1970-71 only and that continuation of accreditation will be dependent upon improvement in standards of achievement."

Young wrote back asking for an explanation "in specific terms of what is meant by '... improvement in standards of achievements'."

ANALYSIS

Meredith replied: "An analysis of standards of all accredited schools is now being made. As a matter of policy, information is provided to the district superintendent for use at his discretion in discussions with school principals and their school staffs."

Young then queried this reply: "It seems reasonable to request that I be informed very precisely about what the standards are, and what specific improvements have to be made. It will be impossible for me to undertake any corrective measures if I am not informed about what is allegedly deficient."

Meredith answered: "As I informed you earlier, specific information will be provided by the department of education through the district superintendent."

Meredith was not heard from until four months later when he advised that the school had lost its accreditation, which means that all

Machine-Gunners Kill 2 Belfast Police

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Machine-gunners in a speeding car shot two policemen to death in Belfast's Roman Catholic Ardoyne area today, the army said.

The policemen were in a parked patrol cruiser near the Ardroyne fire station when another car, machine-guns poked through its windows, roared past and raked the police vehicle with bullets.

The fusillade killed one policeman instantly. The other died soon afterward, an army spokesman said.

The fatalities raised the death toll in Northern Ireland this year to 90, including five policemen and 25 British soldiers.

Today's attack followed widespread violence Thursday in which the army said troops shot three gunmen in Belfast Catholic areas and fought a two-hour skirmish along the Irish Republic border with what one officer estimated were up to 40 gunmen. An estimated 450 rounds were fired. One soldier suffered leg wounds.

Cities Favor Program

Times News Services

Municipal leaders today are enthusiastic about the new economic incentives offered by Ottawa but financial officials expressed fears the $1 billion program may spur inflation.

And Premier Bennett said he will turn B.C's share of the $100 million over to the municipalities for job-creating projects.

He said the program is a good idea and noted that B.C. has advocated a renewed winter works program for several months.

Bennett would not say whether the $1 billion program would show a reduction in B.C.'s unemployment rate by next spring. He also refused to say whether he thought the planned $1 billion federal budget deficit would lead to a new round of inflation.

AMAZED

He said he was amazed that Finance Minister Benson and Prime Minister Trudeau suggested that Canadians should thank United States President Nixon's economic moves for leading to the new government plans.

Mayor Courtney Haddock has greeted the announcement with enthusiasm, but warned it could lead to falsely expanded municipal work forces.

Haddock said the proposals were "interesting," provided they don't require municipalities to put on extra staff to handle the workload.

"If there's money in it for Victoria, we'll go for it," the mayor said. "But we must be careful not to put on extra permanent staff which eventually would become the city's responsibility."

MILD MEDICINE

He referred to a $50 million grant to municipalities to finance labor incentive programs.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the programs were "mild medicine when major surgery is indicated," but said the municipality would take full advantage of them.

Mayor Art Young of Esquimalt said the $50 million grant, coupled with another $50 million to community organizations to formulate other projects, "would sure be a shot in the arm."

W. V. Scully, chairman of the Steel Co. of Canada, said:

"How are they going to pay for it? I suppose it will mean printing money."

However, he said, "something had to be done to tide us over the winter."

INFLATIONARY

Jack Mackenzie, vice-president of Canada Permanent Trust Co., said he believes "a $1 billion deficit has to be wildly inflationary. ..."

"I think interest rates will go up in the next 12 months and the government will have to print money to expand credit."

Forrest Rogers, economic adviser to the Bank of Nova Scotia, said in Vancouver:

"The program will spur the economy to a degree, but the extent will depend on the success the U.S. has in coping

WHAT TAX CUT IS WORTH

OTTAWA (CP) — The new three-per-cent reduction in federal income taxes announced Thursday will mean a saving of $15 for each $1,000 that a taxpayer has been paying to the federal government this year, a finance department source said today.

But precisely how the reduction affects taxpayers with various amounts of incomes and deductions for supporting a wife and children has not yet been worked out by the finance department.

The tax reduction is retroactive to July 1 and will continue, Benson said, until the end of next year.

Since it applies only to half of the current calendar year, the tax reduction amounts to 1.5 per cent of federal taxes payable for 1971.

The reduction applies only to federal income taxes. Tax tables put out previously by the finance department include both federal and provincial taxes, the latter at the rate of 28 per cent of basic federal tax.

Think-Up Work Centre of Plan

OTTAWA CP — Make-your-own-work projects are to be a $100-million feature of the federal government's winter campaign against unemployment.

Taking the lead from the $24.6 million Opportunities for Youth program of last summer, Finance Minister E. J. Benson announced Thursday the money will be available for projects submitted by municipalities, community organizations and private groups.

As with Opportunities for Youth, the new local initiatives program will be "weighted in favor of those regions and sub-regions where unemployment is most serious."

Also, as with the youth program, the local initiatives are not to be profit oriented and are to serve the best possible good of the communities involved.

Just how much the jobs to be generated will pay has yet to be established. The rules under which projects will be selected are to be announced within the next few days.

Perhaps a key difference between the two programs is that the original was introduced by Secretary of State Gerald Pelletier, whereas the local-initiatives program is to be administered by Manpower Minister Otto Lang.

Mr. Pelletier had a youthful corps of administrators, many with no experience in the public service, to screen and approve a rush of applications for funds. Its decisions were open to widespread criticism, but many of the Opportunity for Youth projects won community approval.

Mr. Lang indicated in an interview after Mr. Benson's speech that the new program will be more concerned with jobs for unskilled workers.

"There won't be as many esoteric projects as there were in Opportunities for Youth," he said.

He suggested that pollution clean-ups and urban rehabilitation projects would likely be typical of the initiatives to be approved under the program.

Half of the money available through the program is to go to municipalities after consultation with provincial authorities. The balance is reserved to finance projects submitted by local groups.

Proposals are to be made to regional manpower offices before Jan. 31, 1972, and processing of applications will begin almost immediately Mr. Lang said.

'Nations Exploiting Developing Areas'

Times News Services

VATICAN — The North Atlantic nations are exploiting developing countries economically, culturally and politically, the Roman Catholic synod of bishops was told Thursday.

A paper, read by Archbishop Teopisto Albertoy Valderrama of the Philippines says that:

—All racial and ideological discrimination must be eliminated so the poor can progress and become more productive.

—Aid given by wealthy nations to poor ones should be considered a responsibility and not just "charity."

—"Only a small part of mankind benefits from the cultural riches of the world."

More to Come Says Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — A $1 billion shot in the arm for the laggard economy, including income tax cuts, was delivered by the federal government Thursday night.

Prime Minister Trudeau followed up the announcement today by stating at a press conference that further policies would be introduced before a general election is called — probably in 1973.

Job-Making Projects

The program of temporary individual and corporate tax reductions, plus financial aid to provinces and municipalities for job-making projects, was outlined by Finance Minister E. J. Benson during a special Commons debate called to consider the slack state of economic activity.

The measures came after a sharp increase in the unemployment trend and amid fears that U.S. trade restrictions will cause more damage.

"The economy will be booming by the end of 1972," Mr. Benson told reporters later. But, he added: "This is not an election budget."

The prime minister described the planned deficit of $1 billion in the current fiscal year as "about right."

If more spending was needed, the government would bring in more budgetary measures.

Action on Inflation, Too

And if inflation became severe, the government would "have to act on that side."

Trudeau said he hoped there would have been some indication from the U.S. that its trade restrictions would be more temporary than they appear. Had this been the case, Thursday's "budget" would have been easier.

He said Canada still had a wide variety of choices to follow in its trade relations with the U.S., but he still felt it would be 100 times better if any type of hostility could be avoided. Recalling that in 1911 an election campaign was won on the slogan of "not truck or trade with the Yankees," Trudeau said "it's not a course I would like to follow."

When American intentions become more clear, Canada could decide on, for example, specific ways of expanding trade with the U.S., or, if necessary, reorienting trading patterns to other countries.

He said he would be discussing Canada-U.S. trade with Russian Premier Kosygin when he visits Canada next week.

$160 Million in Loans

"Obviously he'll be interested in knowing our position."

The spending program provides a three-per-cent reduction on individual federal income tax and a drop of seven per cent in corporate tax, both retroactive to July 1 and due to run to the end of next year.

The tax cuts would be in addition to those announced in June — removal of the three-per-cent surtax for individuals and corporations imposed in 1968.

Thursday's proposals include $160 million in loans to provinces and municipalities for projects to help employment, $100 million in grants to municipalities and community organizations for the same purpose, $35 million to improve manpower training and an $80 million federal works program.

There will be a speed-up of $113 million in loans from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and $10 million in loans for construction of multi-purpose exhibition buildings.

The total cost of the package will be $1,070 million, including the loss in tax revenue.

Highest Since 1946

Mr. Benson estimated the budget deficit for the financial year ending next March 31 will be $1 billion, the difference between spending of $14.58 billion and revenue of $13.58 billion. That is up from the deficit of $750 million estimated in the June 18 budget for this year.

The new figure would be the biggest deficit since 1945-46, when revenues were more than $2 billion below spending, reflecting costs of the Second World War.

Opposition spokesmen who had called repeatedly for special measures to stimulate the economy, called the program too late and too little.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the economic stimulants were too tardy to have enough effect on winter employment. The country had no confidence in the finance minister, and he should resign.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis charged the government with doing more for corporations than for the ordinary people. He also said the measures were too late.

Caouette Castigates

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, castigating economists and wasteful bureaucrats for getting the economy in a mess, called for a guaranteed annual income and discounts on Canadian-made products.

Mr. Benson, in his 23-minute budget-like statement of 2,000 words, did not concede there is any essential fault in the economy.

To opposition hoots of derision he concluded his speech with:

"The economy is strong and growing. The measures I have proposed today are designed to keep it that way."

He urged higher consumer spending as an antidote to the U.S. surtax on imported goods, a barrier to Canadian exports.

"Spending by individuals makes up two-thirds of national income and is the base on which the whole economy rests," he said.

Mr. Benson said the federal government "will be consulting the provinces forthwith on the early implementation of the program."

A federal-provincial conference was scheduled for Dec. 6-8 but the federal government, under pressure, has been trying to arrange an earlier date amid conflicting provincial requirements.

The programs to spur employment contain incentives for winter starts on construction projects. Local and provincial governments will get back $3 for every $4 of on-site labor costs incurred up to May 31, 1972.

Secret Talks Held on B.C.'s North

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of the United States and British Columbia governments met in August in secret to discuss development of northern B.C., the Sun says.

Adolph W. Schmidt, American ambassador to Canada, and Milton Rewinkle, U.S. consul in Vancouver, met Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at Prince Rupert on the north coast and were taken on a tour of the north, the newspaper says.

Premier Bennett said Thursday he knows nothing about the meeting, but a spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Ottawa confirmed that Schmidt had come out to B.C. late in August for the four-day meeting with Loffmark.

The Sun says there was discussion of increasing co-operation between Canada and the U.S. to allow for transportation of resources and possibly power across the Alaska panhandle from land-locked northern B.C.

Also talked about was the hydroelectric potential of the Stikiseiskut River system in northern B.C.

A visit to the Aluminum Co. of Canada's refinery at Kitimat was included, along with inspection of copper-rich and timber-producing regions north of Prince Rupert.

New Crossbreed Process To Fatten U.S. Salmon

For years U.S. sport fishermen have envied the fat Canadian chinook salmon which runs up Rivers Inlet on the mainland and Gold River and Burman River on northern Vancouver Island.

Their own American chinook, the Puget Sound salmon, average only 19 pounds compared to as high as 46 pounds for the Canadian fish.

Now Canadian fisheries and Washington Fisheries experts are co-operating to produce a larger American fish by cross-breeding the Pudget Sound variety with the Rivers Inlet chinook.

300,000 EGGS

Last year milt from Rivers Inlet salmon was used to fertilize more than 300,000 eggs at the Washington fisheries department's Hoodsport hatchery on Hood canal and 260,000 fingerlings marked and released in June are due back for spawning in 1974.

The success of the experiment will be known then.

Dave Schultz, a federal biologist, is at Rivers Inlet trying to collect more milt to fertilize an additional million eggs in Washington hatcheries.

Robert McMynn, director of the provincial commercial fisheries branch, said U.S. experts are also involved in another experiment — to produce an "all American" salmon which won't stray into Canadian waters.

BIG PROBLEM

"The problem of preventing U.S. fishermen intercepting salmon destined for British Columbia rivers, and vice-versa, is a big one," he said.

U.S. Fishermen claim Canadian fishermen intercept more of their fish (salmon to spawn in American Rivers) than they do ours," he added. "It's a pretty difficult thing to prove one way or the other."

He said the Washington research program being conducted by biologist Don Wilson will attempt to produce a fish which will stay in American waters.

McMynn is heavily involved in talks between Canadian and American fisheries on the question of salmon interception.

"We are trying to keep to a minimum the catching of one another's fisheries — to balance interceptions," he explained.

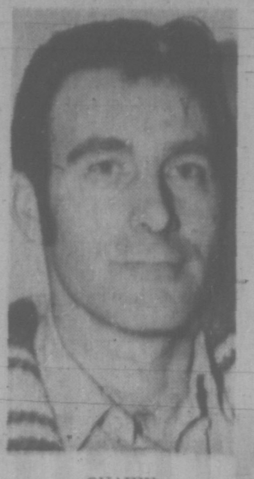
BAD WEATHER FOILS SALMON SPERM FLIGHT

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Winds up to 50 miles an hour and an 11-foot tide balked plans of fisheries biologists to try to expand the cross-breeding experiment.

The state fisheries department said Thursday weather conditions made it impossible for its amphibious patrol plane to pick up salmon sperm from Canadian waters and rush it to Washington hatcheries.

The plane was grounded in Vancouver, awaiting improved weather.



QUAIFE
. . . 'we're ready'

Duncan Fears Not Amchitka

DUNCAN — In the event of disaster on Vancouver Island — Duncan is prepared.

Jim Quaife, chairman of the Cowichan civil defence organization, said today the group has the facilities and trained volunteers to handle any emergency that may arise in the Cowichan Valley or act as an evacuation centre for nearby cities.

With their portable hospital and generator, Quaife said civil defence can set up a instant hospital and kitchen facilities.

He assured local residents Cowichan civil defence can handle the aftermath of an earthquake, either the natural variety or one caused by detonation of the proposed nuclear blast on Amchitka Island.

"I hope that Canadian and American pressure being brought to bear on Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon is successful in stopping the blast," Mayor Quaife said.

"I would like to see all nuclear testing banned."

Quaife said his civil defence section can't take any further precautions in preparation for the blast.

On that day, if an earthquake should occur, Quaife said residents should listen to their local radio station which will have automatically gone on to emergency broadcasting.

"They will keep the public informed on further procedures to take. If homes are damaged we will have volunteer parties available to carry out evacuation."

Quaife said emergency procedures are determined by the local civil defence co-ordinator, Ted Bolin, and his assistant, John Sanders.

"These men determine the severity of a disaster. If they know it to be major they are prepared to spring into action."

MINIBLAST MIRRORS AWARENESS

LAKE COWICHAN — High school students plan to set off a dynamite blast here Saturday to dramatize their concern for the proposed nuclear blast on Amchitka Island.

The demonstration, which has been approved by Mayor B. R. All, will begin at 12:30 p.m. when students and other members of the public leave the Lake Cowichan Secondary School to walk about a mile to the blast site, the village gravel pit.

Mayor All, Cowichan-Malahat SPEC president Kurt Horn, and MLA for the area Bob Strachan, will address the group.

U.S. Fisherman Nets Stiff Fine for His Catch

An American fisherman Thursday was fined $500 in court when he pleaded guilty to fishing in a restricted area of Canadian waters, contravening the Fisheries Act.

Ralph G. Perrigue, of Arlington, Wash., court was told, was apprehended 1½ miles inside Canadian waters Sept. 6 in Juan de Fuca Strait. The nets of the accused's boat were out.

Prosecutor R. B. Hutchison said Perrigue was sighted in the area about 11:40 p.m., a time of the day when even Canadian fishboats are barred.

Hutchison said the accused earlier had pleaded not guilty because there was some doubt whether his nets were snagged at the time.

In two other recent cases, the prosecutor noted, American fishermen were fined $500 each when they pleaded guilty in Sooke provincial court to contravening the Fisheries Act.

DUNCAN MAN JUMPS BAIL

DUNCAN — A 23-year-old Duncan man, who had been charged with conspiracy to traffic in drugs, has jumped $15,000 bail and police believe he has left Canada.

Ron Blanc failed to appear in the B.C. Supreme Court at Nanaimo Sept. 20 where he had elected to be tried by a judge and jury.

Following a Duncan Rotary Club dinner meeting, McGreer will attend the Cowichan-Malahat Liberal Association's annual meeting at 7 at Berry's Pancake House.

He will present life member certificates to George Braithwaite and George Smyth, who have been Liberals for a combined total of 100 years.

Court Denies Death Notice Declaration

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday denied an application by Donald Haupt to have his wife, Sheila, missing since 1969, declared legally dead.

Mrs. Haupt and her three-year-old daughter disappeared while living in Smithers with convicted murderer Dr. Glen Stewart. She was reported missing by her husband, who was then stationed with the Canadian forces in Cold Lake, Alta.

RCMP found a suitcase on the bank of the Bulkley River which they linked with Mrs. Haupt, but no other trace of her or her child was found.

Dr. Stewart was sentenced to life imprisonment in March, 1971, in the death of Gordon Kralt, a Bible camp caretaker in Bamfield.

Pippi Longstocking Comes to Canada

Who is Pippi Longstocking?

Why, surely Europe's most popular, best-loved child star, of course. Heroine of her own highly-acclaimed TV series in Sweden and other European countries. And now a regular feature of CBC Television's hour-long Saturday series for youngsters, Children's Cinema.

In all, 13 episodes of the Pippi series will be seen on the weekly hour-long series, telecast Saturdays at 1 p.m., throughout the fall and early winter months.

Little Pippi and her friends, Tommy and Annika, are forever searching for adventure . . . and trouble! They find it often, either in the robbers, Karlsson and Bloom, or the policemen, Kling and Klang. There are other friends, too, who help Pippi triumph over her enemies.

Children's Cinema, produced by CBC-TV's schools and youth department, also features a wide variety of live and animated features from Europe. A not-to-be-missed series, it is telecast (in color) Saturdays at 1 p.m., on the CBC Network.

FOUR-DAY WONDER is 9-year-old Clarence Willoughby, played by Pascal Bonniere, who has the habit of inventing things. Clarence shocks his family and city officials when he invents this gadget which makes objects disappear. He points it at whatever he wants removed and it is. The one-hour comedy is based on a science fiction story by R. A. Lafferty and is presented by CBC Oct. 17 at 9.

WEEK'S MOVIES

Friday

Behind Prison Walls (XX). On 13 at 5. Prison drama about a man who is sent to prison on the testimony of his son.

Master of the World (XXX). On 7 at 7. Jules Verne's classic tale of Robur, the inventor and his flying fortress starring Vincent Price in the title role.

The Scapegoat (XX). On 12 at 7:30. A psychological drama adapted by Gore Vidal from the Du Maurier bestseller about a man who is tricked into assuming the identity of his double. Alec Guinness and Bette Davis.

I Take This Oath (X). On 13 at 7:30. Routine crime drama.

Marriage: Year One (XX). On 8 at 8 and 5 at 8:30. A TV movie, filmed on location in Chicago about a clash of values that sets two young newlyweds apart. A fairly good cast includes Sally Fields, Robert Pratt, William Windom and Agnes Moorehead.

The Dirty Dozen (XXX). On 7 at 9:30. (Part 2). An explosive attack on a Nazi-occupied chateau highlights Part 2 of this Second World War drama featuring an all-star cast.

Cash McCall (XX). On 12 at 11. Boy wonder of modern finance has made, lost and remade several fortunes with James Garner in the title role, and Natalie Wood as his leading lovely.

Frankenstein Conquers the World (X). On 7 at 11:30. Japanese-made Sci-fi.

Marriage: Year One (XX). On 6 at Midnight. (See earlier this evening for details).

House of Strangers (XXX). On 2 at 12:50. Powerful, engrossing story of a tyrannical banker (Edward G. Robinson) and his complex family relationships. Susan Hayward and Richard Conte round out an exceptionally strong cast.

The Outrage (XXXX). On 4 at 1. Superb film taken from the classic Japanese movie "Rashomon" about the elusive nature of "truth" and how it changes in the eye of the beholder. Excellent direction and sensitive performances by Claire Bloom, Lawrence Harvey, Edward G. Robinson and Paul Newman make this one great TV fare.

Take One False Step (XX). On 12 at 1:05. Murder-mystery with William Powell and Shelley Winters.

Saturday

The Mole People (X). On 7 at 2. Sci-fi with John Agar.

Malaga (XX). On 11 at 2. About jewel thieves with Trevor Howard and Dorothy Dandridge.

These Thousand Hills (XX). On 5 at 4:30. The story of a young cowhand who strikes it rich in the old West. A fair cast includes Richard Egan, Don Murray and Lee Remick.

Nabonga (X). On 13 at 8. A routine drama-adventure about a thief, a plane crash in the jungle and a cargo of stolen jewels with Buster Crabbe.

In Broad Daylight (XXX). On 4 at 8:30. An excellent performance by Richard Boone is the main attraction in this TV-movie about a man who is trying to murder his wife. Suzanne Pleshette and Stella Stevens play the ladies in his life.

Captain Newman, M.D. (XXX). On 6 at 8:30. A mind healer (Gregory Peck) at work in an Army psychiatric ward during the Second World War with strong back-up performances by Tony Curtis and Bobby Darrin.

The Satan Bug (XX). On 2 at 9. A Sci-fi tale about a diabolical doctor bent on destroying mankind with virus germs. Richard Basehart, George Maharis and Anne Francis.

Duel at Diablo (XX). On 5 at 9. A tough and effective western about a battle between the plainsmen and the Apache Indians. A fine musical score and strong performances by James Garner and Sidney Poitier make this a fairly good drama — but not for the squeamish.

To Die in Paris (XX). On 8 at 9. A story of a French underground leader during the Second World War with Louis Jordan.

Around the World Under the Sea (XX). On 12 at 9. TV fans will enjoy seeing familiar faces (David McCallum, Shirley Eaton, Keenan Wynn and Lloyd Bridges) in this scientific sea saga.

Men of San Quentin (XX). On 13 at 9:45. A routine prison drama.

The Egyptian (XX). On 12 at 11:05. A lavish Biblical spectacle about a physician who falls prey to the charms of a temptress with Edmund Purdom and Jean Simmons.

The Comancheros (XXX). On 5 at 11:15. A big-scale western with an equally huge cast including John Wayne, Lee Marvin, Stuart Whitman and Ina Balin.

Man: Eater of Hydra (X). On 7 at 11:15. All about man-eating plants.

To Die in Paris (XX). On 6 at 11:20. See earlier in the evening for details.

Sandra (XX). On 8 at 11:30. A well-directed but somewhat morbid tale of a decadent Italian family with Claudia Cardinale and Jean Sorel.

Flight of the Lost Balloon (X). On 4 at 11:45. A little science fiction and an even smaller plot with Marshall Thompson and Mala Powers.

Ambush Ray (X). On 2 at 12:15. A routine Second World War story with Mickey Rooney and Hugh O'Brian.

Sunday

The Pill Caper (X). On 8 at 11 a.m., and 6 at 2:30. Compilation of episodes from the 1966 TV series Mr. Terrific.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (XX). On 11 at 2:30. The Shirley Temple "classic" — 1938 vitage.

Angel and the Badman of the early West is helped by a family of Quakers when he falls wounded on their doorstep. Lots of action and fine scenery and it stars John Wayne and Gail Russell.

The War Lord (XXX). On 7 at 4:30. Colorful tale of action and romance in 11th Century Normandy with Charlton Heston and Richard Boone.

Teacher's Pet (XXX). On 11 at 6. Rollicking comedy about a gruff city editor (Clark Gable) who chases a journalism instructor (Doris Day).

The Sand Pebbles (XXX). On 7 at 7:30. Conclusion of the 1966 adventure-drama televised last week with Steve McQueen, Richard Crenna and Richard Attenborough.

No Way to Treat A Lady XX) on 4 at 9. Rod Steiger has a field day in this 1968 black comedy about a Broadway producer with a passion for murdering lonely women. Filmed on location in New York, and excellent supporting cast includes George Segal, Lee Remick and Eileen Heckart.

Come Fly With Me (XX). On 12 at 9. The lives and loves of three airline stewardesses with Dolores Hart and Hugh O'Brian.

Sandra (XX). On 6 at 11:20.

Casbah (XX). On 4 at 11:45. See Saturday for details.

Honeymoon (X). On 2 at 11:45. A somewhat uninspiring comedy with Shirley Temple and Franchot Tone.

Casbah (XX). On 4 at 11:15. A tale of a jewel thief who hides out in the infamous section of Algiers with Yvonne De Carlo and Tony Martin.

The Shrike (XXXX). On 7 at Midnight. A powerful version of the Joseph Kramm tale about a man (Jose Ferrer) driven to the brink of ruin by his domineering wife (June Allyson).

Monday

Sitting Pretty (XXX) On 4 at 9 a.m. A suave and sophisticated stranger (Clifton Webb) is hired as a baby-sitter by a young couple (Robert Young and Maureen O'Hara.)

Simba (XXX) On 6 and 8 at 12:45. Jungle drama with a strong cast including Dirk Bogarde, Virginia McKena and Basil Sidney.

Backtrack (XX) On 7 at 3:30. Well integrated 'bits-and-pieces' from TV's The Virginian and Laredo with Neville Brand and Doug McLure.

I Take This Oath (X) On 13 at 5. Routine crime-drama.

The Bliss of Mrs. Blossom (XXX) On 12 at 8:30. Fine acting highlights this comedy about a London housewife (Shirley McLaine) who keeps a lover in her attic.

Kill a Dragon (X) On 5 at 9. Adventure in Hong Kong with Jack Palance.

Easy to Wed (XXX) On 4 at 11. A comedy about a lady who tries to sue a newspaper for libel with Van Johnson, Lucille Ball and Esther Williams.

Has Anybody Seen My Gal? (XX) On 7 at 11:30. A fair musical with Piper Laurie and Rock Hudson.

My Forbidden Past (XX). On 2 at 11:50. In New Orleans during the 1890's, a wealthy heiress schemes to win back her ex-fiance with Robert Mitchum and Ava Gardner.

The Young Warriors (XX) On 8 at Midnight. Second World War drama with James Drury.

Black Widow (XXX) On 12 at 1:05. Murder and drama with Ginger Rogers, Van Heflin and Gene Tierney.

Tuesday

The Girl From Jones Beach (XX) On 4 at 9 a.m. Comedy with Ronald Regan and Virginia Mayo.

McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force (XX) On 6 and 8 at 12:45. Tim Conway and Joe Flynn.

The Far Out West (XX) On 7 at 3:30. Comedy culled from TV's Pistols and Petticoats.

Men On Her Mind (X) On 13 at 5. Poor drama.

Suddenly Single (XXX) On 4 at 8:30. A thoughful drama about one man's cautious search for a new mate after a recent divorce. Excellent cast with Hal Holbrook, Barbara Rush, Margot Kidder and Agnes Moorehead.

Danger, Women at Work (X) On 13 at 11. Comedy.

Pillars of the Sky (XX) On 7 at 11:30. Mediocre western with Jeff Chandler.

Bedlam (XXX) On 2 at 11:50. Well-made tale of a young woman who tries to reform the conditions in mental institutions of 17th Century England with Brois Karloff, Anna Lee, and Jason Robards, Sr.

Bullet for a Badman (XX) On 6 and 8 at Midnight. Another Audie Murphy western.

The Restless Breed (XX) On 12 at 1:05. Rountine western with a totally wasted performance by Anne Bancroft.

Wednesday

WEEK'S SPECIALS

Sunday

Children's Special, on 9 at 5: Mr. Smith and Other Nonsense. A child's-eye-view of the world is offered in this award winning blend of whimsical poetry and animation. Children's author William Jay Smith (Typewriter Town) reads "nonsense" verse about childhood fantasies against a moving background of fanciful creatures.

Drama Special, on 2 and 6 at 9: The Four-Day Wonder, a zany comedy with a science-fiction twist. The Willoughbys have no mention of allowing local land developers to tear down their charming old neighborhood for high-rise apartments. They plan to fight City Hall and they have just the weapon: 9-year-old Clarence's "magic disappearer" zapping gun.

Ed Sullivan, on 7 at 9. A Really Big Show is just like old times—Sunday night with Sullivan. Ed, with 90 minutes of film clips, recalls 23 years of show-stoppers. Songs: Elvis Presley—from the waist up—singing Hound Dog; the Beatles (All My Lovin', Yesterday, Ticket to Ride); Judy Garland (Smile); Petula Clark (Downtown); James Brown; pianist Van Coburn; Englebert Humperdinck; Tom Jones; Janis Joplin; Diana Ross and the Supremes; and Dionne Warwicke.

Philadelphia Folk Festival, on 9 at 10. John Hartford's Gentle on My Mind, John Denver's Wooden Indian and Doc Watson's Sweet Georgia Brown are the stand-out numbers in this concluding program form the 1970 Philadelphia Folk Festival.

Monday

Music Special, on 9 at 8. Sessions with two artists in the pop-rock field: Cat Stevens and Leon Russel. 1. Thirty minutes with singer-composer Cat Stevens, who does his hit Wild World, as well as Moonshadow, Hard-headed Woman and Miles from Nowhere. 2. Blues-rock from Leon Russel in an unrehearsed hour originally telecast on the Homewood series. Highlights: Delta Lady, Song for You, Honky-Tonk Woman, Prince of Peace, Emily. (90 min.)

Tuesday

All-Star Circus, on 5 at 8:30. One of the greatest shows in Europe—Copenhagen's Circus Benneweis—since 1885 a showcase for top international acts. Tonight ... drama on the high trapeze as a lady perfroms the classic triple sommersault (the Humor Family); plate spinning par excellence by Eric Brenn; swaaypole comedy 70 feet in the air (Fattini); horses in a graceful show of precision (Diana Benneweis and Claus Jespersen); showmanship in the tiger cage (Taras Bulva, taped in Italy). Between acts, host Ed McMahon dons grease paint and costume to clown it up with England's acclaimed Jocko.

Wednesday

Men at Lunenberg, on 2 and 6 at 8, is a portrait of the Men of Lunenberg who for generations have gone down to the sea in wooden sailing trawlers to catch swordfish. The older men reminisce about life at sea and friends who have been lost, and discuss their changing lifestyle now that most swordfish are contaminated and cannot be sold. The young people of Lunenberg talk about their hopes for the future, their feelings about their town and the role of drugs in their lives. Also: trip on the Frances Geraldine, the last of the working sailing trawlers.

Adventurs Special, on 2 and 6 at 10. The days of the Caribou gold rush are re-created in The Gold Seekers, a documentary about the adventurers who flocked to British Columbia in the early 1860s to seek their fortunes. Readings from the diaries of six miners reveal the hardships and loneliness of life far from city comforts. Cameras follow the arduous Caribou trail into the gold fields and visit the restored town of Barkerville, pioneer mining community. Narrator: Robert Clothier.

Thursday

Here Comes the Electric Company, on 5 at 7:30, is a children's special from the people who brought you Sesame Street ... a preview of a new series designed to teach reading skills to children aged 7-10. (It debuts Monday, Oct. 25 at 11 A.M., Ch. 5.) Like Sesame Street, Electric Company teaches by entertaining; it's a fast-paced grab bag of multimedia techniques, slapstick, music, animation and computer graphics. Bill Cosby and Rita Moreno are in the seven-member repertory troupe.

60 Minutes, on 7 and 12 at 8. Mike Wallace and Moreley Safer host this prime-time edition of the CBS newsmagazine. (Beginning October 31, the series returns to its Sunday, 6 p.m. slot.)

CBS Reports, on 7 and 12 at 9. Ambitious documentaries on Picasso and the Chicano movement are featured in the first of a monthly two-hour series. 1. "Picasso is 90" celebrates the master's birthday four days early. Executive producer Burton Benjamin canvassed museums throughout the world for footage of his best paintings, sculpture and photographs. The feature traces Picasso's life from childhood into old age, recalls his women and assays his politics. 2. Chicano grievances are aired in a Los Angeles segment. Correspondent Hughes Rudd interviews members of the Chicano movement, political and religious leaders, and police officials. Also: footage of the August 1970 riot in which three Chicanos were killed.

TV Urged to Be Self Critical

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke (R—Mass.), thinks broadcasters should criticize each other's performances.

"Why doesn't NBC criticize what and how CBS and ABC are doing their job — and vice-versa," Brooke said in a Friday speech to the Massachusetts Broadcasters' Association.

"What commandment, what canon, what etiquette-imperative keeps you in the news media silent about each other's foibles?" Brooke asked.

"Breaking that sound-sight-print barrier would be a revolutionary stride toward the kind of fully informed American citizen which the patriots in Philadelphia opted for when they framed the words of the first amendment," he said.

Broadening his challenge to the news media in general, Brooke said "a falsehood, bad editorial judgment, or slanted news coverage is best corrected by one's journalistic rivals and peers.

"It is in this area, in my judgment, where all the media have failed to reach anything like full potential."

Brooke told the broadcasters "you have a vital watchdog role to perform and you would better serve the public if you barked — and even 'bit' — each other now and then."

He said "as these comments may have suggested, the vice president and I drastically differ on what is wrong with the communications industry in this country.

"My objection is to blandness, sameness, homogenization of the news — the unwillingness for example, of the networks to take on each other as well as the other titans in American life.

"By all means, print and speak facts and opinions about the politics and policies of senators and government at every level," Brooke said.

But if we are to really have what Elmer Davis advocated so eloquently — a third dimension in news coverage — the why as well as the who, what, when — your critical rule must extend to your brethren in the fourth estate."

Behind Scenes With 'The Man's' Girl

By MIMI MEAD
TV Time Staff Writer

NEW YORK — One of the most interesting people in ABC's new series, The Man and the City, is the Man's executive secretary Marian Crane, or Mala Powers.

Mala has been acting since she was eight years old. She is an author of children's books. She is an authority on the Mexican jumping bean. She was, at one time the world's youngest diving champion. She is attractive, intelligent and an expert at juggling many things at one time, such as the new series, a relatively new marriage and being the mother of a 14-year-old boy.

"I took on the role of Marian for several reasons," she explained. "I wanted to work with Tony." (Anthony Quinn plays Mayor Alcala, the Man of The Man and the City.) "I worked with him once before, in the film City Beneath the Sea with Robert Ryan, and I loved it. That was one reason.

"The other was that it was six blocks from our house," she added with a smile, "which sounds like it doesn't mean much, but in this crazy business it makes a great difference.

DEBUT AT 16

"Then too I have a 14-year-old son, and we're very close and if he wants to see me he can hop on his bike and come over. And I work only three days out of the six. They can call for more, but they have to pay me for more; and the way their minds work," she said wryly, "if they call me then they'll use me, and I won't have to just sit around. I didn't want to work a six-day week."

Mala, the daughter of a newspaperman and a drama coach, made her professional debut on radio at the age of 16, studied at UCLA with the legendary Michael Chekhov (she is now executrix of his estate) and made her movie debut in Outrage, directed by Ida Lupino. To the public, however, one of her most memorable roles was as Roxanne in Cyrano de Bergerac with Jose Ferrer.

Looking back on that, Mala said thoughtfully, "I couldn't enjoy doing Roxanne in that it was the most prestigious picture I ever made and a great break for me. From the point of view of having fun, no, it was not my favorite picture. It was too awing. It was a classic, after all. As far as parts are concerned, I suppose Outrage was my favorite."

Not surprisingly for someone who studied with Chekhov, Mala prefers theatre work to movies, and is on the West Coast Board of Directors of ANTA.

"I prefer doing what I want to do on stage, that is," she added, smiling. "All those things are conditional and relative. If it isn't exactly what I want to do, then I suppose I'd rather do it in a film than eight times a week on the stage."

Mala has worked out an acceptable working-commuting arrangement with her husband, publisher M. Hughes Miller whom she married 17 months ago. He works out of New York and commutes back and forth across the country. "I used to commute a lot more with him," Mala said ruefully, "but I can't now with the series. He does a lot more travelling than I wish he did.

YOU ADAPT

"He's wonderful about it, though. My husband understood thoroughly when we first met that I was not going to be able to stay at home and be a lady of leisure and travel all over the world with him at the drop of a hat. I'm not a women's lib lady by any means, but I do have my own needs.

"I've never been a quarreller with destiny. What destiny throws your way, you accept and make the best of that you can. So if he were suddenly transferred to North Africa I would go with him, of course, and try to make the best of it. But I would probably end up giving acting classes to the natives," she added with a twinkle. "You adapt. You do the best you can."

Mala Powers plays secretary to the mayor

Mala met her husband at a party several years ago. "I had written a children's book and he was then vice president of Bobbs Merrill (Children's book publishers) and we got into a terrible argument. It was a literary party and they were taping it for a radio program, and we argued right along on the air.

"Then we sent each other Christmas cards for several years. I didn't see him for years and then I wrote another children's book, about Mexican jumping beans, and I thought, 'Well, I'll open up this old publishing contact again.' And I did and we were eventually married, but we are still always arguing about children's books!"

Mala has guested on innumerable TV shows, but has only once been on a series regularly. "I was the next door neighbor the last year of 'Hazel.' It was a great part because you didn't have to have all the virtues of the heroines. I was selfish, I was thoughtless and I was also very funny sometimes.

"So I am used to doing a series. I think the Man and the City would interfere with my personal life as little as any series. The role of Marian doesn't leave room for a lot of characterization, but some. I grew up with Michael Chekhov, who said that it's so uninteresting to do nothing. You must make some characterization of any part, no matter what. So, I've tried to work out some differences between the character and me, just to keep interested."

Mala Powers is a fortunate combination of an extremely feminine woman who is able to fulfill herslf outside her private life. "It's because of my husband, really. He's very sympathetic with my need to work and have self-expression. He says he's very grateful in having been in a field all his life where he could express himself, and he wouldn't deny that to someone he loves.

"You know," she added warmly, "I think men have it so rough. People are always talking about women's lib these days, but men are told so young what it means to be a man and what they must do. I remember once in the superamrket when he was very small my son was crying, and some old biddy came up and said something about being a little man. I could have killed her. Why shouldn't men be allowed to express their feelings as women are?

"Working with Tony (Quinn) is great, you know. He's got great vitality. I think in many ways there's a similarity between my husband and Tony, not as people but as types, in the sense that they're both terribly intense, rather volatile people. I have come to understand them, as some people don't and I didn't either when I was younger.

"I mean, they can get terribly excited or explosive, and then five minutes later they won't remember anything about it. Now, I've never had that experience with Tony," she added grinning, "but I know that he is that same, vital, explosive type.

"One thing I do know: it's a type that I like very much."

Having struck a working balance between the series and her home life, Mala says she has every intention of continuing to act on the stage.

"Acting in repertory every night, for instance, I think would be injurious to my marriage. It might not be to everybody's but it would be to mine. But to do a play, say for eight months every two or three years would be fun. I'd like that.

"And undoubtedly I'll write more children's books. It's a great interest of mine. I'm editing one at the moment, and I couldn't imagine not writing more." And so on she goes, juggling motherhood, the series, acting, running a home and marriage — and undoubtedly arguing about children's books with her husband.

Shirley's World a Disappointing One

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Shirley MacLaine has much to offer television but her first series, Shirley's World (ABC) is a thudding, painfully disappointing show. In the early episodes, the scenery is the star.

Perhaps we expected too much. Shirley is now 37, an author with a good book to her credit, an impressive list of film credits and a career that reads like a fable made from spun sugar.

MacLAINE
. . . poor showing

This is the girl who was born in Richmond, Va., and grew up in Arlington, where her life revolved around ballet. In her autobiography, Don't Fall Off The Mountain (Bantam Books), Shirley describes her "Lonely Life" as a teen-ager, catching a bus for high school at 6:30 a.m. and often not returning home from ballet class until 1:30 the following morning.

As Shirley recalls in her autobiography: "My dinner usually was saltine crackers smothered in ketchup and tabasco, and with them, a quart of ginger ale. I always ate standing up, and then I'd stagger to bed, rarely before 2 o'clock. Not surprisingly, my snacks produced nightmares, and the nightmares were always the same: Night after night I missed the bus."

After graduation Shirley went to New York and the spun-sugar fable began. She was understudying Carol Haney in Pajama Game and Carol broke an ankle. Shirley went on, was offered a movie contract and wound up as a star in Alfred Hitchcock's The Trouble With Harry. She was 20 years old.

'RING-A-DING'

She got to Hollywood and earned a reputation as a "real ring-a-ding." She became the mascot of Frank Sinatra's clan and the word used most often to describe her was "kooky." She was on the cover of Time Magazine, which decided she was the "brightest face, freshest character . . . in Hollywood."

She was nominated four times for an Academy Award and four times the award went to some other nominee. She made many movies; some were excellent and many of them were bad. She took to roaming the world, turning up with a civil rights group in the American South, in Africa and in the Far East. Her husband, Steve Parker, settled in Japan. Her 14-year-old daughter, Stephanie Sachiok, is in school in Switzerland.

Shirley has often been called "a free spirit." Of her husband, who has become a successful film and theatrical producer, she told one interviewer: "We have a very deep friendship."

She wasn't paid much money during the first nine years she worked in movies. She had a long-term contract with producer Hal Wallis and Shirley describes him this way: "He had a very special feeling for his forty-odd million. He couldn't bear to part with a dime of it."

Throughout her career Shirley played a long collection of brainless floozies. She described herself as the ". . . prize doormat. Name me a victim. I've played her, or I can, especially if she has a few laughs."

NEW FREEDOM

She was supposed to have a new kind of freedom when she agreed 18 months ago to make a TV series, along with feature motion pictures. She was to have a piece of the action and the veteran Sheldon Leonard was to be executive producer of her TV series.

Leonard is a marvellous man; perhaps the most intelligent producer in film work. But he has had a long string of losers in TV. Situation comedy looks easy on paper, and it is one kind of program that is done best on TV. But it is also a fragile commodity and the failures have far outnumbered the successes.

In this one, Shirley Maclaine as "Shirley Logan" is a photographer who gets assignments that take her all over the world. This is supposed to provide a frame for drama, comedy and romance. It also provides travel, to which Miss Maclaine is addicted.

So far, fine. But ABC-TV scheduled the series at 9:30 p.m. on Wednesdays. This put the half-hour comedy against the final portions of Medical Centre (CBS) and NBC Mystery Movie. To compete in such a time period, Shirley's World needed to be a truly distinctive series, a powerhouse attraction. It isn't.

There is much to admire in Shirley Maclaine, particularly after reading an autobiography that is searching, absorbing and written with a lack of pretense that is remarkable in a first book. But there isn't a thing to admire about a TV series called Shirley's World.

TV Ad Men Squeamish Over Buffalo Slaughter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Stan Freberg, the funniest man in advertising, and Stanley Kramer, a sober-sided movie-maker, are united in outrage over refusal of networks to run a commercial for Kramer's new film.

It was Freberg who coined the catch-phraise "Funnier than 'Cleopatra for Kramer's 'It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," triggering an uproar in Hollywood.

He was accused of kicking Darryl Zanuck when he was down because Cleopatra almost capsized the 20th Century-Fox.

Now it is with righteous wrath that Freberg-Kramer find themselves locked out of television advertising for Bless The Beasts and Children. The picture deals with a group of children attempting to save a buffalo herd. It's message is humanitarian and ecological.

In his usual oblique approach Freberg filmed a one-minute commercial to hypo the movie on the tube. Its theme is anti-violence.

All three local censors of NBC, CBS and ABC refused to run it.

"You know why," cried Freberg, his voice trembling with emotion, "They said it was too violent.

"All we had on it was a stock shot of a bunch of buffalo being slaughtered. It's not as if we set up the scene. It's a very old one."

The commercial opens on a talk show with an actor representing The American Gun Cult Assn. Condemning Bless The Beasts and The Children because it is a vicious attack on American hunters, "Just because we like to shot us a few buffalo now and then."

When another performer accuses the buffalo hunter of slaughter, he reacts by identifying the "bleeding hearts" as suffering from "the bambi syndrome."

Freberg plays the commercial for pure satire as the hunter concludes: "I wouldn't let my kids see 'Bless the Beasts and Children' . . . not unless I wanted 'em to grow up hating guns."

Network censors, not particularly known for high humor, said the spot commercial made it appear to be part of a news program, made reference to a private organization (The National Rifle Assn.) and that the buffalo scenes were too violent.

"I called one of the censors and said that our commercial was in better taste although more violent than the one of a man riding a boat in the tank of a commode," Freberg said.

"The man very seriously informed me it wasn't violent. Then I asked him what would happen if someone flushed the commode by mistake. You know what that guy said? He said, 'Then it would be violent.' "

Freberg and Kramer have the American Humane Association on their side with a letter stating the movie is humanitarian. It also is rated for general audiences.

Satirist Freberg and producer-director Kramer said network censors suffer "The Little Old Lady from Pasadena Syndrome."

JIMMY STEWART'S 'WIFE'

Julie Adams' 1st TV Series

By DAN LEWIS
TV Time Staff Writer

NEW YORK — Back in 1952, Julie Adams won the role of Jimmy Stewart's leading lady in Bend in the River. When the film was completed, she and Stewart went separate ways, and never saw each other again until last June, even though they both lived in the same town all that time.

Now they're back together, as the husband and wife in Stewart's first television series. In fact, it's also Julie's first TV series.

Now married to actor Ray Danton, mother of two sons, eight and 14, Julie has the credibility of her experience as a mother, but playing the role opposite Stewart in this series presented some complications. She may have two sons of her own, but in the series she's a two-generation mother of a 28-year-old son, as well as an eight-year-old.

STILL YOUNG

"They told me at first I looked too young for the role," Julie recalled as we talked about it during an interview in Hollywood. "I went to the test feeling I wouldn't get the job, but I figured it would be a very nice day working with Mr. Stewart.

"But things are changing," she continued. "There are young grandmothers. And youth alone does not retain young looks. Look at Alexis Smith (long-ago movie star who made a dramatic leap to Broadway stardom in Follies) making the cover of Time doing a high kick. She's as young-looking, beautiful and trim today as she was 20 years ago.

Very little effort, in fact, has been made to age Julie. Her hair has been shortened only slightly, and she uses only a minimum of make-up.

"I have a very close friend who is a little older and has children in their 20s. I looked at her, observed her for a time and tried to pick out the mannerisms. She's a happy person, and her family is alive."

It is ironic that Julie's career, after time out while she raised a family, is beginning to re-emerge in two consecutive prominent roles, both casting her as a mother of older children then she herself has.

Before joining Stewart in his series, Julie spent three weeks in Peru on location with Dennis Hopper's recently released film, The Last Movie. She plays a jazzy-type mother whose daughter is in her 20s.

"I found it exciting, working with Hopper," Julie declared. "It was an unusual experience. A lot of it was improvisational. There was a structure, a screenplay, but so much of it was created as we went along."

Her immediate concern, however, is the Jimmy Stewart Show every Sunday night on NBC. The early ratings were not encouraging as the show got caught between the powerhouse films on the new CBS movie series on Sundays and the second half of the long-running FBI series on ABC.

Julie hopes the series will catch on the way so many of the family situation series have on TV.

"The country is in such a turmoil, people are longing to see happy families, and warm comedy on television," she said. "We do have a good time slot for capturing the family audiences with Disney as our lead-in show."

Disney and the Jimmy Stewart Show on NBC is the alternative to those looking for light entertainment now on Sundays. The rest of the programming is two movies (CBS at 7:30 and ABC at 9) or adventure drams such as Bonanza, and Bold Ones on NBC, Cade's County on CBS following its movies, and The FBI preceeding ABC's film at 9.

Firms Sue Cosby For $2.4 Million

BOSTON (UPI) — A breach of contract suit seeking $2.4 million in damages from comedian Bill Cosby has been filed in U.S. District Court.

An attorney for the plaintiffs disclosed the action Monday and also said a writ of attachment against Cosby's new farm in Shelborne has been filed at the Franklin County Registry of Deeds.

Bringing the suit were Acrite Industries and Frigidtemp Coep., both of New York, and Richard Packing Corp. of Minnesota. They claimed an agreement was made with Cosby to set up a national chain of franchise restaurants bearing his name.

After an initial investment of $100,000 each, the suit said, Cosby refused to allow his name to be used.

The entertainer has moved to Western Massachusetts to do graduate work at the University of Massachusetts school of education.

TV SPECIAL MARKS PICASSO'S 90TH BIRTHDAY

Picasso Is 90 and Chicano, two major CBS News documentary broadcasts, are part of the special three-hour all-news programming scheduled for Oct. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

The two hour-long features will be broadcast as the premiere of CBS Reports from 9-10 p.m. and 10-11 p.m., respectively. They will be preceded by a special edition of 60 Minutes, 8-9 p.m., on the Network.

The first documentary, Picasso Is 90, is an intimate portrait of one of the world's most famous artists and a retrospective of his life's work — his revolutionary impact on other artists, as well as his work's social and political implications. It will also highlight the artist's life from his early years in his native Spain to his later years in France.

Chicano, the second part of the CBS Reports premiere, is an examination of the rapidly growing movement of young militant Mexican-Americans. Focusing on Los Angeles, which has the largest concentration of people of Mexican descent outside of Mexico itself, Chicano will measure the influence of the movement since its inception.

CBS news chief foreign correspondent Charles Collingwood will be the reporter on Picasso Is 90, which will be broadcast four days before the master celebrates this birthday milestone.

"This broadcast will encompass a lifetime of living and work by one of the world's living legends," says Burton Benjamin, executive producer of the broadcast. "It will trace his life style from childhood into old age; it will offer a panorama of his work; it will recall his women, and it will assay his politics. It will involve everything that has made Picasso the man he is."

Appearing on the broadcast will be Picasso's son Claude; Sir Roland Penrose, an old friend and official biographer; William Rubin of the Museum of Modern Art in New York; Dominguin, the famous Spanish bullfighter and one of the master's closest friends, and Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler, Picasso's art dealer.

Among Picasso's great works to be included in the broadcast will be his paintings, sculptures and photographs, reflecting each of his major periods. These were filmed in locales throughout the world, including the Pushkin Museum in Moscow, the Mermitage Museum in Leningrad, the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum in New York and the Chicago Institute of Art.

Speaking of Chicano, CBS news correspondent Hughes Rudd, reporter on the broadcast, says, "In a country grown increasingly sensitive to the cries for dignity and opportunity from its minorities, Mexican-Americans have touched us the least. Their cries have not lit the fires of outrage in the hearts of most reform-minded Americans."

Discussing the grievances of the Mexican-American community, and the steps taken to alleviate them, are members of the Chicano movement, state and local political, law enforcement and religious leaders and Mexican-Americans themselves, some of whom oppose the actions of the young militants.

TOP COUNTRY SINGER

Ex-Baseball Hopeful An Opry Hit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I remember when I used to pick cotton and listen to the Grand Ole Opry," Charley Pride said. "I wasn't expecting this."

The one-time Mississippi farmhand, one of the few Negro country singers, was the only double winner Sunday night in the annual Country Music Association awards presentation.

Pride, a native of Sledge, Miss., who turned to country music after an ill-starred fling at professional baseball, was named Entertainer of the Year and Male Vocalist of the Year.

Oddly, the awards had their roots in a long bus ride Pride took in 1964 from Helena, Mont., to St. Petersburg, Fla. He had hopes of catching on with the New York Mets baseball team.

When he reached St. Petersburg, he asked Mets general manager George Weiss and manager Casey Stengel for a tryout as a pitcher and outfielder.

The two Mets officials huddled, Pride recalls, and he heard Stengel say: "We ain't runnin' no tryout camp."

"I picked up my bats and headed to Nashville," Pride said.

"I had been doing some singing in clubs in Montana and folks were always telling me I should go to Nashville and get in country music."

His first recording came to the attention of Chet Atkins, a long-time country and western music star, and Atkins signed Pride to an RCA contract.

Since then, Pride has recorded such country hits as Kiss an Angel Good Morning and Is Anybody Goin' to San Anton?

"I still have three of the bats," the 35-year-old Pride said, "but I believe I swing a song and a guitar much better."

Lynn Anderson, who recorded Rose Garden, was Female Vocalist of the Year. The top duo was Dolly Parton and Porter Wagoner while the Osborne Brothers were the Group of the Year.

The Instrumental Group of the Year, for the third straight year, was Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass. Jerry Reed was Instrumentalist of the Year.

Art Satherly, 80, Columbia Records pioneer who first worked in the recording business with Thomas A. Edison, was selected for induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

In record categories, the Single of the Year went to Sammi Smith for her Help Me Make It Through the Night. Easy Lovin' by Freddie Hart was Song of the Year and I Won't Mention It Again by Ray Price was the Album of the Year.

The winners were chosen by 2,700 performers and other music industry-affiliated persons across the country. The awards were presented at the Grand Ole Opry before a television audience.

'ENTERTAINMENT SPECIALIST'

Ron Eckstine Carries on Tradition

A son of Billy Eckstine figures to become a musician. But Ron Eckstine almost didn't.

As a Los Angeles high schooler, the handsome 23-year-old son of the fabulous Mr. B of jazz song fame was such a talented football player that college scholarship offers poured in. And they were tempting for a while.

"But, after thinking about all those hard knocks," Eckstine explains, "I decided that there had to be a better future for me."

Eckstine and his four brothers were exposed to music from infancy, though their famous father never made a point of encouraging their interest. Billy's approach was more subtle. His Christmas gifts to his growing sons usually were musical instruments.

As a result, Ron became a gifted guitarist, plays the bass and sings with his own group, The Spicegarden, which soon will make its nightclub debut in Hollywood. Concurrently, he is polishing an acting career and plays a rock drummer in an episode of Cannon, the new adventure series starring William Conrad, to be broadcast Oct. 19 (9:30-10:30 p.m.) on CBS.

Young Eckstine is pursuing musical and acting careers simultaneously because he believes that the entertainment world of today demands more diversified talent than in the past.

"I say that I specialize in entertainment, rather than music or acting," he notes.

Being the son of a famous father can have its disadvantages, Ron admits. "Some people have preconceived notions about you that are wrong. My father has been very cool about it. He believes that the musical background is most important of all, and he has never consciously attempted to further my career. At the same time he is a good critic and suggests ways to improve."

With dramatic training from the famed character actress, Lillian Randolph, under his belt, Ron made his motion picture debut in The Love-Ins with James MacArthur and Richard Todd and since has appeared in the television feature, Shadow on the Land, with Jackie Cooper and on television in Room 222.

Small Town Look For BBC

BROOKLYN, Conn. (CP-AP) The BBC is coming to this rural community to record small-town American democracy in action.

The British films crew will be on hand for the town meeting.

The subject of the meeting: What to do about tent moth caterpillars.

Jimmy Stewart's Show a Loser

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jimmy Stewart enjoys the affection of almost everyone, in and out of show business, yet his new television show is an expensive bust.

Can it be that Stewart's debut as a series star is symptomatic of movie stars invading the tube?

Shirley MacLaine, Glenn Ford, Anthony Quinn, Tony Curtis and Rock Hudson, to name other film stars-turned-video-regulars, are not setting the world on fire either.

It may be that The Jimmy Stewart Show faces formidable opposition from The FBI and some powerful movies. Perhaps it takes time for a new series to catch on.

Whatever the reason, Stewart is baffled.

"I thought the series was a good idea," he said. "It has a good storyline. Henry Fonda helped influence me to do it, and there weren't any particularly exciting movie scripts in the future.

"But the ratings aren't good and I don't know why."

Stewart plays a whimsical college professor with a 19-year-old son and an 8-year-old son. He struggles with the generation gap and minor campus adventures.

Stewart agreed that the very basis of the series may be at fault.

First, the show takes place on a campus. Viewers think of Kent State and Berkeley and shy away from Academe. Second, Professor Stewart bridges the generation gap among his sons. Viewers have had the generation gap up to here.

Thirdly, The FBI has been in the top 10 ratings almost since Dillinger was Public Enemy No. 1.

That's three strikes before Stewart emerges from the dugout.

The No. 1 teleivsion show in the ratings, "all in the Family, features a bigot who dynamites bridges over the generation gap and who considers a college campus the no-man's land of the Third World War.

Viewers tune it in because Archie Bunker and clan don't communicate, are incapable of resolving problems and poke fun at precisely the decent God-fearing folk Stewart and family represent.

Vaguely, Jimmy Stewart is aware of this fact. Aware and confused.

"I wanted to play a fuddy-duddy," he said. "I like to work and always have. Making movies has always been a joy. I loved it. And I like making the show. NBC and Warner Bros. are great and they're giving us fine quality."

But Jimmy is thinking about his parts in Harvey, No Highway In The Sky, Mr. Hobbs Takes A Vacation and other gentle roles in films.

"Maybe I waited a year or two too long to get into television," he said, reflecting. "I'm new to TV and the ratings. I know that we've given it a good try."

"If this show doesn't make it I have no one to blame but myself."

Stewart is being magnanimous. He remains the super actor he always was. Apparently college campuses, gentle professors and generation gaps are a bad video scene. And that's not Stewart's fault.

TV Examines People on Move

Millions of Canadians were on the move this past summer, some in grand style, others by thumb and packsack.

On Oct. 19, at 10 p.m. CBC-TV's Tuesday Night examines two styles of travellers by way of contrast — elderly people on a guided bus tour through the Maritimes, and young boys and girls who often lived by wits alone as they hitch-hiked across the West in search of adventure and knowledge.

The program is titled The Divided Highway. Producer Don McQueen explains that although the two styles of travel appeared completely different, there was a strong element of dependency in both.

"At first, it seemed that a hitch-hiker's method of travel was utterly independent. He's on his own. But that's not true, because the hitcher's rides depended completely on the whim of the car driver who chose to pick him up. His sleeping place was organized by the government or other groups and he was fed. There were many exceptions, of course, since hitchers often carried sleeping bags and bought their own food if they had money.

"What we found is that hitchers didn't see as much of the country at all, since most spent their time in between rides, sitting on the edge of the highway, getting tired and grimy," says producer McQueen.

A Winnipeg social worker saw the annual trek by our young people as a form of "puberty rite" for a generation trying to create its own depression experience. A Prairie city mayor believed government agencies were encouraging youths to become bums.

On the other hand, the elderly bus travellers were guided by Carl Naumoff, who also narrates a large part of the bus segment on the program. Naumoff explains how he tries to weld a group of strangers into a temporary family and to give them a good holiday.

The CBC Tuesday Night crew which filmed the bus segment were soon accepted by the elderly travellers as an added attraction to their holiday.

"The program tries not to judge either group of travellers. Some people will see it and decide that Canada has a fine, older generation and a rotten younger one. Other people will find quite the reverse," says McQueen.

Early Rock Star Dies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jean Vincent, 36, a recording star of the early rock 'n roll era, died at a hospital late Tuesday from hemorrhaging caused by a bleeding ulcer.

Vincent, who appeared with Elvis Presley and co-starred in the movie The Girl Can't Help It with Jayne Mansfield, had four gold records from such hits as Lot a Loving and Wear My Ring.

Vincent is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kye Craddock and three sisters.

Kaye to Film For UNICEF In Manila

MANILA (UPI) — American entertainer Danny Kaye will arrive in Manila Oct. 22 for a two-day visit in the course of a Southeast Asian tour sponsored by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF).

During his stay in Manila, Kaye, as UNICEF'S Goodwill Ambassador will make a feature-length documentary film of UNICEF-assisted projects. The film, intended for information drives around the world, will reflect UNICEF assistance aspects, particularly on nutrition, health and better education among the world's children.
